The Prussian Chambers were closed last week without any flourish of trumpets, but in a sober and business-like manner, by the President of each House reading the Royal commission and proposing three cheers for the King, who is not at Berlin, but on the Rhine. But there are other indications of the approach of the dead season, and the only cloud on the political horizon is the unsettled state of France and the dangers resulting from it. But if the French are mad enough to provoke war a second time they will find the German army equal to the occasion, and even better prepared for offensive or defensive hostilities than was the case in 1870, for though the German press is prohibited from publishing any details on the subject, I am enabled to state on high authority that great activity prevails not only in the War-office at Berlin, but in all the provincial headquarters. It does great credit to the new Minister for the War Department that as soon as the late squabble about the numerical force of the peace establishment was finally settled, he did not let the grass grow under his feet, but issued his orders the very next day, not only for the new organisation of the peace establishment, but also with reference to the reserve forces and the Landwehr. A great improvement in the arming of the infantry has to be recorded; the old Zundnadel-Gewehr or needle gun, which has done good service for more than thirty years, and particularly in the revolutionary war of 1848, the two wars with Denmark, the short campaign of 1866—called the seven days' war—in Bohemia, and the memorable war with France in 1870, is now superseded by an invention made by an artillery officer of the name of Mauser, and named after him. As soon as a batch is got ready it is distributed to the different regiments, that the men may accustom themselves to the new weapon, which is described as being greatly superior in its effects to the needle gun as an arm of precision and for rapidity of firing as well as simplicity of construction and ease of loading. I am to-day enabled to announce that the whole of the needle guns have been sold to the Chinese Government, and will be delivered up and shipped off in the same proportion as the Arsenals are able to furnish the German army with the new Mauser gun. At the same time the Government has concluded a contract with Herr von Carsten-Lichterfelde, who undertakes the purchase of old ordnance and other artillery stores for nine million reichsmarks, subject to the approval of Government as to the re-sale on his part.

The negotiations for greater postal facilities between Germany and British India, alluded to in my last letter as having been opened at Berlin, have been concluded in the most satisfactory manner, and a convention was signed on the 9th inst. by the German Postmaster-General, and Mr. Monteath on the part of the Indian Government, and after due ratification on both sides is to come into operation on the 1st January next. The postage for a single letter from any part of Germany to any part of India will be reduced to six groschens if prepaid, and eight groschens unpaid.

Captain Baron von Schleinitz, of the German navy, hitherto employed in a civil department of the Admiralty, is appointed to the command of the screw corvette Gazelle, now fitting out at Kiel for the expedition to the South Sea to observe the transit of Venus. Kerguelen Island is the spot fixed on for the erection of the Observatory. The corvette is under orders to leave Kiel on the 1st of July, and after the performance of this service she will proceed to China, where she is to remain on that station for some time. The captain has already left Berlin to commission the Gazelle and superintend her being got ready for sea. When Captain Cook discovered Kerguelen Land, not being aware that it had been previously seen and named by the Dutch navigator whose name it now bears, he called it the Island of Desolation. As it is not inhabited and lies half way between the Cape of Good Hope and Australia, the corvette will have to remain there whilst the observatory is being erected and taken down, and supply the members of the expedition with food and other necessaries during the interval. The German Parliament has fully recognised the importance of the expedition, and made no difficulty about voting the sum of 152,000 reichsmarks to defray the expenses. The scientific members are Dr. Boerger, the director of the Observatory at Wilhelmshaven; the astronomer, Dr. Weineck, a Hungarian by birth; the zoologist, Dr. Studer, of Bern; the photographer Bobzin, and the mechanician Krille, both natives of Mecklenburg. It may be highly interesting and important from a scientific point of view, but from Capt. Cook's description of the island it will be anything but a party of pleasure for the members.

Nothing has yet been decided with regard to the successor of Dr. Roesing as Consul-General at New York. Dr. von der Leyen, who was proposed and warmly recommended by Bremen, and Dr. A. Klauhold, the nominee of Hamburg, have both resigned their pretensions to the appointment, finding but a cool reception at Berlin. It therefore appears that the Foreign-office intend to break through the rule hitherto observed, of deferring to the wishes of Hamburg and Bremen in filling up vacancies in the more important Consulates. The only candidate now in the field is Dr. Schumacher, of Bremen, now Consul-General and Minister Resident at Bogota, in Columbia, who appears to have had enough of his banishment in the wilds of Central America, and though without the support of his native city, is trying by other influence to obtain the vacant appointment. As Dr. Roesing returns nominally with leave of absence for three months, and therefore need not officially tender his resignation till its expiration. it is not probable that anything will be finally settled till late in the summer.

Your readers at Singapore will no doubt be pleased to learn that the former German Consul at that port, Herr Othmar von Mohl, son of the celebrated Professor of State and International Law, and for a long time representative of the Grand Duchy of Baden in the former German Confederation at Frankfort, is now definitively appointed to be the Cabinet Secretary of Her Majesty the Empress of Germany, which office he filled hitherto provisionally. It will be remembered that this gentleman went out last summer as Consul at Singapore, but in consequence of the sudden and unexpected death of Dr. Brandis, the Cabinet Councillor of the Empress, he was recalled to Europe to undertake the duties of that office provisionally, and—as far as I remember—before he had been officially installed in the Consulate. Previous to his appointment at Singapore, Herr von Mohl had been employed for some time in the Consulate-General at New York.

The German corvette Nymphe, just returned from the China station, in passing through the Great Belt on her way to Kiel, got on shore, but was assisted off, and arrived at her destination without having suffered any damage. At the time the accident happened the vessel was in charge of a Danish pilot, so that no blame attaches to the captain or the officer of the watch.

At a special general meeting of the shareholders in the Makler Bank of Hamburg, held in this city last week, it was unanimously resolved to reduce the working capital by one-half, in consequence of which the directors give notice of their readiness to redeem such shares, with 40 per cent. paid up, as may be offered them to that amount, at the rate of 96 per cent., with interest at 5 per cent. per annum. The capital will thus be reduced to 1,000,000 thalers. They further give notice, conformably with the provisions contained in Art. 243 of the German Commercial Code, to all creditors of the bank to send in their outstanding claims for immediate settlement.

Herr Heinrich Barkhausen, Acting Consul for the German Empire at Rangoon, is definitively appointed to be Consul at that port, by patent dated May 11.

COMMERCIAL.

This being holiday time, business is almost totally neglected, and there is but little to report to-day. In the course of last week, however, there was more animation in the Rice market, the prices being low. There is no alteration in the value of Teas, but a fair amount of business was done at former rates, the sales by importers consisting of 1,124/4 chests and 3,474/8 do. of Congou, and 253 packages of Souchong. Cassia Lignea is dull and lower, the quotation being 60 marks to 61 marks; Flores held at 113 marks to 114 marks. A further fall took place in Pepper, when Singapore was offered at 55 marks, Penang at 51 marks to 52 marks, and White at 82 marks to 85 marks; but since then a better feeling prevails, and prices have somewhat recovered, the official quotation now being—Singapore, 57 marks to 58 marks; Penang, 52 marks to 53 marks; and White, 85 marks to 90 marks. Star Annis is in more demand and higher, as the market is almost denuded of the article. Of Oil of Star Annis 20 chests have been sold, the price being in favour of the purchasers. Galanga Root is looking up, and 200 packages ex Formosa have been taken on speculation. About 6,000 centners of Spelter (Schlesischer Verein) have changed hands at 21 marks 80 pf., in loco, which has strengthened the market, and none is now to be had under 22 marks.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, MAY 27.

The May fêtes have at last come to an end, the Orange fever has passed away, public affairs have resumed their usual course, and the King has sought at his beautiful country seat Het Loo a rest from the fatigues of the festival. The fête here was, it must be acknowledged, most splendid, and was indeed the couronnement de l'édifice. A day favoured by the finest spring weather made a happy contrast to that which prevailed at the Hague, where we had what our German neighbours call fatalt Himden wetter. It was arranged that the King should only stay one day in this town, leaving at midnight for Flushing, in order to meet the Czar, on his return from England. Early in the morning the special train arrived from the Hague, and the Royal family was received by the authorities and a large number of ladies. The fête began with a rowing and a sailing match, and in the meanwhile a historical and allegoric procession was organised. After the first stone had been laid by the King for the bridge over the Maese, a grand banquet took place, and in the evening there were fireworks and a general illumination. The whole proceedings were a great success, and midnight had passed before the King left the town, although her Majesty had returned to the Hague in the afternoon. Of course the King also conferred several "decorations" on the municipal authorities, amongst others upon Mr. Tels, the editor of the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant. It creates some surprise here that the East India Army received, in comparison with the home army, so very few marks of Royal distinction; in fact, the first named was almost forgotten. On the proposition of the Minister of the Colonial Department the Generals Van Swieten and Verspyck were promoted respectively to the knighthood of the "Grand Cross" and to the commandership of the "William" Order, but the commander of the fleet stationed in the Atchin waters was quite unnoticed. Captain J. Van Gogh arrived in June, 1873, in the Atchin waters, and commanded from that time the blockading squadron, which numbered in October and November nineteen men-of-war. The general opinion is that he well deserved some mark of the Royal approbation. Last Saturday the official paper, De Staats Courant, announced the resignation of Major-General Verspyck, who retires at his own request. He has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general.

As a practical proof that the government of his present Majesty, William III., has been a prosperous one, I may state that at the time of his accession to the throne our National Debt amounted to f.1,230,000,000, or about f.400 per inhabitant, and that during the last twenty-five years a sum of f.290,000,000 has been paid off, so that the annual interest has decreased from f.36,000,000 to f.27,000,000. The population being in the meanwhile augmented, the debt is only now f. 270 per inhabitant. Let me add that during the period named 1,000 kilometres of railway line have been constructed on account of the State without adding to the debt. I need not say that this enormous financial success is mainly due to the "squeezing" system introduced in Java, and that it is the Javanese who have made our nation a rich one, or literally a less poor one.

I hear that the members of the Second Chamber will re-assemble on the 2nd of June. They should have met this week, but a delay became necessary because the newly appointed Minister of the Naval Department is not yet ready with his Budget (he will have a very hard task to fulfil), whilst the Minister of the Home Department is still busy with his Bill to subsidise private railway undertakings. The last month of the session is not likely to be very fruitful in legislation. Nothing is heard about the Liberal programme, which some time ago was so pompously announced as a basis for the re-union of the Liberal party.

I sincerely regret to record the death of Dr. W. Bosch, ex-inspector of the medical service in Java. He was seventy-six years old, and died at Arnhem. For several years he was one of the warmest opponents of the culture system, and he founded the Society for the Welfare of the Javanese. He was a coeur d'or, a good man in the best sense of the word, willing to sacrifice all he possessed for his convictions. His death is a great loss, and the Javanese will miss a sincere friend.

It creates much surprise that the Government still continues to enlist recruits in Switzerland for the East India army, notwithstanding that our agents are prosecuted by law in that country.

The Japanese Ambassador at St. Petersburg, Enomotto, who, accompanied by two secretaries, has paid a visit of some days' duration to the Hague, returned the day before yesterday to Russia.

Mr. E. Henkensfeldt Slagheg, Dutch Consul at Shanghai and the Yangtsze Ports, has been removed from that post at his own request.

In my last letter I told you that the monetary gift presented by the nation to the King amounted only to the small sum of £15,000. Since it has become known to what purpose it will be applied many subscribers have doubled and trebled their original gift.

The Dutch Trading Company has chartered the following vessels to convey produce from India to Amsterdam:—

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market is firm, and some demand prevails for consumption, so that higher prices have been paid for good ordinary Java. About 2,500 baskets Java and Macassar, of private importation, have changed hands.

TEA is firm, but there are no transactions to report.

SUGAR is very dull. Only 3,700 mats have found buyers at nominally f.2¾ under November value, but buyers are not inclined to operate at the price.

RICE.—In the course of this week 1,074 bales Revins table were sold at f.13, and some other lots will shortly be brought into the market. The news from the rice harbours is very satisfactory to holders.

SPICES.—Only very small parcels have found buyers. The quotations are :—Nutmegs, No. 1, 205c. to 210c. ; No. 2, 195c. to 200c. ; No. 3, 170c. to 175c. ; No. 4, 120c. to 125c. Mace, D, 235c. to 240c. ; E, 225c. to 230c. Cloves, No. 1, 101c. ; No. 2, 100c.

JAVA TOBACCO.—A few small parcels were offered for sale by public tender and sold at very firm prices. In a few days 3,034 bales will be brought into the market.

CASSIA LIGNEA.—The greater part of a lot of 4,000 chests has been sold at 37c.

ARRACK.—Holders ask too high prices, which checks general business ; the article, however, is firm, and the stock not large.

JAVA INDIGO has met with a lively demand, so that about 120 chests have changed hands. The parcels, ex Holland, will soon be brought into the market.

GUM DAMAR.—About 800 chests have been sold at very high prices. The stock is nearly exhausted.

MOTHER-O'-PEARL SHELLS.—2,000 kilo. Ceram have been sold by public auction.

RATTANS.—The market is dull, and ordinary qualities are almost unsaleable. 500 piculs, ex Maddaloni, have found buyers.

TIN.—The transactions are of no importance. Banca is quoted at f.60, and a small lot Billiton has changed hands at f.56.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS.—May 22, at Texel, from Sourabaya, Antoinette ; 24, at Texel, from Batavia, Prins van Oranje (str.); at Hellevoet, from Batavia, Wyberton (str.).

DEPARTURES.—May 21, from Maassluis, for Batavia, Maassluis ; 23, from Texel, for Batavia, Borneo (str.).

PASSENGERS INWARD.—From Java, per Prins van Oranje : Messrs. W. van Someren Greve and family, F. J. van Hemert, E. Valk, R. A. Sythoff and family, H. D. Canne and family, K. L. Indorf, W. Iskander, Radhen Mas Soerono, Mas Ardi Sasmita, Si Bannas, Mrs. Coenen-Lautenslager, Mrs. C. Clignett and family, Zaalberg and family, Guichare, Mondriaan and family, Van Sandick, W. Croll, Van der Voort, Koen, A. M. van Schaick, P. F. Kraal, A. Salmon, S. Westerbaan, Muurling.

Monetary and Commercial.

The favourable statements published with reference to the revenue of Japan have influenced purchases of Japenese Loans, which have consequently advanced. The Nine per Cent. Loan closes at 106 to 108, the Seven per Cents. at 95 to 97.

Messrs. Oppenheim, Nephew, and Co. have contracted for the remaining half of the Seven per Cent. Egyptian Loan of £32,000,000 introduced in 1873, the first half (£16,000,000) having been entirely absorbed. Under their arrangements with the Khedive the firm had the option of deferring their decision as to taking the remainder until October, but, looking at the benefit to be derived by the Egyptian Government from being put at once in possession of the means of paying off its outstanding floating liabilities a prompt arrangement has been resolved upon. The issue is not likely to cause any financial inconvenience on this side, about £7,500,000 sterling having been already advanced to the Khedive, and the balance being required only for the redemption of Treasury bonds.

Messrs. Baring Brothers invite applications for £400,000 in Six per Cent. Bonds of the Eastern Railroad Company of Massachusetts, at the price of 92½ per cent., bearing interest from 1st March last, and repayable in nineteen years, for which a sinking fund of 1 per cent. per annum will be employed in the purchase of the bonds when below par. £150,000 of this issue is to be applied to the payment of bonds to a like amount maturing this summer, and the remaining £250,000 to the purchase of freight grounds in Boston.

Messrs. M'Calmont, Brothers, and Co. have invited subscriptions for £400,000 Six per Cent. bonds of the Northern Central Railway Company, bearing interest from the 1st of July next, at the price of 87½. The line is one of 142 miles through portions of the States of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The Bank of New Zealand have notified by telegram a dividend of 10 per cent. and a bonus of 2½ per cent. per annum for the half-year ended the 31st of March, being at the same rate as for the previous half-year.

At the annual meeting of the Queen Insurance Company, at Liverpool, a dividend and bonus of 10 per cent. was declared, making 15 per cent. for the year ; £41,938 was appropriated to reserve, thus raised to £130,000; and £13,719 was carried forward.

An adjudication of bankruptcy has been made against Messrs. Jahn Mohl and Co., merchants, of 90, Great Tower-street. The liabilities amount to about £12,000. A meeting of creditors has been recently held under a petition for liquidation by arrangement, when a statement of their affairs, prepared by Messrs. Johnstone, Cooper, Wintle, and Co., was submitted. No resolution was, however, come to, and the present bankruptcy proceedings follow.

At a meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Foster and Hinings, woolstaplers, of Bradford, the accounts showed liabilities of £31,890, and assets £1,667, and it was resolved to liquidate by arrangement.

An official notification states that the Board of Trade have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a copy of a Decree of the Spanish Government, dated the 29th March, approving the decisions of the Civil Governor of the Philippine Islands with regard to the adoption of the Customs' Regulations of 1870, and the remission, under certain conditions, of the payment of duties on Spanish merchandise taken to those Islands by way of Suez, notwithstanding that it may have been transhipped in transit under a foreign flag. A copy of a Customs' Tariff, to come into operation in the Philippine Islands six months after the publication of the Decree, may be seen on application at the Statistical and Commercial Department of the Board of Trade.

An action has been tried in the Supreme Consular Court of Constantinople, brought by "The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, against Joseph Joshua." The following is a summary of the case :—

The defendant, who formerly carried on business at Singapore under the style of "Joshua and Brother," subsequently resided at Damascus, and is at present in England. While in Singapore he banked with the plaintiffs. Business was carried on after his departure under the same style, Raphael, the defendant's brother, continuing as one of the managers, and in course of time "Joshua and Brother" had over-drawn its account with the bank to the amount of £90,000. Proceedings were taken against the defendant as a partner. The defendant had raised various preliminary objections, which protracted the litigation, and which were decided against him, and he failed also in an attempt to cast off his liability to the jurisdiction of a British Court by setting up that he was an Ottoman subject. The case now came into court on the substantial issue as to the debt, to which the defendant pleaded that he was the sole person who constituted the firm of Joshua and Brother, and that he never had any partner whatsoever, and consequently was not interested in the so called firm after his departure from Singapore. Considerable evidence on this point was taken before a commission at Singapore, and affidavits had also since been made pro et con. This evidence was carefully and succinctly reviewed by the judge, who decided that it was overwhelmingly in favour of the existence of a partnership, which the defendant had not renounced, and for the debts of which he was, therefore, liable. Judgment was accordingly given for the amount claimed with interest and costs.

The price of Bar Silver has slightly receded, and the quotation is 58 9-16d. per ounce standard. Mexican Dollars have been disposed of at previous rates for China.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

The improved tone noticed in our report of a fortnight since has become more decided, and although business has been interrupted by the Whitsun Holidays, the total transactions are extensive. Sugar, Coffee, Black and White Pepper, and Manila Hemp all exhibit a slight advance in value. Tin, after further receding, has not only recovered, but further advanced. Gambier and Cutch are very firm. Most other articles of importance have been very quiet, and Rice has again declined.

TEA.

Owing to the Whitsuntide Holidays little or no business has been done during the week, and there is consequently no alteration in the market.

Messrs. James Goddard and Co.'s Circular says :—A telegram arrived on the 23rd inst. of the opening of the market at Hankow on the 19th, of one chop of tea at a highter price than last season. Later telegrams make settlements about 35,000 packages in four days, and that some district teas are of very fine quality, and that the Russians have been buyers at 8 to 10 per cent. over the prices of last year. In our estimate of the 23rd February we gave the probable stocks as likely to be on hand on the 1st July at 55,000,000 lbs. ; they will not, however, be reduced below 60,000,000 lbs. ; this difference arises from the decreased deliveries. Imports, deliveries, and stocks in London, from 1st January to 30th April :—

Imports.		Deliveries.		Stocks.
51,568,818	39,013,193	54,888,720	52,690,486	86,150,800	75,448,270

SILK.

The market continues dull and depressed ; there is still no inquiry, and little or nothing is doing in any class of Asiatic Silk. The accounts of the European crops are so far favourable. Deliveries are poor, being, from 1st to 27th inst., China 1,939, Canton 517, Japan 527, and Bengal 166 ; total, 3,149 bales.

COFFEE.

An impetus has been given to the market by the favourable result of the Dutch sale, an advance equivalent to 6s. to 7s. per cwt. above valuations being established; and all qualities sold with competition at a further advance. Plantation Ceylon has met a better demand than any other description, the public sales having gone off with spirit at rising prices, closing 4s. higher for grey and common to 6s. for fine coloury, of which a larger supply has been offered; and the closing quotation of middling is 106s. to 109s. 6d. Native has also met a better demand, and prices have advanced fully 4s. per cwt., good ordinary selling at the close at 86s. Closing prices are, Plantation, triage 83s. to 95s., small 100s. to 104s. 6d., low middling 105s. to 106s., middling coloury 106s. 6d. to 109s. 6d., good middling to fine middling bright coloury 110s. to 114s., good to fine bold ditto 115s. to 118s., peaberry 107s. 6d. to 114s., native good ordinary pale 86s. No transactions in other East Indian kinds are reported.

The Dutch Trading Company's periodical sale was held on the 27th inst. in Rotterdam. 79,472 bags Java, &c., were offered, which went off with spirit at 3¼c. to 4c. above valuations, good ordinary selling at 54½c. to 55½c., against 53½c. to 54c. at the April sales.

SUGAR.

The improved demand noticed last week has continued, the market has been strengthened, and prices for all kinds have advanced. Penang: There has been a strong demand for brown date sort, partly on speculative account, and large sales have been made at rising prices, resulting in a total advance of 1s. per cwt. Better qualities are not much inquired for. Sales of 850 bags soft middling brown to good yellow at 18s. 6d. to 21s.; 2,500 baskets date sort at 15s. to 15s. 3d.; 15,000 bags ditto, commencing at 14s. 9d., and rising to 15s. 6d. Manila: Transactions have been upon an extended scale, a good portion consisting of common brown, at an advance of 6d. per cwt., good ditto being 9d. dearer. The sales have amounted to about 2,000 tons, comprising 3,500 bags unclayed Taal at 15s. 6d., 18,000 bags unclayed Ilo Ilo at 16s., 50,000 bags (about 1,000 tons) low sun-dried Ilo Ilo, per Jupiter, at 16s. 6d., 50 tons good ditto at 19s., 6,500 bags common clayed at 17s. 9d., and 3,500 bags fair clayed at 18s. 6d. China and Siam: No sales.

CAMPHOR.—The market for both China and Japan has continued dull, and prices have declined; about 300 to 400 cases and tubs are reported sold; Japan at 79s. to 80s.; China 75s. per cwt.

COCOANUT OIL.—Transactions have been unimportant; Cochin has been sold at £38 10s. to £39, and Ceylon at £34 15s. to £35. At the public sales of 464 casks Ceylon offered 12 casks good sold at £34 15s., the remainder being withdrawn or bought in at £34 15s. to £35, hogsheads £35 10s.

COIR GOODS.—The quantities of Yarn offered by auction have been small, and the whole found buyers, the greater part consisting of good and fine qualities, which sold readily at dearer rates. Rope has sold steadily.

CHINA PRESERVES.—Of 40 casks Ginger offered 20 casks sold at 5¾d.

CUTCH.—There has been but little enquiry, but stocks have been and still are firmly held; sales are reported in floating parcels, choice marks at 23s. per cwt.

COPRA is firm and in demand.

COLOMBO ROOT has been in steady demand, but large supply; 9 bags fair quality, but rather wormy, sold at 12s. 6d. per cwt.

CUBEBS are quiet but steady.

DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—Market quiet, and prices easier; of 28 cases offered, the bulk sold at £6 10s. to £7 5s. for good to very good bright Lump; a single case of superior realised £12 15s.

EBONY.—Ceylon continues firm, and is wanted; an offer of ten tons realised £19 for good quality, being a slight advance.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Anniseed has been dull; of 35 cases at auction, part sold at 8s. 7d., and transactions of small extent since at the same figure; afloat little done. Cassia continues very dull; 3 cases sold at 4s. 4d. to 4s. 5d. Nutmeg quiet; of 10 cases, 2 sold at 8d. per. oz. Cinnamon: Scarce; 1 case leaf realised 2¾d. Citronelle: Quiet; 75 cases sold at 1¾d., the previous value. Arrivals. Lemongrass quiet and cheaper; 95 cases sold at 2⅜d. to 2½d., being nearly ¼d. lower. Arrivals and large stocks.

GALLS.—But small business has been done in China; privately some 500 cases have changed hands, chiefly for export, at 50s., closing for a few cases at 52s.; of 520 cases brought to auction only a few sea damaged sold at 47s. per cwt.

GALANGAL ROOT.—No transactions reported.

GUTTA-PERCHA continues dull; of 439 bags and baskets brought forward only a few were placed at 11¼d. to 11½d. for good reboiled. Large stock and arrivals.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady; 9 cases sold at £26 to £27 10s. for fine Almondy, free, and partly run, and £15 block and £9 drossy. Sumatra steady, and of 290 cases, one-fourth sold at £7 to £7 5s. for fair 2nds, and 65s. to 68s. 6d. good brown 3rds Palembang. Copal again lower, 546 bags offered, and the bulk sold at 9s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. per cwt. for drossy, coated, and dusty hard. Damar quiet, but generally firmly held; of 318 cases, a small proportion was disposed of at 48s. to 48s. 6d. for good Singapore, a little specky. Gamboge quiet; 6 cases sold at £9 to £12 5s. for ordinary to fine, partly run.

GAMBIER.—The market has been firm, but business has been restricted on the spot at 25s., with retail sales up to 25s. 6d.; afloat 25s. 1½d. Of 1,382 packages at auction, a few sold at 32s. to 32s. 6d. per cwt. for good pressed cubes.

HEMP.—Business was done in Manila early in the fortnight on the basis of £32 10s. to £33 for fair current, being settlements of sales made some time since for forward delivery. Subsequently the market has been firmer, and although only about 500 bales have been sold privately, there has been more demand at the public sales, and one-half of a moderate quantity offered was sold at a recovery of about 10s. per ton. Of 816 bales offered 400 bales sold at and after the sales; mixed quality below fair at £33, fair current at £34, good (Boluzan) at £35 per ton.

INDIA-RUBBER.—All kinds are dull; large sales of Borneo privately at 1s. 3d.; 6 cases at auction sold at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3½d. for foul to good.

ISINGLASS.—The auctions of the month included of Penang, Manila, &c., 75 cases, and nearly all found buyers at barely previous high rates for fine, but prices of other qualities, except Purse, which went cheaper, were generally maintained. Rates obtained were as follows:—Pipe, good and fine pale, 4s. 6d. to 4s. 9d.; middling, 3s. to 3s. 5d.; ordinary, 2s. 4d. to 2s. 9d.; low dark, 1s. 7d. Leaf, fair small to good bold pale, 3s. 1d. to 4s. 4d.; skinny and poor, 1s. Purse (lower) good, 1s. 6d. to 1s. 7d. Pickings, low, 4d.

JAPAN WAX.—The market has continued quiet; small sales of fine large saucers have been effected privately at 57s. 6d. Of 122 cases at auction a few sold at the same figure, prices being again lower; the stock here is still large, and there are few buyers.

MUSK has been in rather better request; 22 caddies Tonquin offered and sold at 38s. to 39s. per oz. for good selected pods, and 17s. 6d. to 18s. 6d. rough part false packed; 3 tins Cabardine retired; 6 caddies fine Yunan realised 36s. to 36s. 6d.; of 25 tins grain, about half sold at previous value, good 48s. 6d. to 49s. 6d.; middling 42s. 6d.; inferior 30s. to 38s.

PLUMBAGO.—Ceylon has been very dull, and is again lower. Of 1,463 barrels offered about one-fourth only sold, lump, fair to fine, at 16s. to 20s.; chips, middling to good, 9s. 6d. to 12s.; dust, fair to fine, 8s. 6d. to 10s. per cwt.

RATTANS unchanged; 11,508 bundles sold at auction at 3s. 2d. to 6s. per 100 canes.

RHUBARB.—China has been steady but quiet; of 57 cases offered, a few sold at 1s. 8d. for fair trimmed sun-dried middling colour; 1s. 3d. darker, and 8d. inferior.

SOY.—Scarcely any business has been done; 200 casks China and 96 cases Japan offered were retired.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

THE LIVER, THE STOMACH, AND THEIR AILMENTS.—Alternations of temperature, muggy weather, a troubled mind, sedentary habits, excesses at the table, and a gay, reckless mode of life exert the most deleterious influence over the liver and stomach. When once these organs are fairly out of order, great inroads are quickly made on the general state of the health; the constitution, which loses the aid of two of its noblest organs, soon gives way, and diseases quickly follow, from which, if neglected, the worst consequences will inevitably result. If a course of Holloway's celebrated Pills be persevered in all will be well again, as they are the finest and noblest correctives of the blood ever known, and effect certain cures of all disorders of the liver and stomach.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all descriptions of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 15th April; and by the Pacific mail we have ten days' later news, viz., to the 25th April; the P. and O. mail from London Feb. 20 arrived out on the 8th April, the following French mail of Feb. 27 was received on the 19th April, and the P. and O. mail of 6th March arrived out on the 22nd April. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of intelligence:—

We mentioned in our last issue that it was the intention of the Japanese Government to send an expedition to punish the cannibals of Formosa. Great preparations were made: all the available steamers were taken up for the conveyance of troops and stores, and many of them had already taken their departure for Nagasaki, where the expedition was to rendezvous, when suddenly, on receiving information that China was sending troops to Formosa, the Government issued orders countermanding the whole affair. The consequence of this sudden change of front has been a Ministerial crisis, several of the Ministers having sent in their resignations. This sudden decision in favour of peace will tend to make the Government still more unpopular, as the samourai will resent this backing down of Japan just as their hopes of a war had been excited.

To add to the causes which embitter the war party, the Government have beheaded Yeto Shimpei, the leader of the late insurrection. This unfortunate man (one of the most liberal-minded officials in Japan, lately occupying the position of Minister of Justice), was captured in disguise, and (so far as we know, without a formal trial,) put to death, with several of his companions. As Yeto was a man of great influence in the country, and one of the recognised heads of the war party, his execution has caused a great sensation; and we may be sure that should the opportunity offer, it will be bitterly avenged.

Before the abandonment of the Formosan expedition had been determined on, General Le Gendre, Lieut.-Commander Cassell, U.S.N., Lieutenant Wasson, U.S. Engineers, and Captain Brown, attached to the expedition were presented to the Mikado.

The U.S.S. Hartford is lying here, awaiting the arrival of the new Admiral, who is expected by next mail. The Tuscarora arrived here from Honolulu on the 22nd April. The Saco will leave for Chefoo on the arrival of the Lackawanna, which is expected in a few days.

The time of the sporting portion of the community is fully occupied. In the course of next month the Races, the meeting of the Amateur Athletic Association, the Regatta, and the Rifle Match with the Hong Kong and Shanghai Clubs will all take place, and training for these various events is actively going on.

The death of Mr. R. B. Baker, late manager of the Chartered Mercantile Bank at this port, has caused an expression of general regret, the deceased being much respected.

An official enquiry has been made into the loss of the M. M. s. s. Nil, but the proceedings have not been published.

Mr. Hannen, the Acting Assistant Judge here, has been replaced by Mr. Goodwin, from Shanghai.

Plans of a scheme for improving the harbour of Yokohama have been prepared, and are now before the Government.

The Empress, in imitation of European custom, gave a garden party on the 9th April.

CHINA.

PEKING.

The correspondent of the North China Daily News writes as follows :—

The negotiations of the Peruvian Minister have been delayed, owing to alterations in the arrangements with regard to L' Hung Chang's return to Tientsin. As the Emperor is about to make his pilgrimage to the Se-ting, or family mausoleum, the attendance of his Excellency is required. The Emperor will be accompanied by the two Empresses Dowager. He will start on this "expensive" journey on the 10th of April, and return on the 17th. The idea of a railway seems as obnoxious to his Majesty as ever.

There is so little going on usually in the Capital, or at any rate so little reaches foreign ears, that one is driven to the Peking Gazette in search of anything worth narrating. And truly some of the edicts which appear there are quaint. Take for instance the Gazette of the 23rd. The Board of Ceremonies has addressed the Throne, advising that his Majesty appoint Princes and high officers to search the persons and bedding (!) of the students, on their entering the Examination Hall to compete for the literary degree of Tsin-sze. The Emperor has, therefore, appointed twenty-two persons, including Princes and high officials, to perform this task. Amongst the latter I notice even the names of Tung-seun and Ching-ling, two chiefs of the Tsung-le Yamun ; and Tih-chun, chief of the Record Office in the Kwo-tsze-kwan, who was formerly superintendent of the Imperial Arsenal at Tientsin. Fancy Princes of the Blood and Chiefs of the Foreign Office—Prince Arthur and Mr. Hammond—appointed inspectors of bedding.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 19th April ; no later mail from London had arrived out. The following items of news are from the North China Herald :—

The annual meeting of subscribers to the library was held on the 13th April. The accounts showed that the subscribers had fallen off by one-half, chiefly owing, it appeared, to the opening of the club library ; and that the income for the present year would fall Tls. 1,000 short of the expenses. After discussing this unfortunate position of affairs, the meeting passed a resolution to the effect that, to ascertain whether it were attributable to temporary depression or to a permanent falling off of interest on the part of the public, the committee be empowered to confer with the trustees of the Recreation Fund, with the view of obtaining the assistance necessary to carry on the institution for a further term. The new committee appointed were Rev. Mr. Butcher, Dr. Macgowan, Messrs. Medhurst, How, Cordier, Fitz-Gerald, and Maclellan.

A meeting has been held at the Asiatic Society's rooms, to discuss the project we have so often advocated, of forming a museum in connection with that institution. A resolution was passed cordially approving the project, and the following gentlemen were appointed a committee to carry it out :—Messrs. Medhurst, Aymeri, Kingsmill, Taintor, Cordier, Keswick, Hawtrey, Fitzgerald, Pryer, Groom, and Drs. Henderson and Gottburg. We understand that the trustees of the recreation fund have undertaken to advance Tls. 1,500 at 5 per cent. per annum interest, to start the scheme, while the Asiatic Society provide the funds requisite for current expenses.

The annual meeting of the friends and subscribers to the Chinese Hospital has been held at the house of the medical officer, Dr. Johnston. G. F. Seward, Esq., U.S. Consul General, occupied the chair, and there was a good attendance. Mr. R. I. Fearon, the hon. treasurer, presented the accounts, stating that the grant of Tls. 2,000 from the Municipal Council (the amount voted for the Lock Hospital or this alternative object, at last ratepayers' meeting), and various handsome subscriptions had enabled them to meet the cost of the new building, and left a balance. Mr. Johnston said the new building would be ready for use in about six weeks, and that it would accommodate seventy patients with greater advantages than the old one would thirty.

A meeting of shareholders in the North China Insurance Company has been held. The profits of the year permitted a dividend of Tls. 80 per share among shareholders generally, the division of Tls. 48,000 among contributing shareholders, and the carrying Tls. 112,000 to reserve for future division among contributing shareholders.—Messrs. Lavers, Wood, J. T. Brand, Maitland, Hart and Grant were elected directors, and Messrs. R. Miller and P. Maclean auditors.

The following is the result of the Municipal Election :—Purdon 106, Wood 97, Lemarchand 93, Carmichael 90, Heyden 88, Webb 85, Mackenzie 83, Cowie 76, Kidner 73, Little 70, Wilson 67, Tate 42, Evans 31. Messrs. Purdon, Wood, Lemarchand, Carmichael, Heyden, Webb, Mackenzie, Cowie, and Kidner, therefore constitute the Municipal Council for the ensuing year. The total number of votes cast was 116—about half the number of registered voters.

There seems to be a little tempest raging at Chinkiang about the opium trade. The local dealers have issued a circular—purporting to emanate from the foreign hongs—restricting the trade in opium to certain privileged persons, under penalty of utter mercantile extinction. H.B.M. Consul has of course protested against the combination as illegal, and called on the authorities to suppress the false document. We have little sympathy with the opium trade ; but such proceedings as those of the Chinkiang dealers must be quashed, on principle. Mr. Medurst, we believe, purposes going to Chinkiang to settle the matter.

The crews for "club eights" and "fours" in the forthcoming regatta, to take place about the second week in May, have been fixed. An interesting feature in the regatta will be the revival of "hong fours." It is hoped that some new men will put in an appearance in the sculling races.

The Volunteer Artillery have had their annual target practice at Woosung. Gunner Meller made the best average practice, and therefore won the Visitors' Cup, Driver Pollock ranking second, and Gunner Bean third. At a meeting of No. 1 company of the Volunteer Corps, Mr. James Hart was unanimously elected captain. It was resolved to appoint the commissioned officers, a sergeant, and two privates to be a committee to look after the interests of the company ; and Capt. Hart, Lieut. Sim, Sergt. Grundy, and Privates Morris and Maclean were elected members.

Entries for the Spring Rifle Meeting have closed. The meeting promises, we believe, to be the best that has yet been had, the entries being far more numerous than they have been on any previous occasion. The highest previous number on record is fifty, in 1870. The entries for last year's autumn meeting were forty-six, whereas for this meeting they number between eighty and ninety.

We are informed that the amateurs of H.M.S. Cadmus have handed over $426.49 to the fund for the admission of sick poor to the General Hospital, this being the proceeds of the performance given at the Lyceum.

Madame Arabella Goddard's concerts have drawn good houses, and in all respects went off very well. Madame Goddard's masterly interpretation of Beethoven and Thalberg was a valuable lesson to those who were fortunate enough to have attended.

A large fire occurred in the French Concession on the morning of the 10th April. Some 200 Chinese houses were burned down.

On the 10th April a large fishing-boat was wrecked near Gutzlaff, and five Chinese landed on the island in a destitute condition. The Customs' steamer Kuahsing has left, with provisions, and to bring the men to Shanghai.

The steamer Ping-on, so long in dock, and so much in the newspapers, has made a trial trip, to test the value of the extensive alterations that she has undergone. She is now under British colours, and commanded by Captain Mooney. The alterations consisted of adding forty feet to her length, doubling her sides diagonally with teak, changing her boiler for that of the late steamer Chieftain, adding a new screw and the like improvements. The result of the trip fully justified the utility of these changes. She made over nine knots, a rate of speed which was maintained throughout the trip, even when she was going against the tide and a strong head wind. As her screw was but partially submerged, it was calculated that under the same consumption of coal (at the rate of eight tons per day), she could make another knot.

Mr. G. F. Seward, the U.S. Consul, has dismissed the petition, with costs, in the case between David Hean and Others, trustees of the estate of Lindsay and Co., and W. J. Blydenburgh and Others, lately trading at Shanghai and elsewhere, under the style or firm of Smith, Archer and Co.

In the Supreme Court Sir E. Hornby has reserved judgment in the suit brought by C. H. Nelson, the late master of the ship Alhambra, against Messrs. Russell and Co., as agents for owners, for wages, &c. It will probably be remembered that Captain Nelson was dismissed by the mortgagees of the vessel, and it is to test the legality of this dismissal that the action has been brought. The same result has been arrived at in the case of Cheap Jack and Co. v. Russell and Co., in which the plaintiffs sued for necessaries supplied and money advanced for the ship Alhambra.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 25th April; the French mail from London of March 13 was received on the 23rd April. We take the following items of news from the China Mail:—

The enterprise evinced by the management of the Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao Steam-boat Company in placing the Feiwan to run between the city and Kowloong deserves a word of recognition. That the new venture will, if economically worked, be successful, may be almost safely calculated, and it is satisfactory to find it in such good hands. Hong Kong has proved no exception to the rule that facilities for rapid transit increase traffic.

The gunboat Growler, recently arrived, is in a deplorable condition as regards a "relief;" her foremast is out, and all her rigging, &c., is to undergo a thorough over-haul, consequently she can be of no use on service for some months. Instead of sending out either a new or a recently repaired vessel, the Government had the Growler re-commissioned at Malta.

The Macao coolie trade is to be resumed under new regulations. The dealers say that all the difficulties of the new system have been overcome but two. The first is, the space of three cubic metres per coolie, which they consider too much for a man, as coolie, on board, but it is a matter that can be arranged; the other and last difficulty of the new regulation, that is, that the Governor will send a person in his confidence, the day previous to the departure of any vessel leaving with coolies, to examine them, and that those unwilling to go will be landed, is still considered insurmosntable, as no fortune-teller can yet give a satisfactory answer to the parties who are anxious to know who will be the lucky or unlucky person appointed by the Governor to discharge this important post.

At a meeting to consider what mark of respect would best express the sentiments of esteem entertained towards H. E. Major-General Whitfield, Lieutenant-Gouernor of this Colony, by the community, it was decided that as the state of his health will probably prevent him from being present at a public dinner, it will be better to frame a public address to be handed to his Excellency before his departure.

We are pleased to note the energy with which the Surveyor General, Mr. Price, is improving the various streets of the colony, as the money thus spent is better utilised than in making the proposed new road. That this new road would be a useful one we admit, but, at present, the colony has not the funds wherewith to make it. Great improvements are being made towards Wanci, where the hill has been considerably cut down, and from that Point, the Queen's-road, along toward Talpingshan, has been put in a thorough state of repair. We hear, also, that the native dwellings near Mount Shadwell are under orders to be whitewashed and kept externally clean. Duddell-street, so long neglected, has assumed an even appearance, and various other by streets, Zetland-street for instance, have been put to rights. We hope Mr. Price will continue this most useful work.

It is rumoured amongst the Chinese that the Viceroy of Canton has no intention of putting down the Wai Sing Lottery, in spite of the strict nature of the Imperial edict on the subject. As yet his Excellency has not issued any proclamation, and tickets, it is said, are commenced to be sold for the coming examination for the Tsin-sz degree. The Chinese say the Viceroy cannot very well abolish it now, because the license fee has been already paid to the end of the year. The action of the Viceroy confirms the general opinion amongst European residents that the Central Government is powerless against the Provincial authorities.

We have hitherto refrained from alluding to the numerous military desertions which take place in Hong Kong, having no wish to direct undue attention to the matter; but desertion from the ranks of the 80th Regiment having become so common—nearly in fact an every day occurrence—the fact calls for remark. What chiefly concerns us is the organised system which evidently is at work in our midst for assisting soldiers to desert—not so much their reasons for deserting, or anything more especially regarding the internal economy of the regiment itself. It is an unpleasent fact, however, that the present regiment has exhibited an unparalleled amount of desertion and misdemeanour as compared with any other of Her Majesty's regiments recently stationed here. Scarcely a day passes wtthout our Police Intelligence recording that a private of the 80th regiment has been tried for desertion, or some grave or petty misdemeanour.

The general belief accorded by the Chinese to the rumour that the Viceroy at Canton has signified his willingness to see a line of telegraph carried from Kowloong to that city, has a significance quite independent of the truth or falsity of the statement. We have been unable to ascertain whence the report itself originated. All we know is that it exists, and that it does not seem so violently improbable to many of the natives, as to be either ridiculous or deserving of hostile comment. Such being the case, we are justified in assuming that the thin edge of the wedge has at length been inserted in the time-honoured prejudices of the Cantonese. We do not, of course, for a moment suppose that this more liberal feeling has as yet spread to the country parts over which such a line as that talked of would pass. Fung-shuey would probably present as great obstacles now as ever to the immediate completion of such a project. But whereas the general sentiment of the higher officials and mercantile classes was, until lately, ranged on the side of obstruction, it is cheering to note that one formidable element of hostility is giving way. It will not take long to convert the mandarins generally, if it be once understood that the direct representative of the Imperial Government favours such a scheme; and with their conversion to a common-sense view of such matters, much of the opposition of village tepos and headmen will cease also. These once gained over, the rest will be easy.

The new Ordinance consolidating the local emigration is still under discussion in committee.

A rumour has got about that the Florencia, a Peruvian steamer, intended to evade the local laws by taking in Chinese coolies outside the limits. The papers were at first refused to the vessel by the harbour authorities and the Colonial Secretary, but were subsequently given to it. The rumour proved to be without foundation, as a Chinese gunboat, which went out and overhauled the vessel, found only twenty passengers, who had been regularly shipped on board. The owner has protested against the treatment he has received, and threatens to bring the whole matter to the notice of the Peruvian Government.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 3rd May. No later mail from London had arrived out. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

The interval since the departure of the last mail has been short, owing to a change in the date of sailing of the homeward mail steamers from Hong Kong, they leaving that port on Saturdays during the prevalence of the south-west monsoon, and consequently falling due here on Saturdays and leaving on Sundays. As this will last about six months, the merchants have determined on observing Wednesday as a half-holiday, in part compensation for the loss of Saturday afternoon and Sunday relaxation. We trust that next year some arrangement of the mail steamer's time-table will be made, whereby the undue share of Sunday labour now falling to our lot may be obviated.

Judgment has been given by the Chief Justice sitting in Admiralty jurisdiction in the suit of the owners of the Siamese barque Advance against the German steamship Egeria for damages sustained in collision in August last, the Chief Justice holding that the sailing vessel was altogether to blame for the collision, and giving judgment for the defendant.

Notwithstanding the doubts entertained as to the feasibility of its erection, the screw-pile iron lighthouse on the North Sands, in Malacca Straits, has been successfully put up; the lantern is now being fixed, and will be exhibited on and after the 15th, when the vessel now doing duty as a lightship will be removed. The light will be a revolving one, showing at intervals of one minute, and visible fifteen miles. This will be supplemented by a lighthouse on Pulo Pisang, between Malacca and the Raffles light, when the Straits of Malacca will be well lighted, and their navigation made much easier than at present. And when, in addition to these, the proposed new light shall be shown to enable vessels to readily enter Penang harbour by night, and the harbour lights at the three Settlements improved, the facilities for making any of our ports at night will leave little to be desired.

Madame Arabella Goddard, the eminent pianist, arrived here by the last French mail steamer from China, and intends giving one or two performances in Singapore. It is rare that this part of the world is favoured with visits from such talented artists, and Madame Goddard's entertainments will be an agreeable relief from the ordinary dull routine of our every-day life.

The arrivals of steamers via the Suez Canal have been the Achilles on the 25th ult. from Liverpool, Montgomeryshire on the 27th, Glenearn on the 28th, and Vancouver on the 29th, from London. The only departure homeward has been the Diomed on the 29th for London.

The subscription lists in circulation for the relief of the sufferers by the Bengal famine were closed on the 30th ultimo. The sum collected amounted to $8,900, the greater portion of which has been already remitted to the Central Committee at Calcutta by this mail. Considering the small population of the place, and the very limited portion of the community from whom the contributions have been drawn, this is a very respectable sum, and is largely in excess of the amount anticipated when the matter was first taken in hand.

Cholera still prevails to a considerable extent in various parts of Java, and during the past few days there were several deaths among natives here, said to have been due to the same cause. We are glad to state, however, that no fresh cases have been reported since, and there appears to be no ground for alarm, or to suppose that the disease will revisit us in epidemic form this year.

The Government Gazette announces that the appointments of Lieut. Ellis and Capt. Fox as Master Attendants at Singapore and Penang have been confirmed by the Secretary of State. Captain Bradbery, late of the Colonial steamer Pluto, has been appointed Deputy Harbour Master at Singapore.

The mortality from disease among the troops of the Atchin expedition must have been very great, if we may form an opinion from the deaths among two shiploads on their return. The Dutch steamer Koningin Sophia arrived from Atchin, having troops on board, and towing the Dutch barque Nancy, with some 350 of the convict corps on board. There were, we hear, five deaths from fever on board the steamer, and no less than twenty on board the barque during the passage from Atchin to Singapore.

A meeting of the Legislative Council was held on the 29th April, when, after some formal business, the Acting Colonial Secretary introduced a Bill to amend the Courts Amendment Ordinance No. 4 of 1874. The Hon. R. Little objected to the Bill, on account of the insufficient notice. The Treasurer moved the following resolution, which was seconded by the Hon. W. R. Scott:—"That Mr. G. Philippo, Senior Puisne Judge of the Straits Settlements, be allowed to draw half salary from the date of his embarkation and full salary from the date of his arrival in the colony, and that the same rule be applicable to Mr. Ford when he arrives."

PENANG.

The Penang Gazette has the following upon the subject of the proposed new lighthouses:—We have consulted several captains of steamers which are continually trading in these waters, and the generality of them seem to think that as far as Penang is concerned the proposed light in the South channel ought to be placed on Pulo Remo, so as to act as a guide to vessels in making the island at night, and all agree in urging that another light on Muka Head, to serve the same purpose for vessels coming from the northward as the one on Pulo Remo for vessels from the southward, is essential. It is asserted that the configuration of the land about the entrances to Penang is most difficult to make out during the monsoons, owing to the mists which hang about the higher parts of it, and consequently lights, to be of use, should indicate the entrance to the North and South channels. As regards a harbour light, it is conceded that the present one is perfectly useless, and that a proper light is necessary.

The same paper, remarking upon a circumstance which occurred at the last municipal meeting, says:—The filthy state of an open drain about half a mile long, stretching from the head of the road to the "Manse" to Prangin river, described by the secretary in his report upon it "as a long-standing public nuisance," was complained about by four or five individuals whose lot compels them to live near it. The secretary recommended what in his opinion would be a great improvement, at a cost of $2,400. The President endorsed the report, and wrote a minute coolly suggesting that the parties seeking relief should be asked to contribute towards the expense of whatever plan was adopted for the abatement of the nuisance. Such a suggestion made in the face of the heavy assessment imposed on house property, of the largely augmented resources obtained by the Water-rate Ordinance, of the large annual municipal income of about $120,000, and last, though not least, of the fact that the commissioners, on the motion of the President, have voted $5,000 for a public clock, would be treated by any ratepayer having the slightest acquaintance with the obligations of the commissioners as a gross piece of impertinence.

The want of consideration shown to the public as well as to their own servants by Government is admirably illustrated by the postponement of the ensuing Criminal Sessions. The original precept was dated the 8th April, and by it the Sheriff summoned the jurors and witnesses to attend at the Supreme Court on Thursday, the 7th May. The summonses were all out, when all of a sudden an order came from Singapore postponing the Sessions till Saturday, the 9th; the consequence is that fresh summonses have had to be issued and served.

Dr. Jackson, the newly-appointed Assistant Colonial Surgeon for Province Wellesley, has arrived here in the Nizam.

We understand that a strong feeling of dissatisfaction exists amongst not only the Bar but also the public at the appointment of Mr. W. E. Maxwell as Acting Judge of Penang.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been a fortnight of utter stagnation, and nearly all goods were quoted lower; a moderate business had been done in Grey Shirtings and Cotton Yarn, at lower prices; the only demand being for T-Cloths and Turkey Reds, of which there were no stocks. Metals were without change.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Business, which showed more signs of life at date of last report, had again relapsed into its former state of inactivity, without material change in prices. The Formosan difficulty had not led to any inquiry for manufactures used for warlike requirements. Cottons.—Yarns: Nos. 16-24 had been in inquiry, but closed dull; Nos. 28-32 neglected and weak. Grey Shirtings: Demand for 7 lbs. goods had ceased, and prices for these, as well as 8¼ lbs., had suffered a decline. Turkey Red Cambrics, light weights, and Victoria Lawns continued in favour, and prices had been maintained throughout the month. Worsted and Woollens: Plain Black Orleans had been taken to some extent, but prices were not so well supported at the close. Figured Orleans were quoted lower. For Mousselines, Plain and Figured, there was no change on former quotations to report, but Printed had been inquired for at a slight advance. Iron: Nail Rods rather weaker, in the absence of any demand worth noticing.

SHANGHAI.—The market generally had remained quiet, and with the exception of a brisk demand of short duration for common chops of 8.4 lbs. Grey Shirtings, intended for shipment to the North, there was no new feature of importance to notice. Cottons.—Best makes of 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings had fairly maintained former values, but the enquiry for them had only been limited. Common qualities again showed a decline. T-Cloths: Mexican 8 lbs. had been in fair request, Mexican 6 lbs. were almost unsaleable; in other qualities only a small business had been transacted. Drills: A sale of 10,000 pieces of English 15 lbs. was reported at Tls. 2.1.5. Other descriptions of Plain Cottons remained unchanged. Fancy Cottons were in little or no request. Woollens continued very quiet. Camlets had met with some attention, but prices had ruled irregularly. Metals were nominally without alteration, but in the absence of demand, former values were scarcely maintained.

HONG KONG.—The market had been generally quiet, many of the native dealers being absent from the Colony, attending the usual ancestral worship.

CANTON.—Lead had continued to decline in value, a small sale being reported at $7.60 for L.B., but since it had partially recovered, and closing quotations for same brand were $8 to $8.20. Sales about 300 piculs. Quicksilver had been sold at Hong Kong at $193.

SINGAPORE.—Business had been on a moderate scale, and for some descriptions of Grey Staples prices were weaker.

PENANG.—The market had been very quiet—the requirements of dealers being evidently satisfied. Transactions had been limited, and prices generally at the close were rather easier.

EXPORTS.

—o—

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The market continued dull and inactive; settlements since last report amounting to only 1,000 piculs of all grades, and arrivals to 1,300 piculs; the operations called for no special comment. The usual "garden musters" of New Crop had been shown; first arrivals of small lots were looked for early in May.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Since the date of the last report purchases had been made to the extent of 1,500 piculs, at rates last quoted. Small lots of new Teas were looked for during the first week in May, and accounts of the quality of the new crop were satisfactory.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says:—Shipments of New Teas have gone forward freely, but as they have all been under contract, nothing reliable can be given about prices, and the quantities are only ascertained after departure of the steamers. The crop is generally acknowledged to be superior to last season's, and teamen have clearly shown their belief in this, by the high prices they have paid for the raw leaf in the country. Shipments of new seasons Teas per steamers to the 19th April are as follows:—Peiho, 8,411 lbs.; Mooltan, 46,420 lbs.; Meikong, 68,579 lbs.; Zambesi, 22,311 lbs.; Hector, 89,998 lbs.; Sindh, 168,464 lbs.; Avoca, 157,334 lbs.; Diomed, 280,371 lbs. Total to date, 841,888 lbs.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—There was little change to report, transactions had been in the hands of a few buyers, and settlements since the 6th April were estimated at about 500 bales. Oshus had continued in fair request, but hanks were somewhat easier, and Sodais were freely offered at a decline of fully $20 per picul. Arrivals had been on a limited scale, and stocks were further reduced.

CANTON.—Owing to the inferior quality of the old Silk in stock, the staple had attracted very little attention during the fortnight. Settlements had amounted to 78 bales for Europe, at rates last quoted. These purchases had nearly exhausted the yield of last year, and what remained consisted of mixed lots scarcely worthy of notice. The season 1873-74 may therefore be considered virtually closed. The prospects of the new crop were good, and musters were expected in time for the next English mail. There had been nothing doing in Re-reels, and there was no demand for the mixed lots offering. Stocks estimated at 50 bales Loongkongs, 70 bales Tsatlee-reels, 50 bales Kowkongs, 50 bales Cumchucks, Lacklows, &c., and 150 bales of inferior descriptions.

SHANGHAI.—Much greater activity had been discernible on this market, the business transacted being principally in Tsatlee from Tls. 280 and upwards, Hangchows at Tls. 270 to 275, and Re-reels from Tls. 320 to 350, while the only sales of chops reported were Blue Elephant at Tls. 342½, and Nos. 2, 3, and 4 Gold Lion at Tls. 370, 350, and 330. Prices generally had ruled about Tls. 5 lower, but the absence of many descriptions of produce, and an irregular market, make it impossible to give reliable figures. Settlements for the fortnight, Chinas, 1,100 bales. Total settlements since 1st June, 1873, 56,500 bales; 1871-72, 49,500 bales. Comparative unsold Stock on this market on the 17th April, 1874, 600 bales; 1873, 300 bales; 1872, 100 bales.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE ATCHIN WAR.

THE HAGUE, JUNE 1.—According to an official telegram dated Buitenzorg, May 31, advices have been received from Atchin, announcing that the enemy has attacked Kotaradja, Penajong, and Maraksa, but was repulsed with considerable loss, and retired to various points in an easterly direction. The health of the troops is not good.

KASHGAR AND CHINA.

("TIMES" CORRESPONDENT'S TELEGRAM.)

BERLIN, JUNE 1.—Chinese troops have been stationed for some time past north and south of the Bogdo Ridge, threatening to invade Kuldsha and Kashgar. These territories, formerly the westernmost provinces of China, achieved independence during the revolutionary troubles of the last ten years. Kuldsha was subsequently occupied by the Russians, but Kashgar remains independent. In view of the common danger threatening the new masters of the region, Russia is now preparing to concert measures of defence with the Ameer of Kashgar. The Chinese forces on the Kuldsha and Kashgar confines are armed with European rifles.

THE JAPANESE EXPEDITION TO FORMOSA.

NAGASAKI, MAY 30.—The Japanese Government has despatched an expedition to punish the savages on the eastern shore of the island of Formosa who had maltreated some shipwrecked Japanese sailors. An insignificant engagement is reported to have taken place. Apprehensions were entertained of a difficulty arising between the Japanese and Chinese Governments on this account, but they appear to be unfounded.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

Telegrams from Hankow report the sailing of the steamers *Agamemnon, Glenartney, Hong Kong, Glenfalloch, Cawdor Castle, and Gordon Castle. Freights £5 to £5 10s. Quotations 50 to 55 taels, for fine Ningchows, but declining. Exchanges: Bank bills six m.s., at Shanghai 6s. 0¾d., at Hong Kong 4s. 4¾d. The Foochow market not yet opened.

Miscellaneous.

IRISHMEN IN CHINA.—China appears to be the paradise of place-hunting Irishmen in the present day, and it is odd to notice how many have attained posts of honour and high pay in the Celestial Empire. First and foremost comes H.M. Minister, Mr. Wade, whose long career in the East, characterised by many Hibernianisms, is yet one of which his native country may be proud. Then there is the astute and cautious head of the Customs, Mr. Hart, who resembles more the reserved and canny Scot than the vivacious native of the Emerald Isle, but whose career of unexampled success is creditable both to himself and the land that gave him birth. Then there is Sir Arthur Kennedy, Governor of Hong Kong, who succeeded to one of the most indisputable Irishmen that ever left the British Isles—Sir Richard MacDonnell. The last admiral in Chinese waters, Sir Henry Kellett, hailed from the Emerald Isle; so also do several of the minor officials of the Hong Kong colony, notably Mr. Russell, the police magistrate, whose academical career at Trinity was most successful and distinguished. Of the Consular officials some of the ablest and best known are Irishmen. Mr. Mongan, whose careful and elaborate official reports are a model for junior officers; Mr. Watters, whose scholarlike labours in Chinese philosophy promise to earn him a prominent place among Eastern philologists; and others which might be mentioned. The proportion of Irishmen in the Customs Service is unusually large, and it is sometimes said by disappointed juniors that to be born in Ireland is a far more certain passport to speedy promotion in China than long service, business capacity, or acquaintance with the Chinese language.

THE CHINESE IN SAN FRANCISCO.—It has long been supposed that the six companies supposed to represent the Chinese interests were given to extorting tribute from their countrymen, and that they aided and abetted the importation of Chinese of both sexes, who were kept in bondage for a term of years after their arrival in this country. But it has only lately been ascertained that a contract exists between the six companies and the Chinese steamships, English and American, whereby every Chinaman applying for a passage to China must produce a permit from the six companies or be compelled to pay $100 as the price of his passage. With a permit the fare is only $12, but a system of black mail is enforced in every case to the amount of $10 or $20, which the ordinary Chinaman is powerless to resist, and which he pays nominally to maintain the officers of the paternal six companies and to "return the bones of the dead." In reality, the enormous amount of money collected in this manner goes to enrich the Chinese ring, and the most extraordinary part of it is that the steamship lines should have allowed themselves to be made the medium of this wholesale rascality. The circumstance that brought this matter to light was the application of two Christian Chinamen at the proper office for a passage to China. They were informed that the fare was $12, but on tendering the money they were told that without a permit from the six companies they would have to pay $100. They retired to consult with their friends the missionaries, who, in their turn, remonstrated against the injustice of the demand, with, however, no better success. The conduct of the steamship companies has elicited much comment, and will doubtless engage further attention and investigation.

MESSRS. F. AND C. OSLER, of 45, Oxford-street, have just manufactured a splendid glass fountain for the Maharajah of Puttiala. This magnificent piece of glass work has been on view at the establishment of the manufacturers, and has attracted numerous visitors. It is 23 ft. 6 in. in height, and weighs 2¼ tons. On a broad marble base is a platform of richly-cut glass, from which rises a large central shaft, surrounded by six columns, composed of prisms of crystals, very richly cut on the inner side, and fitted so exactly that the joints are imperceptible. A cornice of glass connects the columns, each of which is surmounted by a large globe of solid crystal, cut in triangular facets of minute exactness. From the capital of the central shaft depend two rows of large crystal pendants. From the massive trunk rises in curves of great beauty a crystal basin 8 ft. in diameter, in which is placed the principal row of jets. The basin is scalloped, and is cut on the under side to represent the ripple and play of water. Near where the basin meets the trunk is suspended a row of pendants and ovoid-cut drops perfect in purity and brilliancy. Above the basin the design changes. Elegant scrolls of glass, festooned and arranged in three tiers, carry the jets in the upper part of the work, which terminates in a prismatic star and pointed hexagonal ornament.

A PARLIAMENTARY Committee met on the 5th inst. to inquire into the operation of the Adulteration of Food Act 1872. With regard to tea, Mr. Allen, the public analyst of Sheffield, said that he denied the capacity of dealers or any one by a rough and ready method to detect the adulteration of exhausted leaves. He considered there had been an improper prosecution of grocers in some localities. Sir H. Peek asked the witness if he considered that any accidental impurity found in tea should be considered as adulteration, and the witness replied in the negative.

A LETTER has been received by the North of England Steamship Owners' Association from the Foreign-office, which states that Lord Derby "is of opinion that, as British commerce has undoubtedly benefited by the opening of the Suez Canal, and would be much injured by the failure of the company to fulfil its engagements, it would be of doubtful advantage for British shipowners to press their claims for the restitution of the excess dues levied since the 1st July, 1872."

MR. NEY ELIAS, the Royal Geographical Society's gold medallist for 1873, who left England for India with a view to obtaining encouragement from the Government to penetrate into Sikkim and Thibet, has been temporarily attached to the Foreign Department at Calcutta. It is probable that should the Sikkim direction not prove favourable attention will be directed to Upper Burmah and Yunan.

AT the annual conference convened by the National Temperance League, at the City Terminus Hotel on the 29th ult., Mr. Edmund Wheatley, of the Chinese Customs Service, read a paper on "Temperance on the Coast of China." At the League's breakfast meeting on the 30th Mr. Wheatley spoke of Christian effort among the seamen of the China squadron.

IT is said that a movement has been started for the purpose of assisting Lieutenant Camdon in his expedition to Ujiji, for the purpose of saving Dr. Livingstone's effects and papers. The funds at the disposal of the Royal Geographical Society, and in connection with Livingstone's discoveries having been exhausted, a private subscription list has been opened.

THE China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vancouver left Yokohama for San Francisco on the 31st ult. Her cargo includes 750 tons New Season's Teas from Japan to New York and Atlantic cities, for through transit per railway.

THE agent of the Eastern Telegraph Company announces that the cable between Zante and Crete and thence to Egypt having been laid, Greece is now in immediate telegraphic communication with India, China, and Japan.

AMONGST the recent calls to the Bar we notice the names of Horatio Nelson Lay, C.B., to the Middle Temple, and Geronoske Yoshiyama, of Nagato, Japan, by the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn.

The steamer Mongol, one of the China, New York, and London boats, has arrived at Hong Kong in 16½ days from Sydney, a passage which has not been equalled.

MR. CLEMENTS MARKHAM, C.B., has been created a Knight Commander of the Order of Jesus Christ by the King of Portugal.

THE appointment of Mr. T. C. Hayllar as one of Her Majesty's counsel at Hong Kong is gazetted.

We are glad to hear that the efforts made to discover the perpetrators of the injury to the Hong Kong and Singapore Cable have been successful. The Macao Government have seized about 3 cwt. of wire stripped from the Cable and brought there for sale. The buyer is in custody and the capture of the thieves is expected shortly.

THE ATCHIN WAR.

The Amsterdamsche Courant publishes the subjoined extract from a private letter written by an officer of the Dutch army in Atchin. The letter, which is dated 1st April, says :—

I write only a few lines about the expedition. We are in a position that we don't comprehend; so many men of the fleet have died at sea, so many soldiers and ketting gangers (labourers) have died on shore, that operations seem to be at a stand-still. In some small States our flag has been hoisted, but this is not worth much, the territory being so enormous, whilst the blockade has now become more difficult, because the friendly States are not occupied by our troops, and they are permitted to trade, except in ammunition. It thus becomes necessary that a man-of-war should be stationed off the coast of each friendly State, and how the other non-friendly States are to be effectively blockaded I don't know. Hitherto much has been done on paper, but little has been carried out. Our policy in Atchin is a very dangerous one. It is incomprehensible why a third expedition should not be organised now that the moment is so very favourable to act, for instance against Simpang Olim and Telok Samowoi. When the East monsoons have set in, it will be impossible to proceed, but at this moment the weather is beautiful. According to the latest official news from Batavia all our troops will leave Atchin, except a garrison of 2,500, and only four or five vessels will remain here. We look at each other and do not understand it. In Dehli endeavours are being made to treat with the Sultan to acknowledge our supremacy for a certain sum a year, and it seems that they will be successful, but the greatest prudence will be necessary, because the boundaries of Dehli were visited some time ago by Atchinese missionaries, whilst the Battachs are very warlike. In Dehli as well as in Mengkalis Chinese have established themselves in great numbers on the coast. They are also settling themselves in Atchin.

The Haarlemsche Courant—a Dutch journal of neutral politics and of high standing—contains the following letter, written by a Dutch officer, dated from Atchin April 8 :—

The high expectations entertained of the results of the capture of the Kraton have not been realised, in so far that Atchin has not yet been conquered. It is, however, pretty certain that in the immediate neighbourhood of the territory occupied by our troops—and this is certainly the principal part of the island—the population will very soon become accustomed to our rule, and then we shall have won a good deal. When the foe sees that we are able to maintain our position during the rainy season, notwithstanding that communication with the men-of-war will be frequently interrupted, they will probably submit. The main thing, however, is an effective blockade, and this of course will be the task of the navy. You will have seen that the Government has been occupied in spreading proclamations. The Metalen Kruis was sent to the West Coast, the Citadel to the North, and the Timor to the East, with these proclamations. The tenor is as follows :—H. Exy, Van Swieten, &c., &c., communicates to the Chief of the . . . . State that the Kraton of Great Atchin has been taken by force of the Dutch arms; that the Sultan is dead, and that the people have fled, so that Atchin now belongs to the Dutch nation. The vassals of Atchin are therefore invited to transfer their allegiance to the Dutch Government. As a proof of their good intentions they have only to subscribe to a declaration stating that they acknowledge the Dutch flag; that they will suppress piracy and slavery in their States; that they will not conclude treaties with any other Powers without the permission of the Dutch Government, and that the population shall be forbidden to bear arms. The proclamation ends with the threat that, in case of a refusal the coasts will be blockaded and the population will feel the force of our arms. The proclamations are accompanied by letters from the Commander, stating that we intend to remain eternally (sic) in Atchin, and advising the chiefs to consider well before replying. I, however, hear that the success of these proclamations has not been brilliant. On the west coast two unimportant States have acknowledged our authority—(I do not know whether this happened before the proclamations were forwarded)—and Gighan has also submitted, but this State was for some time previous friendly towards us. Telok Semoi and Simpang have asked a delay of six months, Perlah for three months. In some places, however, no reply has been given. In Langsa, for instance —this is an unimportant Atchinese settlement between Tamangand and Perlah—the bearer of the proclamation (an Atchinese) was told that he had better go back as soon as possible, and the letter was not even read, but was returned unopened. Soengey-Rajah has submitted, —but this settlement is of no importance. The Atchinese chiefs on the left bank of the Tamiang river are all willing to acknowledge our authority. The subjected States are now permitted to export pepper and to import opium; trade is free, but the import of arms is, of course, prohibited.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 3.

The members of the Second Chamber re-assembled yesterday. The newly-appointed Minister of the Naval Department has laid before the members his budget, which shows a total of 10,901,596 61/100 guilders. The following are the outlines of the estimates, which clearly prove that our Navy is in a very poor condition. The Minister is—and every one will agree with him—of opinion that our Navy should be sufficient to provide—1. The means for our Home defence; 2. An auxiliary squadron in India, to defend our possessions there; 3. A small force in the West Indies to maintain our authority; 4. Some vessels for exercising crews and to carry our flag abroad. The Minister of course has only indirectly to do with the Navy in India, which is under the management of the Colonial Department. Mr. Kip considers that we require for our defence five ironclads, fourteen monitors, twenty-four gunboats, twenty-four river boats and torpedo boats; and for the auxiliary squadron three ironclads, and thirteen screw steamers, first, second, and third class. The five ironclads will be ready this year, while of the fourteen monitors four have still to be built; while a beginning must be made with the building of fourteen of the twenty-four gunboats, and of the twenty-four river boats twenty must be constructed. The first ironclad for the auxiliary squadron will be ready in 1875. Of the thirteen screw steamers required, there are at disposal, or will be at disposal this year: one steam frigate, five screw steamers first class; four second class; four third class; three fourth class and two other vessels.. The steam frigate Anna Powlona will be ready in six months. This is satisfactory, but within a few years all these vessels, a few only excepted, must become unserviceable. There is thus much to be provided for. Besides the monitors, gunboats, river boats and ironclads, it will be necessary to build within the next few years seven screw steamers of the first class, two of the second class, and two of the fourth class. The whole of these must be finished in ten years, and will involve an expenditure of 25,450,000 guilders. The Minister declines to build any more wooden vessels; all new vessels are to be of iron, or constructed according to the English composite system. Only a part of the vessels which are required can be built in the Government or in private yards; the ironclads must be ordered abroad—that is in England. Energetic measures are to be taken at once to improve the personnel of the crews, as there is at the present time a great scarcity of seamen. I think it is unnecessary to take up more of your space with this subject. If we had not been foolish enough to involve ourselves in a war with Atchin we could have provided the twenty-five millions in one year, and our navy could then have been completed. And what have we now for our money? The letters written by officers of the Atchin Army show that matters do not go on there as they should. A remarkable article has been published by the Arnhemsche Courant, a Liberal paper of high standing, and not at all inclined to shirk the truth. The article is too interesting to withhold from your readers a brief sketch of it. A colonel and 3,000 soldiers (it says) constitute the whole force left in Atchin to maintain our authority. Will Generals Van Swieten and Verspyck return to us as glorious conquerors under these circumstances? Is nothing left to be done in Atchin? What has become of our plan to conquer that Empire? The second expedition is finished; General Verspyck resigns, and General Van Swieten returns home. Matters thus seem to have been brought to an end, and now we may ask, What have we obtained for all the blood that has been spilt, for money expended? We are now preparing for a third expedition, as is proved by a Royal decree conferring the Atchin medal upon all those who took part in the expeditions in 1873 and 1874, or who may be sent to Atchin in time to come. Some days ago I was shown the Grand Cross of the "William" Order, which was conferred upon General Van Swieten. It is a beautiful specimen of silversmiths' work, and is of the kind hitherto only conferred upon princes.

In a former letter I told you that the opinion of the majority in the sections which had examined the new Reform Bill of the Home Minister was anything but satisfactory. It seems now that the Minister intends to come to a compromise in order to solve the question.

The Minister of the Colonial Department has laid before the Chamber a Bill to alter the East India budget for 1873. Some sections are to be augmented by a sum of f.766,100, while others will be reduced by the same amount.

I am informed that Messrs. Messchert Van Vollenhoven (Utrecht) and Van Hardenbroek van Lockhorst (Amersfoort) will shortly resign their seats in the Second Chamber.

Mr. Hubenet, engineer of waterworks, is appointed inspector on the island of Sumatra.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The last monthly auction of the Trading Company has given a most satisfactory result. The whole quantity put up was sold at 3 to 4 cents above the valuation. A good demand prevails at auction prices, that is for good ord. 55c. to 55½c.

RAW SUGAR.—The market is somewhat firmer. About 5,000 mats have changed hands at f.2 under November prices. The arrivals, however, are large, and there is only a very limited demand for refined, so that the above price cannot now be obtained.

TEA.—There are no transactions to report. The trade is inspecting the cargo ex Kirkland, which will be offered for sale on the 18th. A large quantity of the cargo ex Bellona has been exported because no paying prices could be obtained here.

RICE has met with a livelier demand; 1,668 bags ex Conrad, 850 bags ex Maria Sarah, 4,000 bags Rangoon, ex Warrior, have changed hands.

SPICES.—A good business has been transacted, especially in Nutmegs, No. 1, which are quoted at 205c., No. 2 at 195c., Mace and Cloves have met with less demand. The price of Pepper has gone up to 32c. to 33c.

JAVA TOBACCO.—Several lots, together about 6,000 bales, have found buyers, but prices did not transpire. The stock is relatively considerable, viz., 26,239 mats Java and Sumatra.

COTTON.—Dull; home trade of no importance, and no demand for export.

TIN is firm. The result of the last Trading Company's auction was most satisfactory, and an advance has since been paid of f.1. Billiton meets with a good demand at f.56, but holders decline to operate at that price.

RATTANS.—500 piculs, ex Java Packet, have found buyers.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVALS, MAY 28.—At Texel, from Batavia, Amazone; at Hellevoetsluis, from Batavia, Noach III; 29, at Texel, from Banjoewangie, Voorlichter; at Flushing from Banjoewangie (last from Table Bay), Samarang; 30, at Brouwershaven, from Banjoewangie, Henriette Elisabeth Susanna; at Texel, from Batavia, Madura (str.); from Banjoewangie, Jacoba and Christina Cornelia; 31, at Helvoet, from Banjoewangie, Hoek van Holland; at Brouwershaven, from Banjoewangie, County of Forfar; June 1, at Hellevoet, from Sourabaya, Dipton.

DEPARTURES, JUNE 1.—From Brouwershaven, for Batavia, Cornelis Smit, Cornelia Mathilda.

SHANGHAI AND THE WOOSUNG BAR.—MR. WADE'S DESPATCHES.

THE growth in wealth and importance of the foreign settlement of Shanghai is one of the most striking commercial phenomena of the present generation. Few cities in the whole course of history have had a rise more rapid, can boast of a success more complete, or look forward with juster confidence to a future of growing prosperity. For a series of years Shanghai has held the position of the chief centre of foreign commerce in the little known, undeveloped, and comparatively unexplored Chinese Empire, at the gates of which European enterprise, energy, and science, still await admission. Under most adverse circumstances the settlement of Shanghai has made most remarkable progress. Dreaded as agents of innovation by the Chinese Government, meeting with covert opposition, or, at best, but lukewarm support, from the foreign diplomatists at Peking, the Shanghai merchants have stedfastly held their own, have manfully fought their own battles, and have successfully guided the model Republic they have called into existence into a condition of peace, security, and prosperity, for which it would not be easy to find a parallel. The value of foreign real estate and property (independent of shipping) which has accumulated in the course of twenty years on the muddy banks of the Woosung river was estimated four years since by the Chamber of Commerce at nearly thirteen millions sterling; the value of its foreign trade is over forty millions sterling per annum; and yet it is evident to even the most casual and careless observer, that European trade with the Chinese Empire is still in its merest infancy, that it is capable of indefinite expansion when once the antiquated prejudices of the Chinese shall be broken down by force, or worn through by persistent and daily-increasing contact—and that the inevitable opening up of China and development of its boundless capabilities and resources, implies a growth of the model settlement to which it is difficult as yet to see or define the limits. That foreign trade will be one of the most powerful agents in killing the hydra-headed monster of Chinese prejudice and superstition there can be little doubt, and we rejoice to see that past success and present prosperity have but whetted the appetites and opened the eyes of our compatriots at Shanghai, and that they have determined to spare no effort and relax no exertion until they have secured in perpetuity those commercial advantages which the model settlement has hitherto enjoyed. The papers just presented to Parliament respecting the Woosung Bar and the river approach to Shanghai are well worth the attention of anyone who is interested in foreign commerce in the East. They show beyond dispute how necessary it is that commercial interests should be constantly and carefully looked after; how thoroughly supineness and laissez faire rule at Peking; how difficult it is to stir the Chinese to move, even in their own interests; and they show, too, how little real interest a British Minister can take in British trade, and with what calmness and composure he can accept Chinese promises, excuses, and subterfuges on a matter of vital importance to European commerce. In his letter No. 7, dated July 22, 1872, Mr. WADE informs Earl GRANVILLE that he had called the attention of the Chinese Government to the condition of the Woosung Bar, and had found, "on inquiry, that Mr. "HART had been authorised by the Yamen to expend a "considerable sum upon a dredging apparatus, to be em- "ployed specially at Woosung." With this inquiry and its result H.M. Minister appears to have been content, though he seems to have thought it necessary in his letter of the 26th March to rebuke the zeal and impatience of the Shanghai merchants, and to express a doubt whether any permanent improvement of the Bar could be effected. Urged again to action by Lord GRANVILLE, through the machinery set in motion by the Shanghai merchants, Mr. WADE went so far in December of the same year as to request the Admiral on the station to survey the Bar and report upon it; and, on Feb. 15 he informs Lord GRANVILLE that he has "every reason to believe"—what he had before stated as a fact in his letter of July 22—"that the "money required for a dredging machine will be placed, "if it be not already placed, at the disposal of Mr. HART."

In this same letter Mr. WADE again thinks it incumbent on him to pose before the British public as the apologist of the Chinese Government, for he adds significantly enough that "in cases of the kind the Chinese are not more expeditious than any other Government," evidently seeking to provoke comparisons between China and some imaginary delinquent and apathetic Government in the West. Mr. WADE does not appear to have thought it worth while to ascertain positively whether the promised funds had been actually granted, but, in the very inconclusive telegram which fitly closes a most unsatisfactory correspondence, he states, "I was given to understand that the necessary outlay was about to be sanctioned." Thus, even when galvanised into a little temporary activity on behalf of commercial interests, the British Minister appears to have satisfied his conscience by putting a most inconclusive question, and with receiving a vague promise in reply, the fulfilment of which he does not appear to have ever thought it worth while to ascertain or enforce. A taste for gerund grinding and grubbing for dead roots does not necessarily imply unfitness or incapacity for larger duties and more liberal views, but we do not hesitate to say that the career of Her MAJESTY'S present representative at Peking goes far to justify the general prejudice against making dilettante scholarship the test of fitness for a post which requires practical knowledge of men and things, freedom from sentimentality, and keen and clear appreciation of the unerring and inexorable laws which guide and govern international and commercial relations. But, it may be said, criticism is barren and futile, unless it suggests a remedy for the evil it points out. No unprejudiced man can read the correspondence on this subject without feeling convinced that the British Minister has failed in that urgency of application and insistance upon just requirements being complied with which are essential conditions to progress in a moribund Empire like China. What, then, is the remedy? It is provided, we reply, in the Treaty of Tientsin, the thirty-second article of which provides that the Consuls and Superintendents of Customs shall consult together regarding the erection of beacons or lighthouses and the distribution of buoys and lightships, as occasion may demand. For this purpose the privilege of collecting tonnage dues was conceded, and we maintain, without fear of contradiction, that the British Minister is bound to see that the large funds thus collected are applied in accordance with the terms of the Treaty. To expect that the Chinese authorities will, of their own accord, expend large sums of money in conserving the approaches to Shanghai and removing the Bar at Woosung argues a want of acquaintance with Chinese officialdom with which Mr. WADE cannot be charged. We fear that indifference is the cause of inaction, and that our Minister at Peking takes but a lukewarm interest in matters so narrow and sordid, so little capable of literary or rhetorical embellishments, as the merely manufacturing, commercial, and maritime interests of the British Empire. The well-known lines of a Conservative politician (slightly altered) represent, we fear, too truly, the opinions of Her MAJESTY'S Minister at the Chinese capital.

> Let laws and shipping, arts and commerce die,
> But let me once complete the "Tze erh Chi."

It is quite touching to observe the faith with which Mr. WADE evidently relies upon his confrére, Mr. HART, to accomplish the designs at which he merely ventures to hint. Mr. HART is to obtain funds, Mr. HART is to purchase a dredging machine, and Mr. HART is to see that the Chinese authorities do their duty. Can any sane person read over the Blue-books and Correspondence on China questions for the past ten years, and not see, beyond all doubt, that Mr. HART'S power and influence have been absurdly exaggerated and overrated? Far-sighted, liberal-minded, and thoroughly in earnest in the cause of progress, Mr. HART has, doubtless, strained every nerve, and availed himself of every opportunity to advance the true interests of China, to draw closer the bonds of intercourse, to multiply the points of contact, and to develop those commercial relations which are the truest and surest security for peace and prosperity. But while these efforts and representations have assuredly been made by Mr. HART, we fail at the present day to see in what direction or to what extent they have borne any practical results. The influences to which such constant representations, arguments, and demonstrations may give birth, will doubtless be felt in coming generations, but meantime we have to deal with the present, and we may well leave posterity to take care of itself. We think, therefore, that it is now high time to trust no more to such broken reeds as Mr. WADE has hitherto relied upon, but that it behoves us, speedily and effectively, to take the matter into our own hands, to agitate and memorialise and spare no efforts until the shameful inertness of the past ten years be redressed, and a joint commission be appointed under the treaty provision to investigate the question of the Woosung Bar, and to adopt such means for its removal as scientific engineers may suggest. Whatever may be the cost, the tonnage dues may well afford it, and we consider that the magnitude of the interests at stake imperatively call for immediate measures to conserve the approach to the great and growing centre of British commercial interests in the Far East.

THE RAID ON FORMOSA.

JAPAN is indeed making rapid strides in European thought and action. Like France, who went to war with Germany to avert a revolution at home, Japan has now entered on a war against the Formosans on the most flimsy pretext, in order to satisfy a discontented section of the population. According to the telegraphic advices we publish in another column, it appears that the Chinese Government make no remonstrance at the aggression. They ignore sovereignty in a portion of the Island of Formosa, and do not object to any foreign Power chastising these aborigines. This is a dangerous policy, and will certainly lead the Chinese Government into trouble. If they have not sovereignty over the whole island of Formosa they should have. This neglect to enforce their authority may have been excusable so long as no outside Power stepped in, but the moment such a contingency arose they should have at once asserted their right to dominion, and taken steps to enforce it. The Japanese of course assert that it is not their intention to possess themselves of the land, but simply obtain guarantees from the natives against ill-usage of any Japanese who may be cast on their shore. We all know how such a programme usually ends with a semi-barbarous people like the Formosans. If the affair does not lead to complications between China and Japan it will indeed be a marvel. For the moment it is a trump card in the hands of the Japanese Government to avert rebellions at home. We cannot help thinking, however, that they have not properly estimated the difficulties to be encountered on that very rocky and dangerous shore, and it is quite possible the Chinese may have the laugh of them.

CHEN LAN PIN and his two colleagues, Messrs. MACPHERSON and HUBER, the Commission appointed by the Chinese Government to inquire into the condition of Coolie emigrants in China, had left Havana, by last advices, and were about to proceed to Hartford, in the United States, where CHEN LAN PIN is chief of an educational mission. The Commission will remain there two or three months, in order to prepare a report for the Chinese Government. Visits have been paid to the chief sugar plantations of Cuba, innumerable statements have been collected from Chinese emigrants, and much valuable information has no doubt been procured, and will be embodied in the report. The Spanish Government have received the Commission with marked courtesy, and have facilitated in every possible way the objects of the inquiry.

IN another column will be found the text of a memorial from the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce to the Secretary of State for India, urging the completion of the half finished survey of Captain SPRYE'S proposed route from Rangoon to Kiang-Hung, on the South-Western frontier of China. The establishment of this route has now become of importance, politically as well as commercially, looking at the progress made by the French Government, in obtaining an approach to Burma and Western China through Cochin China and Tongkin.

AT the general meeting of the shareholders of the Messageries Maritimes, held in Paris on the 30th ult., the report of the directors was approved. The receipts for the year 1873 amount to f.52,444,758, the expenditure to f.46,357,020. The dividend declared for the year 1873 has been f.40 per share, equivalent to 8 per cent., against 10 per cent. in 1872. The diminution is accounted for by the increase in the Suez Canal dues.

H.E. SAMESHIMA, the Japanese Minister in Paris, has, we understand, been decorated by the French Government with the Cross of the Legion of Honour. We congratulate him on this mark of esteem, and trust that the rules in such matters in Japan are not like our own.

WE understand that M. DUPONT, Naval Engineer at Toulon, has accepted the appointment of Engineer to the Japanese Government, with the sanction of the French Minister of Marine. He will shortly proceed to the dockyard at Yokoska.

THE WESTERN CHINA ROUTE.

The subjoined memorial has been forwarded to the Secretary of State for India by the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce:—

To the Most Noble the Marquis of Salisbury, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

The Memorial of the Council of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce Sheweth—That your memorialists have viewed with great satisfaction the policy pursued by your Lordship in relation to Indian affairs, believing it to be calculated to have an important influence in developing the commerce between this country and the East.

2. That your memorialists, being deeply interested in cultivating increased trade with India and China, have for many years past urged upon successive Governments the completion of the survey of the route proposed by Captain Sprye from Rangoon to Kiang Hung on the Cambodia River, on the southern frontier of Yunan, one of the provinces of Western China, and they rejoice that your Lordship has sanctioned the completion of the survey that was commenced in 1867 by your Lordship's direction, but which was interrupted by your Lordship's successor in office, after one half of the route had been surveyed and favourably reported upon. The importance of a more direct route to the markets of Western and Central China has long been recognised by Russia and France, and it is a source of great satisfaction to your memorialists that your Lordship should also have appreciated the benefits likely to accrue to British commerce from the establishment of such a route, and they venture to press upon your Lordship the desirability of the survey being entrusted to engineers of repute, in whose report implicit confidence can be placed by those who may be wishful to embark their capital in the completion of a project which would bring England within thirty-five days of the confines of Central China, and open a market for British commerce which would compensate in some degree for the depression that has recently characterised our foreign trade.

3. That your memorialists, whilst deeply impressed with the importance of Captain Sprye's route, are anxious that your Lordship should not regard them as unfavourable to the other projected routes, such, for instance, as the proposed railway from Rangoon to Prome, the construction of which—notwithstanding there is already a good metal road between those places, and that it would run parallel to the river Irrawaddy, on which steamers ply regularly—may be deemed desirable for local reasons. Your memorialists trust, however, that such proposed railway may not be allowed to interfere with the completion of the survey of the route from Rangoon to Kiang Hung, in which this, in common with many other Chambers of Commerce, has taken so long and deep an interest, as one of great and manifest importance to the commerce of the United Kingdom.

4. That your memorialists are also pleased to be able to congratulate your Lordship upon the nomination of Andrew Cassells, Esq., to a seat in the Council of India, as they regard this appointment as indicative of your Lordship's desire to give a greater representation to commercial interests, which, in the opinion of your memorialists, have hitherto been unduly neglected. Your memorialists have long advocated the introduction into the Council of India of members specially conversant with commercial questions, in order that the Council might be the better enabled to advise upon matters affecting the commercial relations of this country with the East. The accompanying copy of a petition from this Chamber which was presented to the House of Commons in 1869 will indicate to your Lordship the views which they then held and still hold upon this important subject, and they venture to urge upon your Lordship the desirability of future vacancies in the Indian

Digitized by Google

Council being filled by the appointment of other gentlemen specially qualified to advise upon all questions affecting trade, your memorialists being of opinion that not fewer than four such members should have a seat at the Board.

Your memorialists therefore humbly tender to your Lordship their thanks for the policy which you have inaugurated in Indian affairs, and venture to express the hope that you will be pleased, as occasion presents itself, to carry out such policy, it being as they believe calculated to strengthen the commercial element in the Council of India without impairing its efficiency as regards purely Indian questions.

THE PERAK TREATY, &c.

The following letter has been published in reference to the action of Governor Clarke in the Straits. In any future communication of this nature it will be well for the framers to omit the request for "vigorous proceedings" with weak States. This is not to be obtained from our Government by writing, and likely to be frustrated by a certain section of M.P.'s who condemn all vigorous policy :—

To the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies.

Penang, April 11.

My Lord,—We, the Chamber of Commerce of Penang, being more deeply interested in the affairs of Perak and Laroot than either of the other two settlements of the colony, beg to express to your Lordship our sincere satisfaction at the manner in which his Excellency Sir Andrew Clarke has, so shortly after assuming the reins of government, succeeded in putting an end to the state of anarchy which has hitherto existed in those countries, and, for the last three years, almost entirely checked a most important branch of our trade. It is, therefore, with feelings of profound satisfaction that we regard the political settlement made by his Excellancy Sir Andrew Clarke, and trust your Lordship will be pleased to approve the same and to encourage similar vigorous procedures in all future dealings with States similarly situated under weak Governments on the Malayan Peninsula.

DAVID BROWN, Chairman, Chamber of Commerce.
P. C. PADDAY, Vice-Chairman.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S MEETING.

The half-yearly meeting of shareholders in the P. and O. Company was held on the 4th inst. ; Patrick Douglas Hadow, Esq., in the chair.

The report of the directors, which recommended an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, was given in our last issue.

The Chairman said it was not the custom of the Company to present any statement of accounts to the interim meeting, nor go at any length into the details of the Company's affairs, and therefore he should simply draw attention to a few of the salient points in the report. Dealing first with the Company's fleet, the tabular statement gave particulars, and the alterations to be noted since the last report was issued were that the Teheran had been completed and despatched on her first voyage to India, and that her sister ship, the Thibet, would be launched shortly. The board, having carefully watched the progress and building of these vessels, were satisfied that they would meet the requirements of modern traffic, and be in every way worthy of the company and sustain its reputation. Following up the policy which had been adopted for some years past, that of getting rid of the old vessels and replacing them with new ones better adapted to the requirements of modern times, the Delta had been sold to the Japanese, and the Candia, which had recently been employed in connection with the Ashantee expedition, had been advertised for sale. On the other hand, two vessels had been bought, which were originally laid down for another company, the Khiva and Kashgar. Coming to the repairs and renewals, he said the Sumatra was being fitted with new compound engines, and otherwise altered, which would increase her speed about one knot, diminish her fuel consumption 30 per cent., and increase her cargo carrying capacity. (Hear, hear.) The same remarks would apply to the Mongolia. Having gone through the details of the alterations and improvements being effected in other vessels, he described the exact progress, alluding specially to the Deccan, which had become a household word amongst the shareholders latterly, or at least at the meetings of the company. An accident having happened to her cylinder, the board decided at once to furnish her with new compound engines instead of repairing the machinery, and he believed that the shareholders would never have cause to regret having purchased her. (Hear, hear.) Alluding to the Suez Canal, he must speak in a tone of disappointment. The negotiations which were going on at the last meeting were still pending, but with this difference, that a general election having taken place and a new Cabinet formed, the company, having previously brought the negotiations up to a certain point, had to begin de novo. That being the case, and the negotiations being still pending, he would say nothing beyond this, that the canal was a great advantage to the commercial community, and that the board expected —this company performing a great public service—its representations ought to receive due consideration from the Government, and in a favourable manner, providing there was no corresponding disadvantage to the public service. With the simple announcement that it was the intention of the board, so soon as the matter was completed, to publish the whole of the correspondence in reference to the matter with the late and the present Government, he would dismiss the subject for the present. As to the decline in the dividend, he had nothing to tell the meeting beyond what was stated in the report. The expenses of the company had been greater in consequence of the canal, the cost of going through which was enormous, as the Canal Company was charging upon the net tonnage at the present time. It was perfectly erroneous to suppose—and he wished that clearly understood —that the company would make large profits by going through the canal ; and it was simply to keep up with the times and the advancing spirit of the age that the company desired its use. He concluded by moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. Davis (of Southampton) wished to know what amount the Delta was sold for.—The Chairman replied that the vessel was sold for a trifle less than the amount at which she stood in the company's books.—Mr. Davis was glad to learn that the diminution in the dividend was not due to the mishaps which had occurred to some of the company's vessels coming to London instead of Southampton.

Mr. W. W. Harris was not satisfied with the dividend, especially as other steam companies were maintaining their dividends despite the increased expenses. He therefore moved as an amendment that a dividend of £2 on each £50 share, and 8s. on each share on which £10 has been paid for the half year ending March 31, 1874, be paid to the proprietors entitled to receive the same on and after June 24, 1874.

Mr. Ward asked the chairman if it was his intention to allude to the pamphlet put forward by Captain Bain, and reply to the statements contained therein.

The Chairman said it was not the intention of the board to notice the matter, but to treat the misstatements with the contempt they deserved. He would of course leave the whole question in the hands of the shareholders.

Mr Ward then, at some length, drew attention to some papers circulated amongst the proprietors by Captain Bain, quotations from which he read, reflecting upon the directors and some of the officials, and handed in some photographs of original letters in reference to the Deccan, which letters, the chairman said, had been abstracted from the archives of the company.

Mr. Sutherland, one of the directors, replied at some length to the statements of Captain Bain.

Mr. Badderley wished for some explanation from Capt. Bain as to by what right he, as an executor of the deceased Mr. Anderson, retained letters which belonged to the company, and asked how they came into his possession.

Mr. Howell, the late secretary of the company, said that he was also one of the executors to the late Mr. Anderson's will, and in that capacity he sorted the letters and papers in the office, and sent away all those which belonged to the chairman, and no such letters as those photographed were among them. It was well known that for some time prior to his decease the late chairman was quite unable to attend to business, and the dates of those letters proved that they were written and received at the time when Mr. Anderson was unable to attend to any business.

Captain Bain made a lengthy statement in reference to the affairs of the Company, the principal being that the Company's fleet was considerably over-valued. In reference to the letters which he had photographed, he said he could not tell exactly whether the letters were among the late Mr. Anderson's papers at his private house or amongst those at the offices of the Company. (Cries of "Oh, oh.")

Mr. Howell said that the deceased gentleman was never in the offices of the Company from the 1st of January, 1868, up to the time of his death, the dates of the letters being January 2 and 3, and March, 1868.

After some further discussion, in which Mr. Fane de Salis, Mr. Spencer Herapath, the Chairman, Mr. Sutherland, and others, took part, the amendment was withdrawn, and the original motion for adopting the report was agreed to with only one dissentient.

Mr. S. Herapath said he was desirous of proposing a vote of confidence in the board of directors. (Cheers.)

The Chairman said such a vote was quite unnecessary—(hear, hear)—for the feeling of the shareholders, as evinced that day both by those present and by those who had done him the honour of writing to him, showed that the directors enjoyed the full confidence of the great body of the proprietary. (Loud cheers.)

The vote of thanks to the chairman and his colleagues for their conduct of the business of the company was proposed by Mr. Ward and unanimously agreed to, and the proceedings terminated.

THE SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.

A general meeting of the shareholders of this company was held in Paris on the 2nd inst. The report proposes to capitalise the seven unpaid coupons, including the coupon next due, which will amount in all to f.35,000,000, and for that purpose to create 400,000 bonds, which will be issued for the value of the coupons at f.85, repayable in forty years, and bearing a yearly interest of five per cent. from November, 1874. The report then states that the company, which had undertaken important works of improvement—viz., precisely such as had previously been asked for by the English representative in Egypt—had now entirely suspended their execution, and would confine itself strictly to keeping the canal in order. Of the works commenced it would only complete the repairs at the Port Said jetty. The report refers to the conflict which unexpectedly arose at Constantinople. It throws no responsibility on the Khedive, who, it says, had to obey the orders of the Sublime Porte, but blames the latter, which it declares to have been influenced by the British Minister. The report adds that England was put forward in this matter, and supported by the delegate in Constantinople of the Messageries Maritimes Company. M. de Lesseps yielded to armed force, but entered a protest and still maintained the rights of the company. The report concludes by asking that full powers should be given to the Administration of the Canal.

The meeting approved the conclusions of the report, ratified the measures taken by the President, Director, and Council, and granted them full power to negotiate for the solution of pending question with a view of recovering the rights of the company, which had for the time suffered, without accepting, an armed violation of its contract. The meeting also approved by a large majority the proposed measure of capitalisation for a settlement of the coupons in arrear. M. de Lesseps made a speech, in which he denounced England in very strong terms for venturing to interfere with the tariff.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA V. HENDERSON.

The following is the judgment in this appeal from a decision pronounced by the Supreme Court of Hong Kong, which was briefly reported in our issue of the 8th ult. :—

In this case the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China are the appellants, and Charles Paton Henderson and Colin George Ross are the respondents. The respondents were the plaintiffs in a suit brought in the Court of Hong Kong against the appellants, and they sought to recover from them in that suit a sum of money which they had received under a bill of lading endorsed to them by Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company. The plaintiffs in the first paragraph of the prayer of their bill ask, "That it may be declared that the assignment of the said bill of lading to the defendants was and is void, as being a fraudulent preference of the defendants." That point is given up, and no question now arises upon it. Then in the second paragraph of the prayer they ask, "That it may be declared that all sums of money received by the defendants in respect of fifty trusses of long ells, to which the bill of lading related, have been received by them in trust for the plaintiffs." Now the question is whether the bank received the proceeds of those goods in trust for the plaintiffs or on their own account. There is no doubt that Messrs. Lyall and Still in London purchased the goods from Messrs. Henderson and Company on the terms expressed in the letter of September 1, 1866, which is set out at page 5 of the record, viz., that the invoices should state that the proceeds of the shipments were to be remitted to Messrs. Lyall and Still—they being the firm in London—in first-class bank bills specially to meet the acceptance of Messrs. Henderson and Company's draft against the shipment. The goods had been paid for by an acceptance of Messrs. Lyall and Still, and the stipulation was that they should send them out to their firm of Lyall, Still, and Company in Hong Kong, and that the firm there should remit the proceeds to Lyall and Still in London, in order that they should therewith take up the bill which they had accepted in payment for the goods. It may be admitted for the purpose of this case that the stipulation that the proceeds of the shipments were to be remitted in first-class bill created a trust on the part of Lyall, Still, and Company not to pledge the goods, but so to deal with them that they should obtain the value of them, and remit the proceeds for the purpose of taking up the bill. But, assuming that such a trust was created between Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company and Messrs. Henderson and Company, the question is whether the bank were bound by that trust.

Now the bill of lading was sent out to Lyall, Still, and Company, and on the 14th of December they, having it in their possession, endorsed and delivered it to the bank. The consideration for which they endorsed it is set out in the answer of the defendants. Paragraph 16 states, "The defendants admit that during the month of November, 1866, they purchased from the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company for the sum of £15,000 sterling certain bills of exchange drawn by the said firm upon a firm trading in England under the name of Chalmers, Guthrie, and Company, upon the understanding and agreement that the said advance should be covered by shipping documents for silk or other China produce; the said sum of £15,000 sterling was paid and advanced by them to the said firm at the time they purchased the said bills upon the promise and understanding that the said shipping documents should be delivered before the departure of the next outgoing mail for Europe." It appears then that the bank purchased bills of exchange, to the extent of £15,000 from Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company, and that they paid them the amount upon the stipulation that Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company were to hand them over shipping documents to the extent of the bills. They then go on in paragraph 17 to show that Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company failed to perform that agreement. They say, "The defendants do not know whether the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company were unable to deliver to them such shipping documents as aforesaid, or to repay the said advance, but they admit that the said firm failed to do so notwithstanding that they were urgently pressed to do so by the defendants; and the said firm having been threatened by the defendants with immediate legal proceedings in the event of their failing to fulfil their said contract without further delay, promised the defendants that if they would abstain from commencing legal proceedings against them, and would consent to release them from their engagement to furnish the said shipping documents for silk and other China produce, and allow the said sum of £15,000 sterling which had been paid to them in advance for the said bills upon the faith of their undertaking to deliver the said shipping documents as aforesaid to constitute an ordinary debt for money lent, they would deposit with the defendants other security for the repayment of the said sum; and they offered to deposit with the defendants at once in part fulfilment of such proposed substituted arrangement, a bill of lading for goods of the value of $10,000 or thereabouts,"—the bill of lading in question—which they stated had already been sold by them to arrive, upon the understanding that the said bill of lading or the goods represented therein would be returned to the said firm upon payment by them to the defendants of a sum equivalent to the said value thereof. Then paragraph 18 says :—The defendants admit that they assented to the proposed arrangement in substitution of the original agreement which the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company were unable to fulfil as aforesaid; and the said firm in part performance of the said substituted agreement, and in consideration of the said loan and of the said original agreement, handed to the defendant the bill of lading for fifty trusses or bales of long ells, mentioned in paragraph 18 of the said bill of complaint, which said bill of lading was endorsed by the said firm and was stated by them to represent the said goods which they had sold to arrive, and which were to be redeemable by them on the terms aforesaid.

It appears that the bill of lading was endorsed and handed over by Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company to the bank in consideration of the bank's releasing them from the obligation which they had come under to hand over shipping documents of the value of £15,000, and of their undertaking not to take the legal proceedings criminal or civil which they had threatened. It appears, therefore, to their lordships that there was a sufficient consideration for the endorsement of the bill of lading by Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company to the bank.

Then, had the bank notice of the trust which had attached to the proceeds of those goods in the hands of Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company? The bill does not charge that they had notice of the trust or of the terms upon which the goods had been sold by Messrs. Henderson and Company. It is not found by the learned judge who tried the case that they had such notice, nor is it probable that such a notice would have been given. Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company were under an obligation to deliver shipping documents to the bank; they were unable to do so, and the bank threatened legal proceedings against them, and to proceed against them criminally, and then, in order to induce the bank to stay these proceedings, Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company say, we will treat this £15,000 as a loan, you release us from the obligation to give the shipping documents, and if you do that we will endorse and hand over to you this bill of lading. Is it likely that when they wanted to induce the bank to release them from the obligation to deliver shipping documents, and to accept the bill of lading in lieu thereof, they would have said we will hand over a bill of lading which is subject to such a trust that when the goods are sold you will not be able to receive the proceeds? It is most improbable that they would have given such a notice to the bank when they endorsed the bill of lading under the circumstances stated.

The bill of lading having been endorsed to the bank for a valuable consideration, and without notice, passed the legal interest in the goods to the bank. Apparently from the statement in the answer the goods were actually delivered over to the bank, so that the legal interest passed to the bank not only by the delivery of the goods, but by the endorsement of the bill of lading. But even assuming that the bank did not obtain actual delivery of the goods, there is no doubt that the endorsement of the bill of lading for valuable consideration passed the legal interest in the goods to the bank.

There is a distinction between this case and the one which was cited, of Rogers v. the Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, 5 Moore's P.C.C., N.S., 538. In that case the question was whether the goods could be stopped in transitu, and whether the endorsement of a bill of lading prevented the unpaid sellers from stopping the goods in consequence in the insolvency. Sir Joseph Napier in delivering the judgment of that case said :—"The general rule so clearly stated and explained by Lord St. Leonards, is that the assignee of any security stands in the same position as the assignor as to the equities arising upon it. This as a general rule was not disputed, but it was contended that the case of a bill of lading is exceptional and must be dealt with on special grounds. Doubtless the holder of an endorsed bill of lading may in the course of commercial dealing transfer a greater right than he himself has. The exception is founded on the negotiable quality of the document. It is confined to the case where the person who transfers the right is himself in actual and authorised possession of the document, and the transferee gives value on the face of it, without having notice of any circumstance which would render the transaction neither fair nor honest. In such a case if the vendor is unpaid one of two innocent parties must suffer by the act of a third, and it is reasonable that he who by misplaced confidence has enabled such third person to occasion the loss should sustain it." His lordship cited the well-known case of Lickbarrow v. Mason as an authority for that position. Then he went on to consider whether there was any valuable consideration for the endorsement of the bill of lading, and showed that it was endorsed and handed over in pursuance of a previous agreement of the 26th December, 1866, which is also set up in this case, by which the parties agreed to transfer all goods and bills of lading or other documents for all goods "now on the way hither, to arrive in December, 1866, or January, 1867." The bill of lading was not handed over, nor had it even arrived at the time when the agreement was entered into. Sir Joseph Napier goes on to say,—"But in this case, at the time of the assignment Maclean had not possession of the documents. Nothing was advanced on the faith of them. There is merely a general description of the documents expected to arrive, without knowing their contents, or how far they might be limited or qualified. The property of the firm in the goods expected was not only subject to special stipulations in the contracts of sale in the case of two of the three parcels, but was also subject in all the three to the lien of the unpaid vendors." Then he says,—"Doubtless the vendor's claim cannot prevail against the claim of a transferee for value given on the faith of a negotiable security fairly and honestly taken. To the extent to which he has so given value, he has a prior claim. But the rule is founded on the reason of it as already explained, cessante ratione cessat ipsa lex. Where there is no advance made or value given upon the faith of the documents, where the object is simply by a sweeping clause to gather in whatever may be got to recoup the creditor of a debtor who had become insolvent for an improvident advance made upon the faith of a totally different security, where upon the true construction of the assignment no interest passed that would place the assignee in a better position than the assignor, it appears to their lordships that such a transfer so made, and under such circumstances, cannot be held sufficient to defeat the vendor's claim.' But the present case differs from that case, inasmuch as on the 14th of December, 1866, the bill of lading was in the hands of Lyall, Still, and Company, and they endorsed and handed it over to the bank for the considerations to which allusion has already been made. It was handed over at that time for a valuable consideration.

Now it must be taken that the consideration for the deposit by the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company with the defendants of the said bill of lading was the release of the said firm from their original contract to supply shipping documents of China produce, the substitution of a new agreement, and the abandonment of the threatened legal proceedings. The defendants admit that on the 22nd December, 1866, the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company did execute the writing or document set out in the 21st paragraph of the said bill, and that the said writing or document purports to be an assignment of the property therein mentioned to the defendants jointly with the Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris. They admit that the said assignment and the facts relating thereto were the subjects of a suit recently heard and decided. It is, in fact, the same agreement as that set up in Rodgers's case; but they say that the deposit of the said bill of lading for the said fifty trusses of long ells by the said firm of Lyall, Still, and Company with the defendants was a transaction anterior to and independent of the said assignment, and had no relation thereto or therewith. Their Lordships are of opinion that the transfer of the bill of lading in this case was for a valuable consideration. It was transferred on the 14th December, and had no relation to the document, which was executed on the 16th of December. This case differs entirely from Rodgers' Case, because the bill of lading in that case was not handed over at the time, but was handed over in pursuance of the agreement generally to hand over all bills. In this case it was handed over specially at the time in consideration of the release and of the abandonment of proceedings for not delivering over the shipping documents. It therefore appears that the bank did obtain the legal right to the goods by the endorsement of the bill of lading for a valuable consideration, and whether they afterwards actually received possession of the goods or not they had a legal title to them, without notice, and that legal title was not affected by the equity arising out of the circumstances under which the goods were sold by Messrs. Henderson and Company to Lyall, Still, and Company.

This case comes entirely within the case of Henderson and Company v. The Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, in which their lordships held that the bank got the legal title to the goods, and that that legal title was not affected by the equity arising from the terms upon which the goods were originally sold.

It was suggested that probably the bank gave back the bill of lading in consideration of Lyall, Still, and Company's handing over to them the proceeds which they had received from the purchasers—that Lyall, Still, and Company having got the proceeds which had been paid to them in anticipation, they handed over those proceeds, got the bill of lading back, and then handed over the goods to the purchasers. Even if Lyall, Still, and Company did sell the goods and receive the proceeds from the purchasers, and hand over the money to the bank, the bank would not be effected by the equity between Messrs. Lyall, Still, and Company and Messrs. Henderson and Company as they had notice of the terms upon which the goods were sold, and when Lyall, Still, and Company handed over to the bank the money which they had received as payment for the goods the bank got a legal title to the money and was not affected by any equity which might exist between Messrs. Henderson and Company and Lyall, Still, and Company, arising out of the agreement under which the goods were sold. Therefore, under no circumstances were the bank liable or affected by the equity existing between Messrs. Henderson and Company and Lyall, Still, and Company, and they cannot be declared to be trustees for Messrs. Henderson and Company of the proceeds of the goods.

Under these circumstances their lordships will advise Her Majesty that the suit cannot be maintained, that the decision of the learned judge ought to be reversed, and that the bill be dismissed with costs in the Court below, and the costs of this appeal.

Literature.

At a meeting of the Anthropological Institute Mr. Hyde Clarke read a paper on "Researches in Prehistoric and Protohistoric Comparative Philology, Mythology, and Archæology, in connection with the Origin of Culture in America, and its Propogation by the Sumerian or Accad Families." It dealt with the relations of language to culture, as cultural philology. A sketch was given of the succession or chronology of languages, the earliest places being assigned to the pygmean and cannibal races, and the distribution of the various classes in America, Africa, and India, being dealt with. With regard to the epoch of the monument-building peoples, affinities of language were shown among these; and Mr. Clarke proposed to employ Sumerian for the class, and Accad for the single language. Starting, probably, from High Asia, one branch passed as Accad to Babylonia, and another to India and Indo-China, including Pegu and Cambodia (Kemer). Thence traversing the Pacific by Easter Island, and following the Agaw, a migration passed into America, founding the Aymara domination in Peru, and that of the Maya in Yucatan.

The Oriental for May contains a chapter on Persian Poetry, and some interesting papers on Indian matters, among others one entitled "The After Consequences of the Famine." There is a letter on China from a Hong Kong correspondent, in which the writer describes life in Hong Kong in a style which would scarcely be found in the more serious communications of the regular newspaper correspondent.

In the Academy of May 30 Sir Rutherford Alcock reviews Mr. Adams's "History of Japan" and Mr. John Frederick Lowder's translation of the "Legacy of Jeyas deified as Gongen Sama." Writing of the former work Sir Rutherford says:—"It is not an easy task to write a popular history of Japan; not that there is any lack of stirring incident and all the elements of interest which make the charm of other histories, but simply because the people themselves are so alien in race and type, and until very recently so disconnected with everything European that they are outside the range of our sympathies." Mr. Adams has, says the reviewer, executed his task, as far as it has gone, with great care. With regard to Mr. Lowder's translation Sir Rutherford writes:—"This little work is of the highest value, as giving a clear insight into the policy and maxims of government of one of the ablest and most distinguished rulers Japan has ever had, written at a time when by his personal influence he could not only establish a whole code of laws under his own supervision, but make these and the principles and maxims on which they were founded the governing ideas of succeeding generations of Japanese."

The Geographical Review for June opens with a chapter on the "Railways of Peru," by the Editor. In an article entitled "Singapore," a very interesting sketch of the island is given. The writer received the account of the taking possession of Singapore by the English from Mr. Archibald Ritchie, who was present. Although the position of Singapore would lead to the belief that it had been selected for a settlement, owing to its being the key to the entrance to the China Sea, yet, according to the writer of this paper, the choice of the island as a British station was far more the result of accident than of design, the expedition that founded the settlement having actually sailed for another destination.

In the June number of Blackwood an article appears entitled the "Romance of the Japanese Revolution." The writer—whom we believe to be a gentleman who represented a London paper at the Vienna Exhibition—after dealing with the history of the hostilities between various parties in Japan, asks with regard to the future:—"We should be glad to know, for example, who are the real rulers of the country; what is the actual state of feeling under the apparent calm; how the foreigners are regarded, for they have undoubtedly been at the bottom of everything; what has become of the hordes of disbanded swordsmen whose occupation is gone, and who are reduced to penury; whether the secularised and disendowed priests of a once popular religion still retain their hold on their devotees, and are disposed to preach a holy war by invoking the support of the interests that have suffered; and last, but not least, comes the financial question—indeed, it must take precedence of all the others, in states that rank as Japan aspires to do. Will the new financial machinery, so suddenly improvised, support the strain of those heavy burdens that are the consequence of this general imitation of all things European?" On the subject of the leaders of the revolutionary movement the writer says:—"But what are we to think of the conduct of the daimios themselves? The Princes of Satsuma, Chosiu, Hitzen, and Tosa had overthrown the Shogun, apparently because he was menacing their feudal authority, or at least because he seemed likely to increase his own in virtue of his more intimate relations with the strangers. And the first step they took after this victory was to resign all they had been fighting for, and infinitely more than anyone would have dreamed of exacting of them, even had they been prostrated in a series of disastrous campaigns. They volunteered the abolition of the feudal system, to which they owed their very existence. They offered guarantees for their sincerity by resigning the bulk of their vast territories into the possession of the Crown. They surrendered their valued titles of honour. They consented to receive Crown préfets into their hereditary dominions, to administer them absolutely in the name of the central authority." That the writer believes that Japan is being civilised too quickly is apparent from the following remarks:—"Japan has transformed itself into a civilised kingdom, and has advanced itself more decidedly in many respects than some of the ancient monarchies of Europe. It has State Councils and Privy Councils—a House of Representatives, subdivided into committees; it has sixty-six arrondissements, each with its préfet; it has railways and telegraphs, mints and educational establishments with European professors; it has sent its legations abroad, resident or with roving commissions; and it has a national debt that bids fair to increase rapidly if the credit of the country holds good. But if the successive coatings of civilised varnish have not been laid on far too quick, the atmosphere of Japan must be altogether exceptional."

By the last mail from the Straits Settlements we learn that Colonel Low's work on the "Soil, Climate, and Agriculture of the Straits Settlements of Penang, Singapore, and Malacca," with notes by Messrs. D. Aitken and J. R. Logan, is to be republished.

Naval and Military.

The Thistle and the Curlew are to be paid off and recommissioned at Hong Kong, their new crews proceeding to China in the Victor Emanuel. The Thistle was commissioned at Sheerness on October 25, 1870, and left England on December 6, 1870; and the Curlew at the same port on March 28, 1871, she having left England on April 27, 1871.

The Victor Emanuel, screw line of battle ship, was paid out of commission as a military hospital ship at Portsmouth on the 29th ult., and recommissioned on the following day by her captain, George H. Parkin, for service as depôt ship at Hong Kong. She will probably be reported ready for sailing from Portsmouth for China by the 20th inst.

The Army and Navy Gazette prints the following remarks upon the disposal of the naval command in China :—

There is no truth in the report that Vice-Admiral Chads has been nominated to succeed Sir Charles Shadwell as Commander-in-Chief in China. It is, however, generally known that he and others of his rank are desirous of obtaining so desirable an appointment, but on the other hand it was a matter of notoriety to the whole service, that had Mr. Goschen remained in power Rear-Admiral Beauchamp Seymour would have been selected to carry his flag to the Celestial Empire, and as the two senior naval members of Mr. Ward Hunt's Board occupied the same posts under his predecessor, we do not see how they can fail to support their former colleague in the attainment of his wishes in this respect. Admiral Seymour has never concealed his desire to be actively employed, and probably would prefer China to any other station if his own inclinations were consulted ; but, as a matter of course, he would never refuse to serve where duty calls him. The China command, with one solitary exception, has always been given to a Rear-Admiral, and this exception was made in favour of a very distinguished officer—the Hon. Sir Henry Keppel. Now, without the least desire to detract from the claims or merits of Vice-Admiral Chads and the other gentlemen who may be aiming for the appointment in question, we do not believe that they seriously consider themselves as being on a level with Sir Henry Keppel. Moreover, if our recollection serves us rightly, we believe that the whole body of the Rear-Admirals (and Admiral Chads was then one of them) protested either publicly or privately against the so-called innovation of appointing a Vice-Admiral to what was termed the birthright of a Rear-Admiral, and if there was any weight in the argument brought forward against Sir Henry's nomination it must now be materially increased in the case of Admiral Seymour, who if there had not been a change of Ministry would undoubtedly have received the appointment from which it is now sought to relieve him. If Mr. Goschen had so wished he might have left a minute on record indicative of his intentions ; which, although not positively binding on his successor, would in all probability have had the desired effect in compliance with old-established custom. Again, it would scarcely be worth while to mortify the feelings of so able and zealous an officer as Admiral Seymour undoubtedly is, by refusing to ratify the engagement of a previous First Lord of the Admiralty. The precedent would be bad, and might hereafter lead to complications which, for the sake of the well-being of the service, it would be desirable to avoid.

A large staff of workmen is being employed in Portsmouth Dockyard on the Victor Emmanuel, which is to be receiving-ship at Hong Kong. The Victor Emmanuel was formerly a two-decker line-of-battle ship of 91 guns, and was called the Repulse ; but on the visit of the King of Sardinia to England, at the close of the Russian War, his Majesty went to Portsmouth, and the Repulse being the first ship he inspected, she was re-christened, after the name of the King. She continued as a line-of-battle ship till last year, when she was converted into a hospital-ship for the Ashantee War, and was specially fitted for the purpose, with the latest hospital appliances. Being intended as a receiving-ship, some alterations are, of course, necessary. The whole of the cots and other hospital fittings on the main-deck are being removed, and some general repairs are being executed. It is possible that a gun or two will be placed on the upper deck for signal purposes. A saloon galley for cooking, on the latest principle, has been erected, and on the orlop-deck are a range of store-rooms ; but the ice-making machine, which answered so admirably during the war, is to be removed. Her lower masts formerly belonged to the Royal Oak. Her crew will number about 200 officers and men, against 820 when she served as a line-of-battle ship. She is to be out of the dockyard sands by the 20th inst.

The following officers who last served on the China station have received appointments as under :—Lieutenant A. S. Hamilton (in the Juno, from 1871 to 1872), to the London, 72, screw ship, Devonport ; Sub-Lieutenant H. J. Jeffrey (in the Iron Duke in 1872), to the London; Mr. W. Ironmonger, chief engineer (in the Thistle, from 1869 to 1872), to the Nymph, 5, screw sloop, Sheerness ; Mr. F. B. Baverstock, paymaster (in the Nassau, from 1870 to 1873), to the Adventure, 2, screw troopship, Chatham ; Mr. W. Armstrong, carpenter (in the Princess Charlotte, from 1869 to 1871), to the Boscawen, training ship for boys.

Captain Henry Boys, R.N., has been appointed to succeed Captain Hood, C.B., as Director of Naval Ordnance. He entered the Navy in 1837, and in 1863 he obtained command of the Pelorus, 21, fitting at Devonport for China, which ship he commanded until September 12, 1864, when he removed into the Barrosa, 21, on the same station, and on January 30, 1867, was paid off. Captain Boys has been employed at sea over thirty years.

The Adventure, 2, iron troop-ship, 2,510 (1,794) tons, 1,227 (400) horse power, lately completed for sea at Sheerness, is to be forthwith commissioned by Capt. John D'Arcy, with a crew of 148 officers and men. Her first voyage will probably be to Japan.

The Iron Duke, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Shadwell, K.C.B., on the China station, is expected to leave for England in September. Sir Charles's command terminates on the 29th of August.

We hear that the first battalion of the 10th Regiment, now stationed at Singapore, is likely to remain there some time longer.

Monetary and Commercial.

At the meeting on the 4th inst. of the P. and O. Company the report of the directors was adopted, and an interim dividend was declared at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

The National Provincial Bank of England announces a half-yearly dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and a bonus of nine per cent.

At a meeting of the board of the London and River Plate Bank, the usual interim dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year ended 31st March last was declared.

Close holiday was maintained in the Manchester Market up to the end of last week, and business is scarcely yet resumed. The market exhibits a quiet tone, with only small demand for either Yarns or Goods. Producers show some disposition to make small concessions on last week's quotations, but there is no pressure to sell as far as regards the better descriptions. The lower qualities, however, find scarcely any market, and holders would be glad to realise at easier rates.

The Japanese Nine per Cent. Loan stands at 106 to 108, the Seven per Cent. at 96 to 98.

The Eastern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of May, 1874, amounted to £30,225, and to £29,852 in the corresponding period of 1873. The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph Company (Limited) for last month amounted to £18,879, and to £15,616 for the corresponding period of 1873.

At the Bankruptcy Court, Mr. J. Waddell, accountant, was appointed the trustee, under the failure of Messrs. Rodocanachi Brothers, merchants, of Ethelburga House, Bishopsgate-street. The liabilities to rank are estimated at £20,000, with assets not yet ascertained. The case of Messrs. Oppenheim and Schrader, merchants, of Mark-lane, who have presented a petition for liquidation of their affairs by arrangement or composition, has also been brought before the Court. The liabilities are returned in the petition at £900,000, the assets being roughly estimated at £700,000 or £800,000. Mr. Arthur Cooper, public accountant, was appointed receiver and manager.

The demand for the Continent has been sufficient to absorb the arrivals of Bar Silver, the orders are, however, nearly completed, and a slight reduction in price may be looked for within the next few days. The Mexican dollars received by the West India and American steamers were but few, and consequently realised a slightly better price ; they were sold at 58½d., a rise of ⅛d. per ounce.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Hindostan, which left Southampton June 4, was—in gold, to Galle, £115 ; in silver, to Penang, £2,083 ; to Singapore, £85,492 ; to Hong Kong, £10,000 ; to Shanghai, £8,420 ; total in gold, £115 ; in silver, £105,995.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

WEAKENING WEATHER.—The sultry summer days strain the nerves of the feeble and decrepit, and disease may eventuate unless some restorative, such as these purifying Pills, be found to correct the disordering tendency. Holloway's medicine gives potency to the nervous system, which is the source of all vital movements, and presides over every action which maintains the growth and well-being of the body. No one can over-estimate the necessity of keeping the nerves well strung, or the ease with which these Pills accomplish that end. They are the most unfailing antidotes to indigestion, irregular circulation, palpitation, sick headache, and costiveness, and have therefore attained the largest sale and highest reputation.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

Our advices from the Japan Ports by the present mail are of no later date than those received by Pacific mail on the 8th inst. and published in our last issue.

CHINA.

PEKING.

A correspondent writes:—For some ten days back I had noticed that the centre of the public road leading from the palace of the Emperor to the Temple of the Sun, lying outside the east gate of the city, was being levelled and repaired, and that the carts, horses, &c., were prevented by ropes and notices from using that portion of the thoroughfare. We were at the same time given to understand that the Emperor would in a few days visit the Temple of the Sun. Yesterday afternoon a proclamation from her Britannic Majesty's Legation gave British subjects resident in Peking the following information for their guidance:—

"Her Britannic Majesty's subjects in Peking are requested to take notice that the Emperor of China will proceed to-morrow from the east gate of the palace by the great east gate of the city to a temple outside the walls, and that the streets along which his Majesty goes and returns will be closed to all passengers.—By order.

"W. GRAHAM SANDFORD, Secy. to H.B.M.'s Legation.

"British Legation, 20th March, 1874."

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 26th April; the P. and O. mail from London March 6 arrived out on the 19th April. The following items of news are from the North China Herald:—

This is always a dull season in Shanghai, as regards business. All the tea and silk is sold, and a month has to elapse before looking for new supplies; all the public companies have held their annual meetings, and people take the opportunity of going in for amusement.

The S. V. C. Spring Rifle Meeting has extended over four days of the week, and has produced some good shooting under varied circumstances of wind and weather. The International Match was won, after a good contest, by the Scottish team, who scored 179 points against the English 161. The meeting is the most successful one that has been held in Shanghai, and we are sure that we only express the feeling of the whole volunteer corps in congratulating Lieutenant Sim, the Musketry Instructor, on its success; for there can be no question that this is very greatly due to the energy with which he has worked out the arrangements.

The first Yacht Race of the season was held in weather which was simply perfect for the occasion—a fresh breeze and bright sun; and a large number of spectators availed themselves of invitations to follow it. The race for the Challenge Cup was one of the closest ever run here, the Nimrod coming in barely three minutes ahead of the Phantom, but losing to the latter by three-quarter of a minute, owing to the time concession she had to make on account of her longer water line. The Houseboat race was won by the Widgeon.

Judgment has been given in H.M. Supreme Court in the cases lately tried there relating to the Alhambra. The Captain's claim for a balance of account is allowed. Cheap Jack and Co.'s claim for provisions supplied is allowed, but that for advances disallowed.

A commemorative service has been held at Saint Joseph's Church for the souls of the crew and passengers of the Nil. It was numerously attended.

We understand that after very deliberate consideration of the designs sent in for the proposed new Municipal buildings the Council have decided that in their opinion the one submitted by Mr. W. Kidner is the most suitable. Plans were prepared by five competitors, to whom, in accordance with the resolution passed at the last Ratepayers' meeting, the Council award Tls.200 each. All the designs were based upon the principle of allowing the work to be proceeded with and become available sectionally, but the one to which the Council have given preference is, we learn, more especially characterised by this prudential consideration. It is, we believe, intended to submit the designs for public inspection at the Municipal offices for a week before the forthcoming Ratepayers' meeting.

The absence of any advice of the arrival of the American barque Scotland, 441 tons, which left Shanghai for Swatow on the 14th March, with a cargo of beancake, leads to some apprehensiveness regarding her safety. From the date of her departure, it is probable that she would have encountered the gale of the 16-17th March, which caused the loss of the steamer Manchu. It is hoped, however, that she may only have been driven far to the south, when, supposing her rigging had suffered damage, she might be a long time in working back to her destination.

We have received the twelfth annual report of the Peking Hospital, for 1873, by Dr. Dudgeon. The income during that period was Tls. 547, and the expenditure only Tls. 380. Yet we are glad to learn that the record is one of continued success. There has been no great variation in the number of patients prescribed for, but the influence of the hospital is said to be yearly extending. Its connection with the higher and official classes has been year by year steadily increasing, and in no year have more officials been attended, or more grave cases treated, than in the one under review.

The case of the proprietors of the North China Herald v. Lane, Crawford and Co. was heard before Sir E. Hornby. The plaintiffs applied for a summons calling upon the defendants to show cause why a certain agreement for submission to arbitration entered into by the plaintiffs and defendants should not be made a rule of Court. An award had been made in favour of the plaintiffs by Mr. Mouat, but a dispute having arisen the plaintiffs filed a petition to enforce compliance with such award. His lordship ordered that the submission be made a Rule of Court.

Our Peking correspondent seems to have been fortunate in getting a glimpse of the Emperor on his way to the Western tombs; at any rate he gives minute and interesting details of the procession. His Majesty started on the 10th, and is expected back on the 16th. Before entering the west gate of the city, the Empress Dowager and the Empress Consort halt at a temple, where their respective relatives will be admitted to interviews with them on a family footing. This is an occurrence of extreme rarity. The annual interviews at the palace are confined to a rigid form of ceremonial. His Majesty's absence is the signal for a holiday in the diplomatic world. The Peruvian Minister and suite have gone to the Great Wall, as have, also, two foreign gentlemen, who are trying to move the Woosung Bar. The weather has become warm, and every one is putting on thinner clothing. It is expected that the Russian Minister will ask for an audience when the Emperor returns from his excursion.

A Ningpo correspondent writes:—Mr. Beebe goes away by to-day's steamer, with the good wishes of the whole community; and I write to let you know the fact, in order that the records of Ningpo to be found in extenso in your columns, may not fail mention of the most gratifying fact to be found therein—that although we are a small community, of different nationalities and conflicting interests, one man at least has managed to live among us twelve months without a quarrel, and can go away leaving regrets alone behind him.

Our Hankow correspondent writes:—We had a most successful spring meeting last week. The weather was everything that could have been desired, excepting a heavy thunder shower on the afternoon of the second day. There were no serious accidents, and no disputes whatever. The race ball came off on the 14th, and was well attended and much enjoyed. I learn that we are to have a bowling match between our club and your senior alley, on Tuesday, the 21st inst.

The river abreast of Kintoan Beacon has been the scene of a very melancholy accident. Captain Kofod, one of our oldest pilots, having occasion to go down to the place indicated to raise an anchor that had got foul of the telegraph cable, allowed his son Charles, a bright and promising boy of eight years, to accompany him, in the pilot schooner Maggie, on board of which, besides the usual crew, there also was Mr. Dummel, the chief officer of the Telegraph Company's steamer Orsted. About 10 A.M. they had succeeded in getting a chain attached to the anchor, and were engaged in heaving it up by the Maggie's bows, when Capt. Kofod, fearing lest the strain should cause anything to snap, directed his boy to go aft out of the reach of danger. About half a minute afterwards he was startled by a cry from one of the crew that Charles was overboard, and rushing aft saw his boy drifting away with a very strong ebb, about ten yards off. Mr. Dummel, an able swimmer, heavily dressed and booted as he was, plunged at once into the water and rapidly gaining on the boy, got his arm round him, and got the child's arm on his shoulder. The schooner's dingey was at once lowered and pulled by the crew to the rescue, Capt. Kofod standing on the schooner paralysed with terror. On nearing Mr. Dummel and the child, the crew rounded the dingey to, and held out an oar to Mr. Dummel to catch. The latter had been now a considerable time in the water, and was much exhausted by the down-draught of his wet clothes, boots, &c., besides his burden, and as he caught at the oar with both hands the child seems to have slipped beneath his arm and gone down. He must have been swept away by the under current, as he never rose to the surface again. With sad hearts they returned to Shanghai; and getting notices printed in Chinese, offering $100 reward for the recovery of the body, these were last night taken down for distribution among the Chinese fishermen, from Woosung downwards.

At Messrs. Bisset and Co.'s land auction, the garden part of the lot known as Probst's Garden was bought in at Tls. 190 a mow, and the portion built over (measuring nine mow with eighty-nine one-story Chinese houses) for Tls. 6,000. The piece of land on the French Road known as Birdseye's Garden was bought in for Tls. 400 (about forty taels a mow). A plot on the Soochow Creek adjoining Trefancha was sold for Tls. 80 a mow.

The case of the China and Japan Trading Company v. W. Holme, the master, and others, the owners of the s.s. Gordon Castle, was heard before Sir E. Hornby. It was an appeal from the decision of H.B.M.'s Consul at Hiogo in reference to the liability of the defendants on a bill of lading for short delivery of certain pig iron to the consignees in Japan. Against the item, as it appeared in the bill of lading, were notes in print and writing "weight unknown," the defendants accepting the statement of the London shippers, which was also appended to the item in question, in the form of a note, "weight 100 tons," to be correct. The cargo on delivery was found to be short. His lordship, after hearing evidence, held that he was bound by the case of Jessell v. Barth, which practically decided that where a bill of lading contained the words "weight and contents unknown,' whoever signed it, could not be held responsible, and that although in this case a statement of the weight had been made the captain had never undertaken to ascertain whether the statement was correct. There was nothing left for him to do but confirm the judgment of the Court below.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 2nd May; the P. and O. mail from London March 20 was received on the 28th April. We take the following items of news from the Daily Press:—

The Macao correspondent of the Daily Press writes in reference to the coolie trade on 29th April:—You will be surprised to learn that his Excellency the Governor has quite suddenly given orders for suspending the "free emigration" through this port, which, as recently mentioned, it was proposed to establish. This has caused not a little consternation, coming after he had granted licenses to more than one person to open "inns" for the reception of the coolies; and his unexpected action will doubtless cause considerable loss to those who have been to the expense of hiring and furnishing houses. It is stated that the cause of this departure from the scheme he proposed to carry out was a letter from the Viceroy of Canton, asking him if he could kindly explain what was meant by free emigration through Macao, seeing that he had told him a few months since that the emigration trade would cease on the 27th March last.

Mr. Armero has left for your port, en route for Japan, &c., with his family. He was accompanied to the wharf by H.E. the Governor, who went with him as far as Hong Kong. The band played some lively airs on his departure. H.E. returned from Hong Kong the same evening.

We hear that a public ceremony in honour of the memory of the late Coelho do Amaral, formerly Governor of Macao and subsequently of Mosambique, will take place shortly in the Lusitano Club. Governor Amaral was always much respected by the Portuguese Communities, both at Macao and here, and we understand the ceremony will be largely attended.

The Pawtuxet, which was formerly an American gunboat, and has recently been repaired at the patent slip, has left for Annam, in order to settle the unlucky Dang Wee dispute; and it is understood that a representative of the plaintiff goes in her, and takes the letter which the Chief Justice stated in Court he would write to the King. We trust that this will lead to an adjustment of the matter.

A parade of the Government and Volunteer Fire Brigades has taken place on the Praya, near the Harbour Master's office. The large Government steam fire-engine did not appear to work so smoothly as it might have done, or as the other engines did.

We understand that No. 16 of the China Punch will make its appearance forthwith. This quite upsets the rumour which was afloat to the effect that the last number was to have been the concluding one, and we congratulate the promoters upon the very prompt manner in which they have set any doubts upon the subject at rest.

Messrs. Siemssen and Co.'s steamer China has left for Shanghai on her hundredth trip, and has been fortunate enough to perform them all without a single accident.

A cricket match was played at Amoy on the 24th April between H.M. Iron Duke, Cadmus, Frolic, and Hornet, and the Amoy Cricket Club, which resulted in a victory for the navy by seven wickets.

The Circus has been under the patronage of his Excellency Sir Arthur Kennedy. The audience on the occasion was perhaps the largest that has yet visited it. The spacious marquee was crowded in every part, and it seemed almost incredible that Hong Kong could have turned out such a number to witness any performance. This of itself speaks volumes for the entertainment. We have frequently expressed our opinion about it, and the longer it stays it seems always to improve. The programme for the past three nights presented some novel features, and as usual was well arranged. It is unnecessary to particularise any of the "events." Those who have seen them know what they are and how well performed. Those who have not had better go and see. We may mention, however, that almost every member of the company was encored. The performance was very successful, and had an additional attraction in the band of the 80th Regiment, which was kindly permitted by Colonel Smith to be present. There was also a large attendance in the evening.

A case of considerable interest to those who are in the habit of dealing in shares has just been decided in the Summary Court. The matter—Brown v. Boyd—arose in consequence of the sale of eight shares in the Indo-Chinese Sugar Company by the Plaintiff to the Defendant. The sale was made prior to the payment of two out of three calls, and there was a clause in the Company's deed of partnership that no transfer of shares should be made before three calls should have been paid up. Accordingly the transfer was not effected in the Company's books, but the seller merely signed a transfer which was left blank for the name of the transferee. The result was that notwithstanding that Brown had sold the shares, they continued to stand in his name in the company's books, and in consequence he had to pay up an amount of $700, the calls upon the shares. His Honour summed up the matter in a very concise and clear judgment, and held that "as soon as the two brokers had settled the terms of sale, a contract arose binding the plaintiff to part with, and the defendant to accept, the whole interest of the plaintiff in those shares, whatever it might be; in other words, the defendant agreed thenceforth to take the place of the plaintiff in respect of the shares, and having done so the law implied that he also promised to indemnify the plaintiff from all future liability upon them."

The Daily Press says:—The subjoined eminently lucid letter has been received. The only allusions to the Manila Lottery in this paper were one or two paragraphs concerning the winners, and we certainly learn for the first time that giving a piece of news of that description is illegal:—

Crown Solicitor's Office, 28th April, 1874.

Dear Sir,—It having been brought to the notice of the Government that references are often made in your newspaper to the Manila Lotteries, I have been desired to inform you that the same are illegal, and to request, therefore, that the same may be discontinued in the future.

I am, dear Sir, faithfully yours,

To the Publisher of the Daily Press. EDMUND SHARP.

We are informed that a very extraordinary affair has taken place just outside the harbour. A telegram came in from Cape D'Aguilar to the effect that a disturbance was going on between either pirates or mandarin junks and a fleet of merchant junks bound to Hong Kong. One account of the matter is that the vessels which were fired upon were arrested for the purpose of obtaining a squeeze from them. The police took the matter in hand, and we believe it is now being investigated. It seems something new for mandarin junks to be firing upon traders so close to the harbour, and it is high time something were done to bring the cruisers to order.

The steam ferry Fei-Wan from 2 P.M. till 4,30 P.M., whilst it was low water, got into a complete fix. On arriving alongside the jetty at Yow-mah-tee, in consequence of a very low tide and the wind setting on to the jetty, she could not get out for fear of running on the ground, as, had she backed, the wind would blow her inside the jetty, and if she steamed ahead, the beam wind would place her on shore before she got head way. Thus she was locked in for two and half hours.

SIAM.

—o—

BANGKOK.

The Siam Advertiser has the following items:—

We learn that Captain John Bush, K.C.W.E., has been honoured with an audience of his Majesty the King since his return, and that he took this occasion of showing the King a copy of the London Gazette, in which was recorded the official notification granting Mr. John Bush permission to wear his Siamese decoration. We are also given to understand that it is the intention of the Siamese Government shortly to publish a Government Gazette in the Siamese language, which shall be on the model of the London Gazette, and will contain notices of all official appointments, State papers relating to foreign affairs, &c. This idea was started about five months ago, but could not be carried out, owing to want of some competent person as editor. This deficiency has now been filled up, and the paper is to be edited by a Siamese nobleman of undoubted ability, and who is not only well versed in official matters relating to Siam, but is also well acquainted with the etiquette of foreign Courts.

It is both gratifying and surprising to find how rapidly some of the Siamese Princes are acquiring mastery of European languages, especially in English. Many of them are now able to maintain a conversation in English with a degree of ease seldom met with in any foreigner; and that they are acquiring and cherishing a taste not only for the language, but for the benefits arising from its acquisition, may be derived from the fact that many of them have sent to England for books on all kinds of worthy subjects, such as natural history, astronomy, sacred and secular biography, mechanics and other kindred subjects. It is a rare thing to visit the house of any of the Royal Princes without noticing a well-read English newspaper or journal of some kind. This is the kind of progress which should be cultivated, and which will at no distant time materially help forward the true prosperity of the country.

His Majesty the Supreme King of Siam delivered an address on the promotion of his Royal Highness Somdetch Chowfa Mahamala to the rank and title of Kroma Phra. This talented and conservative Prince has received well-deserved appreciation in his recent promotion. His Royal Highness's fifty-fifth birthday occurred on the 24th April.

IMPORTS.

TIENTSIN.—The steamer Yen-tai, direct from London, had reached this port. Her cargo had been greatly exaggerated by the natives, still it was very considerable, and until it is disposed of there is not much hope for our own market.

HANKOW.—Large sales of Grey Shirtings had been made, but for other goods there had been no inquiry.

SHANGHAI.—No improvement had occurred in the market. Extreme quietude had prevailed, and quotations for the most part showed a further decline.

MANILA.—There had been no favourable change in the market. Values of Plain Staples as also of Coloured Goods were nominally unchanged, owing to the small amount of business done in them.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns issued for the one and five months ended the 31st May last show a further heavy falling off compared with the corresponding periods last year. The exports for May last were £21,229,247, against £22,607,082 in 1873, and £20,721,303 in 1872. For the five months they were £98,463,601, against £106,326,474 in 1873, and £99,380,183 in 1872. The exports of cotton yarn show an increase in quantity of 8½ per cent., but a decrease of 1⅞ per cent. in value; cotton piece goods a decrease of 58 per cent. in quantity, but only 8⅜ per cent. in value; linen yarn an increase of 6 per cent. in quantity, and about 4½ per cent. in value; linen piece goods a decrease of 11½ per cent. in both quantity and value; woollen yarn a decrease of 8⅞ per cent. in quantity, and 7⅞ per cent. in value; woollen cloths an increase of 2¾ per cent. in quantity, and ⅝ per cent. in value; and worsted stuffs a decrease of 10 per cent. in quantity, and 13⅝ per cent. in value. Iron and steel show a decrease of 26⅜ per cent. in quantity, and 26¾ per cent. in value; while in coal, coke, &c., manufactured, the decrease in quantity is only 12 per cent. as compared with 32⅝ per cent. in value.

The imports in May amounted to £28,560,292, against £34,385,907 in 1873, being a decrease of £5,825,615, chiefly in living animals, cheese, coffee, copper, wheat, cotton, pork, rice, saltpetre, sugar, tallow, tea, wine, and wool. The imports for the five months ending May reached £152,461,389, against £151,680,705 in 1873. Corn exhibits a decrease of 27 per cent. in quantity, and 18¾ per cent. in value; raw cotton a decrease of 40 per cent. in quantity, and 52¾ per cent. in value; flax an increase of 42½ per cent. in quantity, and 38 per cent. in value; and wool a decrease of 37⅝ per cent. in quantity, and 45¾ per cent. in value. In raw silk there is an increase of 11 per cent. in quantity, but the decrease in value is as much as 66 per cent. Tea shows a decrease of 1¾ per cent. in quantity, and 4⅞ per cent. in value. The quantity entered for home consumption is 11,729,502 lbs., against 11,933,994 lbs., or a decrease of 1⅝ per cent. In coffee the decrease in quantity is 37¾ per cent., and in value 26½ per cent., while the quantity entered for home consumption shows a trifling increase. Articles of general consumption, sugar excepted, mostly show a decrease in both quantity and value. It will be seen that the decrease in the value of the exports is chiefly in coal and iron and steel, and in the value of the imports chiefly in raw silk, raw cotton, wool, and coffee.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

Telegrams dated the 9th inst. report the opening of the Shanghai Tea Market at 22½ to 23 taels. The export of new season's teas from Hankow and Shanghai up to the 13th inst. had been 16,000,000lbs.

The Foochow Tea Market was opened on the 10th inst. by the purchase of 24,000 chests at prices three to four taels higher than at the opening of last season. The Braemar Castle has completed her loading at £4 10s., and will probably sail this day. There are eight steamers on the berth.

The P. and O. Company's extra steamer Khedive left Victoria Docks on the 13th for Aden, Galle, Madras, and Calcutta. The Mirzapore left on the 14th for Southampton, where she will embark mails and passengers, leaving on the 18th. The Bokhara has taken her berth at the Victoria Docks. The new steamer Kashgar is now taking in her boilers at Victoria Docks, and will undergo some alterations in her fittings.

Literature.

The Legacy of Iyeyas (deified as Gongen-Sama). A posthumous Manuscript in one hundred chapters. Translated from three collated copies of the Original by J. F. LOWDER, Barrister-at-Law, Legal Adviser to the Board of Revenue and the Customs of Japan. Printed at the Japan Herald Office, 1874. London: TRUBNER and Co.

The importance of this little book, to which we briefly alluded in our last issue, is greater than its size would, at first sight, seem to indicate, and a careful perusal of it will throw some light upon what has hitherto appeared to foreigners inexplicable with regard to the Japanese. The great Iyeyas, one of the most celebrated warriors and statesmen in Japanese history, and the founder of the Tokugawa Dynasty, usurped the office of Shôgun in 1602, and it was he who bequeathed this testamentary "Legacy" to his descendants. The code he drew up, says Mr. Lowder, for the guidance of his successors was, until the year 1868, when his dynasty was overthrown, held of full force and in great veneration by the people of Japan. The original was kept in Kiôto; but a certified copy hung in the Hall of State in the Shogun's palace in Yedo, and on certain days every Japanese noble above a moderately high grade had access to it. After giving a brief résumé of Japanese history (from an article which appeared in the Japan Times in 1867), in order to show the interest attaching to the "Legacy of Iyeyas," Mr. Lowder concludes his introductory remarks with the following emphatic words respecting its author:—"A strong man's will left a mark upon the history of Japan that time has not succeeded in effacing in two centuries and a half. With foresight almost superhuman, Iyeyas looked into the future, and by the creation of a political machine nearly perfect, assured to his dynasty a security almost unparalleled. There is nothing in history to compare with the Legacy of Iyeyas, except the will of Peter the Great. In it the student of Japanese History will find the solution of many difficulties; and its readers will have before them the constitution under which this country was governed until the time, within the recollection of all, when it gave way to the irresistible momentum of a higher civilisation."

We proceed to notice some of the more striking chapters, or rather sections, of this remarkable "Legacy." The acute founder of the Tokugawa dynasty foresaw that "disputes will occasionally arise between public functionaries and those employed in the household (of the Shôgun), regarding precedence in rank," and he therefore lays down in Section XIV. very minute and detailed rules on the subject. In the following section he gives excellent advice to his successors:—"In my youth," he says, "my sole aim was to conquer and subjugate inimical provinces, and to take revenge upon the enemies of my ancestors. Yuyô teaches, however, that 'to assist the people is to give peace to the Empire,' and since I have come to understand that the precept is founded on sound principle, I have unhesitatingly followed it. Let my posterity hold fast this principle. Any one turning his back upon it is no descendant of mine. The people are the foundation of the Empire." Section XVII. will explain the aversion of the Japanese, in olden times, to all changes and innovations; "In the absence of precedents, forbid the making of new ground, new watercourses, and so forth, and the forming of any new measures of what kind soever. Know that disturbances always arise from such innovations." In the twenty-first section Iyeyas lays down clearly and in detail the modes of commending virtue and rewarding merit, and also the modes of punishing crime for the repression of vice, which latter have a strong flavour of the distant age in which the "Legacy" was written. Passing over some less important dicta, we come to Section XLV., which explains the troubles caused in past years by the insolence of the Samurai:—"The Samurai are the masters of the four classes. Agriculturists, artisans, and merchants may not behave in a rude manner towards Samurai. The term for a rude man is other-than-expected-fellow; and a Samurai is not to be interfered with in cutting down a fellow who has behaved to him in a manner other than is expected." Section LII. is also a curious and significant relic of a barbarous age. In regard to revenging injury done to master or father, it is granted by the wise and virtuous (Confucius) that you and the injurer cannot live together under the canopy of heaven. A person harbouring such vengeance shall notify the same in writing to the criminal court; and although no check or hindrance may be offered to his carrying out his desire within the period allowed for that purpose, it is forbidden that the chastisement of an enemy be attended with riot. Fellows who neglect to give notice of their intended revenge are like wolves of pretext, and their punishment or pardon should depend upon the circumstances of the case. The testator's views with regard to the proper duties of husband and wife show an acute perception of the fitness of things. "It is a righteous and world-recognised rule that a true husband takes care of outside business, while a true wife manages the affairs of the house. When a wife occupies herself with outside affairs, her husband loses his business, and it is a pre-evidence of ruin to the house; it is as when a hen is afflicted with a propensity to crow at morn, and an affliction of which every Samurai should beware. This again is an assistance in the knowledge of mankind." We cannot, however, go more fully into the details of this curious Legacy, and in conclusion we will but quote two more sections (XCVI. and XCVII.), which will render more intelligible the behaviour of the Japanese towards foreigners in past years. The following are the directions of the great Shôgun on this head :—On those occasions when foreigners come to offer presents they should be entertained with proper abundance and uniform politeness. The beauty and elegance of the military accoutrements and the caparisons of the horses should be made to appear to the utmost advantage. From the port at which the ship arrives, as far as the Yedo capital, whether the road lie through Government or other territory, the castles and moats and all the houses on the way should be in a thorough and complete state of repair, that the broad and extensive affluence and the intrepidity of the military power of the Empire may shine forth. The whole management should be undertaken by the Ministers of the Shôgun. When foreign vessels arrive by chance at our shores information of the fact shall immediately be given, and by means of written communication through an interpreter their business shall be learned. According to circumstances they shall be treated with commiseration and benevolence, or with dignified reserve. In all cases a guard shall be placed on board for their restraint. If we were disposed to be strictly critical we should say that Mr. Lowder is not a very skilful translator, but we, nevertheless, thank him for this version of an interesting and important document, and we would here give expression to a hope that others may follow his example and shed still further light on the hidden secrets of the history and institutions of Japan.

In the "Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society," Vol. 7, Part 1, some very interesting notes on the Sinhalese language are given by Mr. R. C. Childers, late of the Ceylon Civil Service. There is, in addition to many other valuable papers, one by T. W. Rhyl Davis, on three inscriptions of Parakrama Bahur the Great, from Pulastipura, Ceylon.

Naval and Military.

Lieutenant H. J. Johnson, a sergeant, and ninety rank and file, are under orders to join the service companies of the 80th Regiment serving at Hong Kong. Sub-Lieutenant S. W. Cameron has been examined for promotion.

Orders have been received at the School of Military Engineering, directing a detachment of non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Engineers to be held in readiness to embark for China about the end of the present month.

The Amethyst, 14, composite corvette, Capt. Alfred J. Chatfield, is refitting at Devonport. It is not improbable this ship may be ordered to the China station, in the place of the Modeste, broken down at Bombay.

Lieut. W. Grant, 2nd Battalion 6th Regiment, has been appointed aide-de-camp to Major-General the Hon. F. Colborne, C.B., lately appointed to the China command.

Captain W. Whitla, of the 10th Regiment, is under orders to join his battalion, serving at Singapore.

Sir William Fergusson and a number of other eminent medical practitioners have waited on the First Lord of the Admiralty to represent to him the unsatisfactory state of the naval medical service. One of the speakers mentioned, as an instance of the unpopularity of the service, that not half-a-dozen of the 1,700 or 1,800 young men who had left Guy's Hospital in the last twenty years had entered the navy. Mr. Hunt replied that the question had been under the consideration of Government, and Lord Guilford (who was present) was charged to investigate it.

The Marquis of Salisbury has settled a grievance under which some majors in the Artillery and the Engineers serving in India have been labouring. The grievance was that, although majors, they had only the pay of first captains. From the beginning of next month it is said this will be remedied, those officers receiving the pay and allowances of their rank.

TEMPORA MUTANTOR.—The following courteous note has been received from the India-office in reply to the memorial of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce, given in our last :—"I am desired by Lord Salisbury to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 4th inst., forwarding a memorial from the Council of the Huddersfield Chamber of Commerce, expressing their approval of his Lordship's Indian policy. In reply, I am to express to you his Lordship's thanks for this communication, and to assure you that the views therein expressed will receive his Lordship's careful consideration.—(Signed) HORACE WALPOLE."

AN Indian newspaper has been furnished with what purports to be a sketch of the treaty concluded with the King of Burmah by the French Embassy at Mandalay, but it posseses no guarantee that the document is correctly described. The first article of the new treaty merely relates to the conditions on which Frenchmen may buy land in Burmah ; the second settles the question of tariffs ; the third that of respective consuls ; the fourth is unimportant ; but the fifth pledges France to help the King of Burmah in case of difficulties with England.

THE Eastern and Australian Company's chartered steamer Jeddah arrived at Singapore from Brisbane on the 11th inst., three days early. Australian mails are due in London on 20th July.

THE will of Mrs. Elizabeth Gregory, wife of the Right Hon. William Henry Gregory, Governor of Ceylon, has been proved under £35,000.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 10.

Again an interpellation about Atchin in the Second Chamber. The moderate Conservative, Mr. Fabius, asked the Ministry for some elucidation. He demonstrated that Mr. Van Swieten had not fulfilled his plan of taking possession of Atchin and remaining there until the Empire was entirely subdued, and a treaty was concluded. Had he—asked Mr. Fabius—returned because the Government thought that the war had been brought to an end, and that the Atchinese people would become more peaceful ; or was it the intention of the Chief Commander to return again to Sumatra when the rainy season was over, in order to continue the military operations ? It is important that the nation should know these things. He also wished to know some particulars about the dismissal of the brave and meritorious General Verspyck, the idol of the East India army. The Minister of the Colonial Department replied that he did not yet possess the latest reports of General Van Swieten, but it was known on the 18th of April that both the commanders and the greater part of the expedition would return to Batavia. It was on that date that the interpellation of Mr. Messchert van Vollenhoven took place. But nobody asked at that moment for any information. It was, the Minister stated, not necessary to leave the whole military force in Atchin. But nobody could foretell what would become necessary. It is possible that the opposition in Atchin is not yet crushed ; it is quite possible that a third expedition will become necessary. But nothing is decided thereabout, and likewise it is not at all certain that Mr. Van Swieten will return to Atchin. Regarding the honourable dismissal granted to General Verspyck, Mr. Fransen van de Putte said that this officer felt offended because General Van Swieten was charged with the chief command of the second expedition. He had intended to ask for his dismissal, but he afterwards considered that it would take place when the second expedition was brought to an end. Mr. Nierstrasz was not at all satisfied with the Ministerial reply. He was of opinion that the second expedition was a failure. The navy was anything but in a satisfactory condition, and the stratagem of the Commander-in-Chief ought to be disapproved. Private letters from officers state that Van Swieten depended upon good luck. A third expedition will be necessary, but the situation has become critical; we were now in a wasps' nest, and the end of our troubles could not be foreseen. Mr. Storm van 'sGravezande said that the member who had just spoken used some unfair expressions regarding Mr. Van Swieten, which were only based upon communications published in private letters. Mr. Hoffmans, on the other side, demonstrated that the second expedition was a failure, and he remarked that the necessity for a third expedition was the fault of General Van Swieten. The Minister answered that on a former occasion he had clearly proved that the war was necessary and just. The fact that the Kraton was taken was of much more signification than was stated by some members. He did not care what grumbling officers might say in their private letters addressed to some papers. He would repeat that nothing was certain about a third expedition being required, but should that be necessary no supplementary troops would be wanted. The Minister of the Naval Department added that the naval force would be reinforced, and that without delay two screw steamers would be forwarded. Mr. Fabius ended his interpellation by proposing that the Second Chamber would thank General Verspyck for his eminent services to the country. This motion created an endless discussion ; objections came from every part of the House. Some demonstrated that this would be an act of bad policy, others disliked such a vote because the Government would be hurt by it, but several members were of opinion that Mr. Verspyck deserved a vote of thanks. Mr. Van Naamen proposed a delay. The Colonial Minister objected to the intervention of the Chamber in this matter, and in the end both the proposals were rejected, that of Mr. Fabius by 36 against 26 votes. It seems that we shall never hear le fin mot of the Atchin war.

In the yesterday's sitting the Minister of the Colonial Department stated that he had forgotten to say on the previous day that the Governor-General had approved of the appointment of Colonel Pel as the military and civil commander. The instructions given to that officer agree with the policy of Mr. Van Swieten. He stated also that it was not the intention to conclude treaties of peace, but acts of submission.

It was thereupon permitted to Mr. Gratama to ask the plans of the Government regarding the railway system in Java ; was it, he asked, still the intention to grant concessions, and if not, would the State build railways in Java on account of the Government ? Mr. Fransen van de Putte answered that he would prefer State railways rather than be without them at all. The Government would in this sitting lay before the members a Bill to provide Java with railways. It, however, was now impossible to enter into further details. The third and last interpellation regarded the Northern Canal, and it need hardly to be stated that the answer was still more vague than in the former interpellations.

Rumours are circulating again about the marriage of Prince Alexander. So much is certain—he has left the Academy, and he will reside henceforth in his own palace. It is, however, doubtful whether he will choose a wife. Another palace will be built in the Hague in behalf of the Minister for Foreign Affairs. A credit of 130,000 guilders was asked for this purpose, and this caused a profusion of jeremiads.

His Majesty returned from his seat Het Loo to the Hague, where he will remain to the 20th, when he will make a trip abroad. It is said that the Queen will leave the Residency to start for a watering-place in Austria, in order to restore her health.

It seems that there is an enormous want of subaltern officers for the army in Java. High premiums are offered to those who are inclined to start for Java during the current year.

The well-known sugar-broker, Mr. J. A. Ruel, has published a circular, "Les Causes du malaise actuel en Hollande." He states that the deplorable condition of the sugar trade must be ascribed to the bad laws and the bad system of selling. He protests against the non free trade principles, and the convention of 1864. He advocates liberty.

The Steam Company Java has issued a loan of f.1,000,000.

KOREA REDIVIVUS.

THREE years have passed away since our columns were rife with stirring news from Korea, giving accounts of the American hostile expedition, intended to open up relations with the Government by force of arms, which ended in a fiasco. Since then the iron-bound coast of that peninsula in the Far East has scarcely been visited by foreign men-of-war, or merchant ships; and the interior of the mysterious country beyond has relapsed into its primitive exclusiveness. Hitherto nearly all the intelligence concerning its physical features, people, and Government have been communicated by foreigners, who have gleaned it from without; and the relations of the body politic with the outer world have been entirely of an external character. No news ever emanated from persons in authority regarding the political or social condition of the realm. By late advices from China we learn through our contemporary the North China Herald, that rumours have reached Shanghai of a "revolution" having broken out in Korea, among the ruling classes, for the purpose of deposing the despotic Regent KAKURIN, and placing the young King as de facto sovereign on the throne. As there is no corroboration of an actual outbreak by armed partisans, we shall wait for further news to credit the statement that a "revolution" had begun. Probably it may turn out that the youthful monarch, being nineteen years of age, has attained his majority to ascend the throne, and he has been advised to discard the ex-Regent from his Councils. This is the more likely, as the Queen Dowager, who has had the training of the young King, is friendly disposed to foreigners and native Christians, if she herself be not a convert; while the late Regent is bitterly opposed to both. If that be the case, then there is sure to be two factions intriguing for supremacy. This we shall soon know through Peking news, announcing the forthcoming installation of the King of KOREA, on ascending the throne, by the Emperor of CHINA. In the meantime, viewing a probable change in the exclusive policy of the Government of Korea towards foreigners, the time is opportune to glance at the foreign attempts to open up the country.

Without referring to the intercourse of surveying ships and shipwrecked mariners with the inhabitants and local authorities, we shall confine our notes to the dates and circumstances of those events which have made Korea notorious as a sanguinary region to be explored by foreigners. The first to penetrate into the interior across the northern frontier by the so-called "Gate of Korea" were indefatigable French missionaries, engaged successfully in the "Propagation of the Faith" among the native heathens. The first mission was established at Séoul, the capital, by Bishop IMBERT, in 1837, where he was joined by two priests named MAUBAUT and CHASTAU. On the 21st September, 1839, these three ecclesiastics suffered martyrdom by decapitation in the public execution ground of the capital. In March, 1844, Bishop FERREOL succeeded in restoring the mission at Séoul, and afterwards established four others at different stations throughout the country, which in time were placed under the charge of coadjutors, who came secretly to risk their lives in the holy work. For twenty-two years they zealously pursued their task, increasing to the number of twelve missionaries, who had baptised upwards of fifty thousand converts. Then arose in March, 1866, a dreadful persecution, by order of the Regent, when thousands of the converts were hunted, tortured, and executed, if they did not renounce the proscribed religion. Nine of the French missionaries were seized and killed in cold blood, while their mission establishment at the capital was burnt to the ground, and its valuable contents destroyed, including an elaborately compiled Korean dictionary. Three missionaries managed to escape and reach China, where they reported the massacre to the French Minister at Peking, who instructed Admiral ROZE to proceed with a squadron and troops to demand reparation. In October he ascended the Salee River, leading to Séoul, where he encountered the Koreans in arms, had a desperate engagement with them at the fortified town of Kanghao, which he sacked and demolished, and then left the country without obtaining any satisfactory reparation from the Korean authorities. In July of the same year, an American schooner named the General Sherman made a clandestine visit to Korea, having on board two Englishmen, one of whom was the Rev. Mr. THOMAS, whose interesting journal of a previous visit was published in our columns. The leader of the party, a Frenchman, came into collision with the authorities of a town they had reached up some river, when the exasperated inhabitants sent fire rafts down upon the ship, which ignited the hull, and the flames reaching the magazine, vessel, cargo, crew, and passengers were all blown up, and not one saved. This catastrophe brought the United States naval representatives forward to demand an explanation, as the vessel sailed under the American flag. In 1868 a United States frigate made its appearance at a town not far from the capital, where the principal functionary furnished the captain with a straightforward circumstantial statement, showing that the General Sherman was on a filibustering expedition.

This explanation seemed to satisfy the American Government, for nothing further was heard about it. At the same time these negotiations were going on in the month of May, an extraordinary expedition was fitted out at Shanghai, and embarked on board a German owned steamer, the party, besides the captain and crew, consisting of one German (leader), an American (cash provider), and a French priest, as principals, with one hundred and ten Chinese coolies, and twenty-one Manilamen as auxiliaries. They went into the interior of Korea at an obscure place, ostensibly to conclude a commercial treaty with the authorities, every man being armed with a musket, their real purpose being to rifle a tomb where the French priest avowed that he saw the late KING buried in a solid gold coffin. This they tried to get at, but did not succeed in the attempt, while their designs were frustrated by the appearance of Korean soldiery, with whom shots were exchanged, which killed and wounded a few. After this the buccaneers were glad to get away and return safely to Shanghai, where the American was tried by his Consul, and the German afterwards sentenced to imprisonment by the Supreme Court at Hamburg. Then came the last hostile expedition under Admiral RODGERS, of the United States Navy, who received his instructions from Washington to negotiate peacably with the Koreans if he could. But it turned out that he could not; and he repeated the operations of the French at Kanghoa, which was restored, and defended by a stronger force, who, although they suffered severely, attacked the invaders with such slaughter that the Admiral was glad to retire from the contest and abandon the further prosecution of the expedition, which so far proved as great a failure as that of the French expedition. Thus it may be said that the Koreans have held their ground against all comers from without; it now remains to be seen if they can retain their exclusiveness much longer intact under dissensions from within.

THE PROGRESS OF THE ATCHIN WAR.

IT seems as if the Dutch Government were themselves unable to make up their minds as to the wisest course to be pursued in Atchin. Hints have been let fall more than once about a third expedition at the latter end of the year, but no definite preparations have as yet been made for this purpose, whereas, if any fresh operations on an extended scale had really been resolved on, we might expect to see the dockyards and arsenals in Holland busily organising for that purpose. All that we know for certain at present comes to this, that the Dutch troops, having fortified the Kraton, have established themselves in garrison there; and from that stronghold manage to dominate over all the open country round about. Besides this they have dispersed a number of proclamations among the petty Rajahs up and down the coast, calling upon these potentates to lay aside their hostility and enter, once for all, and subject to a few easy conditions, into friendly relations with Holland. Up to the latest advices it does not appear that these overtures of the Dutch have met with a large share of success. Two or three of the least powerful—or most exposed—among these Rajahs have accepted the terms proposed; their territories have consequently been thrown open to trade, and nothing further is needed except to detach a Dutch gunboat in each case to watch their coasts, and prevent arms from being imported into the island. Inside the Kraton the health of the troops is reported "Not good," and, indeed, there appears to be no doubt but what sickness will have brought in a very heavy bill of mortality there before the cold monsoon breaks. Meantime, the main strength of the Atchinese appears to be unsubdued. We say appears, because we in reality know nothing either of their numbers, their spirits, their condition, or their equipment. They burst out of their inland fastnesses occasionally, and assault the Dutch positions, which looks as if they still meant to fight; but on the other hand it is difficult to explain the present FABIAN policy of VAN SWIETEN and his associates, except by supposing that the Atchinese are near a collapse, with numbers diminished, courage broken, and supplies impossible to obtain. If the Dutch know this to be the case, they are of course wise in the plan which they are now pursuing, and the submission is merely a matter of time. But if the Atchinese power is still really formidable, if their chiefs possess still both the wish and the strength to resist, we cannot but condemn the inactivity of Holland as impolitic and cruel. Impolitic, because delay and hesitation encourage the enemy, and thus increase the expenditure in the end; cruel, because if these wretched and ignorant Atchinese are to be conquered and annexed, if Holland is really resolved to despoil a nation that gave—so far as we can see—no offence, justice and humanity at least demand that the ugly business should be got through quickly, so that the sickness, bloodshed, and misery may be brought with all speed to an end. General VAN SWIETEN returns home, and General VERSPYCK has resigned. VAN SWIETEN has received a Grand Cross, and his soldiers are to get medals. This is all very well, if the objects of the expedition to Atchin have really been fully accomplished: but we are rather inclined to suspect the completeness of the achievement, when we find one of the Dutch Liberal papers itself asking what has become of the plan to conquer Atchin, and bemoaning that money should have been spent and blood shed to enable 3,000 troops to hold their own within the walls of the Kraton. Some there are even who go so far as to say that to find the area of Atchinese territory which the Dutch as yet have really subdued we must multiply the number of yards in one of the sides of the Kraton with the number of yards along its base; the result will give the area required in square yards.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

AT the last meeting of the shareholders of the P. and O. Company it was announced by the chairman, Mr. HADOW, that the negotiations with Government in reference to the passage of their Southampton steamers through the Suez Canal had not yet been brought to a conclusion. What is the stoppage? It is known to be what in China is termed a "squeeze." The late Government, in their miserable conduct of financial matters, deemed it a fit opportunity to ask the P. and O. Company to make a reduction in their subsidy as a quid pro quo for allowing their steamers to pass through the Canal. This, of course, implies that the Government in some way would not be so well served as by the present arrangement of passing the mails overland by Egypt. This is not so, however, for the Company undertake that no detention in their delivery at Southampton would ensue, but, on the contrary, they will be somewhat in advance of the present contract time. The demand, therefore, is so manifestly unjust that the directors have very properly declined to accede to it, and at some inconvenience and loss, have continued to provide a vessel at Alexandria to receive the mails for Southampton, as well as one for Brindisi, although most of their homeward steamers from India and China now pass through the Canal. It is to be hoped that the present Government will see the expediency of settling this matter promptly, for its own credit and the convenience of the public generally. It must be understood that no obstacle is interposed by the Post-office authorities; the difficulty has rested with the Treasury alone.

WE have to note the arrival in London of Mr. T. T. COOPER, who our readers will remember left in 1872 to conduct back the Panthay Envoys at the request of our Government. On his arrival at Calcutta, finding that Talifoo had fallen into the hands of the Chinese, he was appointed by the Government of India Political Agent at Bhamo, but was obliged to leave on account of ill-health.

THE President of the French Republic has received the Burmese Embassy at the Palace of the Elysée. In presenting his credentials, together with presents from the King of BURMA, the chief Ambassador addressed the President in congratulatory terms, expressing the desire of his sovereign to establish friendly intercourse with France.

TEA ADULTERATION.

The Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed to enquire into the working of the Adulteration of Food Act passed in 1872, resumed its sittings last week. The Committee is at present directing its attention specially to the adulteration of tea, and has taken the following evidence upon the subject:—

Mr. Whitworth Jackson, a wholesale tea dealer, of Spital-square, was examined as to the general practice of adulterating tea, and the various modes adopted for giving tea a fictitious appearance, weight, and value. One species of profitable adulteration, he said, was in the employment of a material called scented caper, which gave a gain of 10d. per pound, A man employed eight hours per day would, in adulterating tea by this means, yield a remuneration to his employers of £16 or over. Tea facing was removing the colour of tea by passing a heated vapour through it. One of our largest and most successful houses, he said, relied for its popularity on removing the colour. Although the traces of the colouring matter, such as Prussian blue, gypsum, &c., were removed, the detrimental properties remained. Exhausted leaves used in adulteration were solely manufactured in China; 2,500,000 pounds weight of exhausted leaves were imported into this country annually, which represented £133,000 spent in adulteration. In this class of adulterated tea the public, he estimated, received only twelve ounces instead of sixteen ounces of good tea. He stated that on one occasion a gentleman called upon him and informed him that he was a retired grocer, and travelled from town to town for the purpose of instructing his less informed brethren in the trade how to improve their tea for the purposes of profit. He offered for a guinea to show witness how it was done, and mentioned several houses that patronised his art. The witness was understood to say that there was a paper or advertisement in reference to this tea doctor in his possession, but he was by no means sure he could lay his hands upon it. He believed he could find the paper referred to, which would corroborate his evidence on the point relating to the tea doctor. Witness further said: I have been told on the authority of Dr. Tidy that the process of making up exhausted tea leaves for adulterative purposes is carried on in this country. I witnessed adulteration going on three years ago, and could point out places where it is going on now. I would prohibit all faced green tea from the market as adulterated. The making up of exhausted leaves in this country is carried on within a bowshot of this house. The wholesale tea dealers are the men who do most of the adulteration in this country. The lowest price of genuine tea in London is 8d. or 9d. By Mr. Backhouse: I know that within the last twelve months or two years there were establishments to which tea could be sent to be improved. Taking the whole of the tea imported into this country, 35,000,000 lbs. altogether may be said to be adulterated abroad and at home. In reply to Sir Henry Peek, witness said what he meant by saying most of the adulteration was done by the wholesale dealers was that it was done by the middle men, who dealt with the large importers, and were between them and the retail dealers.

Mr. Allen, F.R.S., the Public Analyst of Sheffield, stated with regard to the evidence of the previous witness that he could not say how general were the adulterations as described by that witness, nor could he concur in that evidence. The adulteration of tea by exhausted leaves was carried on, and witness, who had condemned tea so adulterated, believed there were extensive factories for carrying on this trade in parts of China. He believed most traders did not themselves adulterate. He had heard of the practice being carried on in London some years ago; but, with the exception that persons went round to hotels and other large establishments to purchase the used leaves for 1d. and 1½d. a pound, for the purpose, it was believed, of re-drying them, he did not know that the practice existed now to any extent. In answer to questions put by Mr. Welby, the witness said he believed adulteration was actually carried on in the town of Sheffield. His reason was that on one occasion six samples were purchased, and found to be adulterated. The committee did not prosecute on that occasion (it being the first), but, notice being given that the next cases would be prosecuted, more samples were purchased, and then five out of six were found to be adulterated. This showed that the sellers knew they were selling adulterated articles. Then he purchased a sample of a highly described tea, and a portion of "caper," known to be in itself an adulterated tea, was put in during the weighing, and this being picked out, the other was found to be largely adulterated with sulphate of iron, lie tea, sand, and other substances. Sir H. Peek asked the witness if he considered that any accidental impurity found in tea should be considered as adulteration, and the witness replied in the negative, adding, amid much laughter, that he had found Chinese toe-nails in tea, but he did not consider or rule that to be an adulteration. In answer to the same member the witness denied the capacity of dealers or any one, by a "rough and ready method," to detect the adulteration of exhausted leaves, for, he said, he had tested tea-dealers with samples purposely adulterated with exhausted leaves, and they had declared these adulterated samples to be superior to the teas from which the samples, before adulteration, were taken. He quite agreed that there had been improper prosecutions of grocers—that was to say, on insufficient grounds—in some localities. In reply to Sir Charles Dilke, the witness said that with respect to the purchase of exhausted leaves from large establishments, this fact had come from tea-dealers who had themselves made inquiry in order to know the truth. The dealers thought, however, that the leaves were purchased for the purpose of being re-infused. His opinion as to adulteration being known in Sheffield arose from the fact that he read a paper on tea cultivation before the British Association; for when a notice of this appeared in the local papers, though no name was mentioned, the particular dealer to whom it referred withdrew the notice selling the tea—a fact which plainly indicated that the dealer knew the tea he sold was that referred to, and that it was adulterated.

Mr. H. C. Bartlett, Ph.D., F.C.S., an analytical chymist, of Gray's-inn, said he had heard Mr. W. Jackson's evidence. Mr. Jackson showed that it was possible to adulterate, and witness had supported that view. The witness said he had no evidence that there were any manufactories in England of adulterated tea, save that teas spoilt by sea-water were brought under the hammer, having passed, he presumed, the Custom-house, and would be only bought to be passed into the market. He did not think that tea adulteration as such was carried on in this country to any great extent, or that tea leaves were bought up to be redried. He had no information upon which to state that there were any "tea doctors" or "tea improvers" going about the country offering to teach dealers how to "improve" their tea; but he had reason to believe that such persons went to publicans. He had reason to believe that adulteration was carried on in China, but he thought that some of the so-called "adulterations" found were mistaken analyses, as the finding of slight quantities of oxide of iron might result from accidental mixings, and not be at all attributable to a desire to adulterate. The examination of tea in bond was the proper course to take, as it would prevent adulterated tea coming through our ports, and he thought it was very hard that retail shopkeepers should bear the brunt of the prosecutions for selling adulterated goods which had passed the Customs.

The subjoined letter from "A Tea Merchant" has appeared in the Echo:—

Tea adulteration must be divided into two parts, viz., injurious adulteration, and harmless adulteration. The first consists in imparting to the article foreign poisonous matter, such as steel filings, Prussian blue, &c., &c., &c. Prussian blue is used to face, or produce a good-looking surface on common green tea, and, as the public used to prefer bright green tea, this adulteration was so common that at least one-third of the green tea imported was "faced." I will leave numerous other methods of injurious adulteration, and explain harmless adulteration. This consists in mixing with tea harmless matters and ingredients, such as "stalks," which are imported in large quantities from China, and which is the tea shrub after the leaves are picked, broken up small, and mixed with leafy tea. This increases the weight, and causes no harm to the consumer, save the imposition of the vendor of the article as "pure tea." Another article of adulteration is "Brick Tea." It must be understood that the Chinese press the tea into the chests with their feet, and what is spilt by being continually walked upon, together with the moisture of the feet and earth, becomes hard and solid, and is sold in cakes as "brick tea." This is ground into powder and thrown among good leafy tea, and imitates dust. It is seldom, if ever, that injurious matter is introduced into tea by the wholesale dealers in this country. A certain person once bought up the used tea, or the leaves, of large establishments. These were placed in hot pans, and the heat causes the leaf to roll up again, and except by the smell it could not be recognised. This is an old trick, and often practised. Adulteration has been so common, and such filth sold as tea, that I may add that I had, and believe I have now, a sample of "tea" sold as Fine New Season Gunpowder that was the refuse of a pig's-stye mixed with green dust, and faced with Prussian blue.

GERMANY.

HAMBURG, JUNE 10.

There is at length good reason to hope and believe that the new German currency will be introduced, if not in the whole of the Empire, at least in the kingdom of Prussia, on the 1st of January next, and high time too, for the great scarcity of small coins that is everywhere felt causes much inconvenience among the lower classes, the retail trade, and for domestic purchases. Since my last letter another German State—not a very large one, it is true, but still containing a population of nearly half a million—has published officially that the new currency law shall take effect on New Year's Day. It is the Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar. At the same time, we learn from Berlin that it is under the serious consideration of the Prussian Government, and has formed the subject of more than one Cabinet Council, whether it will not be possible to do the same in Prussia; and though nothing has yet been definitively settled, the general feeling was decidedly in the affirmative. If the subject could be submitted to a plebiscit, there is no doubt what the result would be, for public opinion would immediately say, "the sooner the better." In Prussia the inconvenience would be felt more slightly than anywhere else; for, after all, it is but the introduction of a new nomenclature for an old institution, as the present coins can all be made use of till a sufficiency of the new money is minted: the thaler at three marks, the ten-groschen piece at one mark, the five-groschen at half a mark, and the groschen at ten pfennigs. In the meantime the eight German mints are at full work, and according to the latest returns published the money coined (on May 10) was as follows:—Gold, 1,022,169,700 marks; silver, 21,467,966 ditto; nickel, 1,943,280 ditto; and copper, 430,958 ditto;—total, 1,046,011,904 marks, or more than fifty-two millions sterling. The actual state of the case is as follows:—The Grand Duchies of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburgh-Strelitz, as well as Bremen and Lubeck have already introduced the new system unconditionally, and for general circulation; Hamburg partially, i.e., as the money of account superseding the Hamburg Banco; Saxe Weimar and Oldenburg introduce it on the 1st of January next, and Prussia is deliberating. Should they decide on doing so, such a step implies the necessity of Hamburg following suit, for, surrounded as we are on all sides by Prussian territory, our isolated Hamburg currency would be no longer tenable, the more so as the value of all articles of merchandise, houses, ships, land, and other property is now reckoned by the new Imperial mark. The Federal Council have decreed that the coinage of the five-mark piece shall be postponed till the other coins are completed; but as a substitute and to prevent a scarcity of small money the State printing-office at Berlin is hard at work striking off five-mark notes as part of the hundred and twenty millions of Imperial Treasury notes to replace those issued by the separate Governments and now about to be put out of circulation. The notes are made of white hemp paper, the printing is of grey colour, and the water-mark is the Imperial crown surrounded by a ribbon.

Another banking company of this city, called the Bankverein—not to be confounded with the Vereins Bank, which is the oldest establishment of the sort here—has resolved to reduce its capital from two million thalers to a million and a half, finding that in the present plethora of money the first named amount cannot be profitably and safely employed. The mode of amortisation agreed to by the general meeting is to buy up the stipulated number of shares in the open market by degrees and at a price not exceeding 90 per cent. The resolution can be easily carried into immediate execution, as the quotation of the shares to-day is 84½ per cent. We have still a much greater number of banking companies here than is required for the wants of the trade.

A new insurance company has just been established, with very favourable prospects of success, from the high respectability of the promoters who have now become the directors. It is called the Hanseatic Fire Insurance Company, and undertakes risks against fire (including explosions and accidents caused by lightning) and will appoint agencies in foreign countries. The capital is nominally a million and a half Reichs marks in shares of 3,000 marks each, registered in the names of the holders, but only an instalment of 20 per cent. will be required as the working capital for the present. Herr Joachim Hermann Duhst has been appointed manager, and has held a general meeting, at which the Company declared itself constituted.

According to the tables just published by the Foreign-office at Berlin, Germany is represented abroad by 637 Consular officers, viz., 317 Consuls, 190 Vice-Consuls, and 72 Consular agents; these, with the secretaries and interpreters, make up the above number, among whom 142 are employed in Great Britain and the colonies, 63 in Turkey and her dependencies, 61 in Sweden and Norway, 47 in Spain and her colonies, 40 in Russia, 30 in Italy, 29 in the United States, 22 in the Brazils, and the remainder in other parts of the world.

By an Admiralty order lately issued, naval officers on foreign stations may now draw bills for their pay at five days' sight on Messrs. J. Berenberg, Gossler, and Co., of this city.

The Milan journals state that the Japanese Consul-General Nacayaines in that city has received orders from the Mikado to make a collection of the portraits of the Regents of countries in amicable relations with the Government of Japan. There are to be fourteen in all, of life-size, and half-figure, the distinguished personages named being the Queen of England; the Emperors of Germany, Russia, and Austria; the Kings of Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, Italy, and Portugal; and the Presidents of the United States of North America, Switzerland, Peru, and France.

With regard to the Postal Treaty between Germany and British India I fully confirm to-day what I said about it in my last letter, and am enabled to add the following particulars:—The weight of a single letter is fixed at fifteen grammes from Germany and ½ oz. from India; letters may be sent both ways, either prepaid, unpaid, or registered; but the last-named, as well as all newspapers, books, and samples can only be forwarded, if prepaid, and will be charged at the rate of 1½ groschens per every thirty grammes, the maximum weight for any packet of samples or patterns being 250 grammes, but books and newspapers may be sent, if not exceeding 2½ kilog., or 5 lbs. The registration fee is to be the same as that charged in each country. Postcards may be sent, but will be treated as single letters. The correspondence between India and the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg will be charged at the same rates as to Germany. The correspondence will be sent off weekly by British steamers in closed mails via Brindisi and Bombay. The convention is to come into operation on Jan. 1, 1875, and remain in force till one of the contracting parties has given the other twelve months' notice of its wish to withdraw from it.

Dr. Krauel, at present Acting Consul for Germany at Foochow, is appointed Consul at that port.

Arrivals from the Far East.—Consul General Kemmert and family, from Batavia; Herr Kierulff, from China; Herr Sohst and family, from Singapore; Herr F. F. Severin, planter, from Assam, Monetary and Commercial.

The directors of the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway Company (Limited) invite applications for 19,000 shares of £20 each, being the unissued balance of the share capital of the company —£120,000 having been already allotted. Interest at 7 per cent. per annum is guaranteed by the contractors during the construction of the railway. Such interest will accrue from the date of payment of the instalments, and will be paid half-yearly by warrants on the 15th March and 15th September. The contractors further guarantee a net minimum dividend equal to 7 per cent. per annum for the first year, and at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum for the second year, after the line is opened for public traffic. Full particulars of the terms of issue will be found in our Advertisement columns. The current quotation for the company's shares is ¾ to 1 prem., with a firm market.

The Oriental Bank Corporation notify that the coupons of the Japan Seven per Cent. Loan of 1873, due the 1st prox., will be paid at the bank on and after that date.

Subscriptions are invited for £160,000 Seven per Cent. First Mortgage Bonds of the Geneva and Ithaca Railroad Company of New York. The price of issue is 87½, and the bonds form a first mortgage upon the forty miles of railroad from Geneva to Ithaca, as well as an unconditional lien upon property which has cost £500,239.

The directors of the Universal Marine Insurance Company (Limited) have decided to pay on the 1st July next an interim dividend of 5s. per share, being at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

The directors of the Maritime Insurance Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend for the current half-year at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, payable on the 1st proximo.

The Governor and Committee of the Hudson's Bay Company intend to recommend a dividend of 14s. per share, making, with 6s. paid in January last, a distribution of 20s. per share for the year ending the 31st ult.

The liquidators of Overend, Gurney, and Co. (Limited) will, with the sanction of Vice Chancellor Malins, pay a sixth return of 10s. per share to the shareholders on the 15th instant.

The ordinary general meeting of the Ceylon Company (Limited) is called for the 23rd inst.

A meeting has been held of the creditors of Messrs. Osborn and Co., Clyde Steel Works, Sheffield, who failed recently, with liabilities amounting to £85,000. The committee of inspection reported that Mr. Osborn had offered to purchase the whole estate for 12s. in the pound, payable by instalments extending over eighteen months, part of the last instalment but one to be guaranteed. The creditors accepted the offer.

The first meeting of creditors under the Bankruptcy proceedings against Messrs. Jahn, Mehl, and Co., merchants, of 90, Great Tower-street, whose failure was recently announced, was held Thursday. The liabilities were stated to amount to £12,000. Mr. T. H. Wintle, of the firm of Messrs. Johnstone, Cooper, Wintle, and Co., was appointed trustee, to act with a committee of inspection also appointed.

Mr. Edward Allen, of Bradford, manufacturer, has filed a petition for liquidation in the Bradford County Court. His liabilities are about £7,000. Mr. John Grimshaw, of Watergrove Mill, Wardle, Rochdale, woollen manufacturer, trading as "Bamford and Grimshaw," has filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement. The liabilities are £4,000.

The plant of a patent paper mill for some Japanese is now being shipped by the Charles Albert (str.) for Yokohama. The plant for the Japan paper-making company will be shipped shortly.

The arrivals of Bar Silver during the week have been very small; the price has therefore been maintained, and may be quoted as 58⅞d. per oz. standard, firm. Mexican Dollars to a considerable amount have arrived from New York, and in the face of this arrival it is not expected that the late price of 58½d. per oz. will be maintained.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

Although the total transactions have been of good extent, at the same time there has been an absence of activity, with the important exception of Coffee and Metals, and a dull tone has pervaded the market for most of the chief articles. Sugar has been dull, and prices irregular. Coffee has been gaining strength, and prices have advanced almost daily. Tea has been depressed, and prices of new Tayshan Congou have further receded. Silk has been very dull. Large arrivals of Rice have taken place, and as holders have met the market, prices have suffered a still further decline. Sago has been in demand, but the advance is not upheld at the close. Both Black and White Pepper are lower. Manila Hemp is firm, Gambier lower, Cutch steady.

TEA.

The market during the past week has remained without animation, the chief business being in common to good common red-leaf kinds and new district Teas from Canton, both Congous and Scented Capers, all of which have sold at lower rates. The demand from the Trade and Exporters continues very light, but in the absence of fresh arrivals there is not much alteration in prices, except in the Canton district Teas mentioned above. The public sales have comprised 17,847 packages, of which 17,213 packages have been printed and sold without reserve. The deliveries for this week as compared with last year are as follows :—

Duty Paid	1,922,000 lbs.	1,733,000 lbs.
Coastwise	595,000 „	764,000 „
	3,037,000 lbs.	2,752,000 lbs.

CONGOUS.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings sell slowly at about previous prices. Broken-leaf kinds have sold rather lower at public sale; common to good common have been steady from 11d. to 1s. 0½d. per lb.; fair Kaisow kinds are only in moderate request; good, from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. per lb., have been wanted, but finer kinds sell only with difficulty at rather lower prices. Pak Lin kinds remain firm. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair show no change; good to fine have been in limited request at about previous prices; finest show no alteration. New-make Canton kinds: Large supplies have come to hand, and, the trade being full, prices have given away further ½d. to 1d. per lb. The finest kinds have done rather better, the quantity being small. Oolongs have sold at public sale at about former rates. Souchongs: At the auctions feveral parcels were sold from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 4d. for fair to good, and 1s. 6½d. to 1s. 9d. per lb. for fine kinds, being about previous value. Scented Teas.—Canton Capers: About 5,000 boxes of common olive-leaf kind have sold at 11½d. to 1s. per lb., being a further drop of 1d. to 2d. per lb. on previous nominal rates. New leaf, of olive colour, sells with difficulty from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. The glazed kinds, of old import, show no material change. Foochow kinds remain firm in the absence of fresh supplies. Orange Pekoes: Canton kinds remain firm at last week's prices. Foochow kinds: Common to medium kinds have been heavy of sale at rather lower prices; good to fine have been steady at full prices. Green Teas: The market is rather unsettled, and prices for all but the finest kinds are uncertain and irregular, especially at public sale, where the chief business has been done.

SILK.

There has been no improvement in the market, and transactions have been very restricted. The opening of the market in China is anxiously looked for, but as yet authentic intelligence has not been received. In China silk the chief business has been in the coarser kinds, which have sold freely; other sorts have been neglected. There has been very little demand for Cantons, and quotations are rather lower. In Japans there have been some sales of fair to good silk, but the common descriptions are unsaleable.

COFFEE.

A decidedly active demand has prevailed throughout, and the public sales have gone off with spirited competition at daily advancing prices, and a further important enhancement is established at the close. The much improved deliveries of the previous week have added to the firmness of the market, and with a good export demand during the present, sales have been readily effected in all descriptions, more especially in Plantation, and prices at the close exhibit a further advance of 4s. to 5s. for Plantation kinds, 3s. for Native, and 2s. 6d. for ordinary to 4s. for coloury Foreign. Statement of the prices at the highest point of the present year, and the recent lowest point, compared with the present value :—

	Value Feb. 5.	Lowest in May.	Present value.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Middling Plantation Ceylon...	136 0	... 101 6	... 113 0

SUGAR.

The quieter feeling has become more decided, and towards the close a dull tone has prevailed, accompanied by a frequent slight decline. This unfavourable condition may be attributed to several causes, partly the absence of speculative inquiry, partly to the disappointing state of the refined article so far as regards pieces, and to the heavy supplies of raw, as is usual at this period. There has been much less demand for Manila, and scarcely any sales have occurred; no change in prices can therefore be reported. A floating cargo 600 tons unclayed Ilo Ilo has been sold at 16s. 6d. There has been a steady demand for date Penang, and prices are firm; privately 500 bags have been sold at 15s. 6d.

COCOA NUT OIL.—Ceylon has been in but moderate request at £34 to £35 for pipes, and at £35 5s. for hogsheads; in public sale 360 casks brownish weak to good sold at £34 15s. to £35.

CHINA PRESERVES.—Of 120 cases Ginger offered 100 cases sold at 6¾d. to 7d.

COIR GOODS.—Large supplies have been offered by auction. There was less demand for all qualities of Yarn, excepting a small quantity of good, which sold steadily, and the sales went off flatly at a decline of 20s. for medium, and 25s. to 35s. for ordinary and dholl yarn.

CAMPHOR.—The market has been steady but quiet; Japan is quoted 80s., China 75s. per cwt.

CUTCH has been very quiet, but is very firmly held; small sales have been effected at 23s. per cwt. At auction 100 boxes good Pegue have been bought in at 22s. 9d.

GAMBIER.—The market has been dull, and prices have declined 3d.

per cwt., both on the spot and for arrival. On the spot about 1,000 bales have been sold at 25s. 1½d. to 25s. 6d., ex warehouse. In auction 322 bales block bought in at 25s. 6d. Of 575 bales pressed cubes chiefly sold, fine pale at 32s. 6d. to 33s. 9d., ordinary at 27s. 6d., 210 mats free ditto withdrawn. For arrival 100 tons April sailing have been sold at 24s. 9d. ex ship, and 50 tons just arrived at 25s. ex ship.

GALLS.—Market improved; of 291 cases China at sale, half sold at 50s. for good; subsequently 100 cases fair sold privately at 49s., but there are buyers now at 50s., and no sellers.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady; Sumatra steady; and of 81 cases offered one-third sold at 70s. to 75s. for good 3rds. Copal quiet, small sales at previous value. Damar quiet, but generally firmly held; of 184 cases a small proportion sold at 43s. to 43s. 6d. for specky yellowish sorts. Gamboge quiet; 5 cases retired.

GUTTA-PERCHA.—No business done.

HEMP.—There has been a steady demand for Manila on the spot, and about 1,500 bales have been sold at full rates, fair roping at £33 15s., good fair to good at £35 to £35 15s.

HIDES.—The demand for East India kinds has been very limited, and only about half the quantity offered has been sold. Prices show no marked change, though heavy weights in many instances were almost unsaleable. Singapore Ox and Cow have been in moderate demand at former rates for light averages, whilst heavy could only be partly sold at a reduction of ¼d. to ½d. per lb. Buffalo have been in very limited demand. Batavia only partly sold at a decline of ¼d. per lb. Singapore and Penang have met no inquiry, and nearly all offers have been bought in.

INDIA-RUBBER AND ISINGLASS.—No transactions have been effected.

JAPAN WAX continues in large supply, while there is but little demand; small sales of fine quality reported at 56s. to 57s. per cwt.

MUSK.—The auctions have embraced 23 caddies Yunan, partly sold at 36s. to 36s. 6d. for fair, and 29s. wet; of 6 caddies Tonquin, 2 sold at 18s. for rough and bally; 2 tins Nepaul sold at 19s. to 20s.; of 5 tins Grain, 3 sold at 49s. for fine.

PLUMBAGO.—Of 500 barrels Ceylon offered 450 barrels good to fine bold lump sold at 17s. to 18s., good chips 11s. to 11s. 6d.; dust 9s. to 9s. 6d.; 29 casks low Cochin lump bought in at 5s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black: The market has been dull, and with a restricted demand only small sales have been effected at gradually declining prices, closing at ¼d. lower for Penang and ⅛d. lower for Singapore. The private sales are about 1,700 bags; Penang at 5¼d. to 5½d., closing at the former price, Singapore at 6⅛d. In public sale 233 bags Rhio sold at 4⅝d., and 60 bags Penang were withdrawn. White: Heavy supplies at auction have depressed the market, and prices are ¼d. cheaper, except for fine, which is ⅛d. dearer. Of 1,129 bags Singapore about 250 bags sold; fair at 8¼d.; good 8½d.; fine bold bright at 9⅜d. to 9½d.; of 213 bags Penang 40 bags ordinary sold at 7¾d.

RICE.—A very heavy supply, both actual and prospective, notwithstanding the large withdrawals from Burmah on account of the Indian famine, have continued to exert a baneful influence upon the market; sales have been effected with difficulty, and prices have undergone a general depreciation. On the spot Bengal has declined 6d., and in some instances 1s., old Rangoon is fully 6d. lower, and other kinds also cheaper. Floating cargoes of soft grain have been arriving in large numbers, and prices are 4½d. lower. On the spot white Bengal has realised from 11s. 6d. to 12s. 9d., heated 10s., Ballam 11s., low broken Bengal 9s. 6d., Madras 10s. 3d., Bassein 9s. 3d., Rangoon 9s. to 9s. 1½d., and 20,000 bags ditto 8s. 3d.

SAGO.—Last week a better demand prevailed for small, and about 2,500 bags were sold privately at 6d. advance, common grey to fine at 15s. 6d. to 17s., closing at 16s. 6d. to 17s.; but there has since been less demand, and at the public sales 2,564 bags went off slowly at 3d. decline for all kinds; about 1,300 bags sold, grey small at 16s., fair to good at 16s. 6d. to 17s., good large at 19s., medium 18s.; 300 bags good large since sold at 18s. 6d., being again lower. Flour: 500 bags Borneo bought in at 16s. 6d., 370 bags Singapore withdrawn.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: Nothing done since the periodical sales. Cassia Lignea: Very dull, stock excessive, and scarcely a transaction. Buds steady; of 74 cases, half sold at £5 10s. to £5 15s. per cwt. for good quality. Cloves: 5 cases fine bold Penang sold at dearer rates, commencing at 1s. 11½d. and rising to 2s. 0½d.; 5 cases Penang, average 80 nuts to the lb., were bought in at 3s. 6d.; 20 cases Java chiefly sold, 120's part mouldy at 3s. 1d., defective 1s. to 2s. Of 25 casks limed ditto 20 casks defective sold at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 5d. Mace: 8 cases Penang were chiefly withdrawn, only 1 case ordinary selling at 2s. 10d.; 8 casks 6 bags Java bought in at 2s. 6d.

STRAW PLAT.—In auction 198 bales China were chiefly sold; white Nos. 55 to 51 £7 10s. to £12 15s., one lot (No. 50) at £24; mottled, Nos. 3 to 1 at £8 to £10 per bale, also 100 cases at £4 5s. to £4 7s. 6d. per case.

STICKLAC.—At auction 566 chests Siam met a better demand, and 216 chests sold at dearer rates; fine free but small at £5 10s. to £5 15s., block at £4 to £4 5s., the remainder bought in at £6.

STAR ANNISEEDS.—The market is bare of stock, and the article is much wanted for immediate delivery. Large quantities afloat.

SAPANWOOD continues very scarce.

TIN is in improved demand for consumption, and prices are very strong. Quotations are—Straits, £103 on the spot and £101 afloat, Banca £106, and Billiton £99 per ton, showing an advance of £2 to £3 for Straits and Banca.

TAPIOCA.—Only 229 bags Singapore, import 1873 have been offered and sold, good small white 1⅞d. to 2d. Pearl: 259 bags met little demand, and were bought in, bullets at 22s. 6d. to 23s., medium at 23s. 6d.

Offices—47a, MOORGATE-STREET, LONDON, E.C.

The Directors of the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway Company (Limited) are prepared to receive applications for 19,000 Shares of £20 each, being the unissued balance of the Share Capital of the Company—£120,000 having been already allotted—payable as follows:—

£1	per Share	on	Application.
4	,,	,,	Allotment.
5	,,	,,	1st August, 1874.
5	,,	,,	1st October, 1874.
5	,,	,,	1st January, 1875.

Interest at Seven per Cent. per Annum is guaranteed by the Contractors during the construction of the Railway. Such interest will accrue from the date of payment of the instalments, and will be paid Half-yearly by Warrants on the 15th March and 15th September.

The Contractors further guarantee a net minimum dividend equal to 7 per cent. per annum for the first year, and at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum for the second year, after the Line is opened for Public Traffic, and will secure the due and punctual payment of the same by the investment of £80,000 Consols in the names of Trustees, as above stated.

Subscribers will be allowed the privilege of paying up the whole of the instalments on allotment, whereupon interest at 7 per cent. per annum on the amount will accrue from the date of such payment.

The Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway, fifty miles in length, starts from the City of Buenos Ayres, and running for a short distance over the Government Western Railway, proceeds thence direct to the Port of Campana, the point nearest to Buenos Ayres on the River Parana, where navigable access can be obtained for large steamers and river craft. In its route the Line passes through the most important suburbs of the City, the towns of Belgrano and San Martin, and through a thickly-settled and well-cultivated country.

The Port of Campana is the natural terminus for steamers and river craft navigating the Parana and its tributaries. These rivers are the great highways into the centre of South America, and embrace within their limits upwards of 3,500 miles of river navigation. They constitute almost the sole outlet for the productions of the rich and fertile provinces of the country, and form the arteries of communication between numerous and important inland cities. To meet the requirements of these varied sources of traffic, the Contract entered into for the construction of the Railway provides also for the erection of Wharves and Bonded Warehouses, upon an extensive scale, at Campana.

It is confidently anticipated that the highly favourable location of the Line and its many advantages will ensure a large and very profitable traffic, derived not only from the merchandise and passengers which the connexion with so extended a system of river navigation will bring on to the Railway and from the foreign shipments to Buenos Ayres unloading at Campana, but also from the large suburban and residential traffic which will be accommodated by the Railway. The transport of produce and the receipts from the warehouses at Campana will also form important sources of revenue.

The Railways running out of the City of Buenos Ayres have proved very successful and profitable undertakings, and their securities command a considerable premium in the market.

The £10 Shares of the Buenos Ayres Great Southern Railway are now quoted at £11 5s. to £11 10s. per Share, ex dividend, this Company having paid 8 per cent. on its Share Capital, after paying interest on the Debenture Stock, for the half-year ending December, 1873; the Company's receipts from passenger traffic having increased 19·36 per cent. and from goods traffic increased 25·77 per cent. over the receipts during the year 1872.

The £10 Seven per Cent. Preference Shares of the Northern Railway of Buenos Ayres are now quoted at £13 10s. to £14 per Share, ex dividend.

The £10 Deferred Shares of the same Railway are now quoted at £13 10s. to £14 per Share, ex dividend, this Company having earned a net income equal to 9½ per cent. on their Share Capital, after providing interest on Debentures and Debenture Stock for the year ending 1873; the cost of the line being about £20,000 per mile.

The Western Railway, owned by the Buenos Ayres Government is reported to be earning about 9½ per cent. on the capital employed in its construction.

The net earnings of the Northern Railway of Buenos Ayres, about 19 miles, which from its position affords the best data for an estimate of the traffic which may be expected on the Campana Line, were, for the year ending December, 1873, £30,771 2s. 6d. Assuming the same rate of net earnings for the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway (including warehouses, wharves, &c.), the following results would be obtained:—

Net earnings on 50 miles, say	£80,976
Interest on Debenture Stock, 7 per cent. on £400,000	28,000
Leaving available for Dividend on Shares	£52,976

equal to about 10½ per cent. per annum on the amount of the Company's Share Capital, with the prospect of a still larger return from the increased traffic which the further development of the river navigation and the general growth of the country may be expected to furnish.

The Company's chief Resident Engineer and General Manager, however, anticipates a considerably greater net revenue than is shown by the above figures. He estimates that the Railway, Wharves, and Warehouses will earn a net revenue of £139,500 per annum as soon as brought into full operation, and in concluding his Report states—"I have had eighteen years' experience in surveying, constructing, and working Railways in the Argentine Confederation, having been more or less associated with every Line in the Province of Buenos Ayres, the whole of which are now earning profits averaging from 8 to 15 per cent. on the capital invested in their construction; but, in the whole of my experience, I have never before been connected with a Line which, from its remarkable topographical position, possesses such prospects as the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway."

When it is considered that the earnings of the Northern Railway are almost entirely derived from local and residential traffic, while the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway will not only obtain a large revenue from these sources, but will have, in addition, the receipts from the extensive river traffic and the wharfage and transport of merchandise, it may be confidently expected that the estimates of the Company's chief Resident Engineer and General Manager will be fully verified by actual results.

The Concessions granted to Senor Don Guillermo Matti for constructing the Railway, by the Governments of the Argentine Confederation and of the Province of Buenos Ayres, have been transferred to the Company; and a Contract has been entered into with him for acquiring and conveying to the Company the whole of the Land required for the Railway, Stations, and Station Grounds, and for the Wharves and Warehouses at the Port of Campana.

A Contract has been entered into with Messrs. Edwin Clark, Punchard, and Company for the construction of the Railway, with Stations, Rolling Stock, &c., and for building Wharves and Warehouses at the Port of Campana, together with the machinery and appliances requisite for rapidly loading and discharging vessels and warehousing goods and merchandise, in accordance with the plans and specifications, and to the satisfaction of the Company's Engineers, and for maintaining the Line for one year after it is completed and opened for public traffic, for the sum of £790,000.

This Contract also provides for payment of interest at Seven per cent. per annum on the entire Capital of the Company during the construction of the Railway. The Contractors have further evinced their confidence in the rapid development of the traffic by guaranteeing a net minimum dividend of 7 per cent. for the first year, and of 8 per cent. for the second year after the Line is opened for traffic on the Shares now offered for subscription.

The Directors have concluded a very satisfactory arrangement with Mr. Neville B. Mortimer, C.E., for superintending the Works as Chief Resident Engineer of the Company, and to assume the position of General Manager as soon as the Line is completed and opened for public traffic. Mr. Mortimer's long and valuable experience in the construction and working of Railways in the Argentine Republic, and his personal influence, will be eminently serviceable to the Company, and will assure for it a competent and energetic administration in Buenos Ayres.

The construction of the Railway was duly commenced, and on the 11th of October, 1872, the works were officially inaugurated by his Excellency Don Velez Sarafield, Home Minister in the Argentine Government, the ceremony being attended by the principal Ministers of the National and Provincial Governments; nearly the whole of the permanent way materials, including rails, iron sleepers, &c., &c., have been shipped, and the operations are being pushed forward with the view to completing the Line at the earliest possible date.

The Capital of the Company consists of £500,000 in Shares, and £400,000 in Debenture Stock; it being intended to apply the net revenue of £28,000 per annum, guaranteed by the Argentine Government for 20 years from the opening of the Railway, to the payment of interest on the latter.

Provisional Scrip Certificates will be issued on allotment, which on due payment of all the instalments, will be exchanged for the Share Certificates.

Where no allotment is made the deposit will be returned to the applicant without deduction. Should a less number of Shares be allotted than the number applied for, the surplus of the deposit will be applied towards the amount payable on allotment.

Failure to pay any instalment at the due date will render all previous payments liable to forfeiture.

The original Concessions and Certified English translations of the same, with copies of the Articles of Association and Contracts, can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

Applications, accompanied by the payment of £1 on each Share applied for, must be made on the annexed form, and forwarded either to the Bankers of the Company, Messrs. Robarts, Lubbock, and Co., 15, Lombard-street, London, E.C.; or to the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company.

Propectuses and Forms of Application can be obtained at the Company's Brokers, Messrs. Lawrence, Son, and Pearce, 13, Copthall-court, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C.; or of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, 47A, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

By order of the Board,

SYDNEY J. SMITHERS,
Secretary.

London, June 9, 1874.

The following Contracts have been entered into by the Company:—

Dated 19th January, 1874.—Between Don Guillermo Matti and the Buenos Ayres and Campana Railway Company (Limited), being an Assignment of the Concessions, and agreement for purchase of the Land required for the Railway, &c.

IMPROVED AND ECONOMIC COOKERY.—Use
LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT
as "stock" for beef-tea, soups, made dishes, and sauces; gives fine flavour and great strength. Invariably adopted in households when fairly tried.

CAUTION.—Genuine only with Baron Liebig's facsimile across label.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

IMPORTANT FOR THE DELICATE.—It is difficult to determine which is the more trying to the human constitution—the damp, cold days of autumn and winter, or the keen, dry, easterly winds of spring. Throughout the seasons good health may be maintained by occasional doses of Holloway's Pills, which purify the blood and act as wholesome stimulants to the skin, stomach, liver, bowels, and kidneys. This celebrated medicine needs but a fair trial to convince the ailing and despondent that it will restore and cheer them without danger, pain, or inconvenience. No family should be without a supply of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, as by a timely recourse to them the first erring function may be reclaimed, suffering may be spared, and life saved.

Our advices from the Japan Ports by the present mail are only four days later than those already received, and they contain no news of importance. The Pacific mail, via San Francisco, is overdue.

CHINA.

PEKING.

A correspondent writes:—The Emperor returned from his visit to the Western Tombs on the 17th inst. He reached the first resting place or station from the capital, known by the name of Wang-hae-low, at about ten o'clock in the forenoon. When seen nearing this place he was riding the iron-grey pony which has lately been immortalised in the Gazette under the name Keuh-hwa-lew. Prince Pih (Pih yen na mo hoo) was riding on the near side, about a couple of yards from his Majesty, holding a rein which was attached to the bridle of the Emperor's pony. This was evidently done with the view of being able to control it should it become affrighted at the crowds of Chinese who were kneeling on both sides of the road. The Emperor rode at a slow walk, and seems to have derived benefit from his trip, for this time he was looking about him at the people, to the number of tens of thousands, who, with their hats off, were kneeling on both sides of the road. As they were permitted by the imperial guard to approach the road to within five yards of his Majesty's person, it was quite easy for them to see their Emperor distinctly. At a couple of li from the Wang-hae-low, the Emperor caught sight of an old grey-headed, grey-bearded man, kneeling by the roadside. He at once pulled up his pony, and called upon him to approach. This he did as quickly as his advanced age would permit. His Majesty asked him a few questions, regarding his name, his age, and to what part of China he belonged, and after receiving the replies bestowed on him a silver medal or badge.

There can be no doubt that the Emperor appeared on the occasion under the most favourable circumstances before his people. They saw him returning to his capital from the good work of praying at the tombs of his ancestors; appearing on horseback in a manly way, his face bronzed from exposure to the sun, and from time to time en route noticing the aged men who were present amongst his numerous subjects in a way most gratifying to them. Knowing the reverential feelings which the Chinese people entertain for their Emperor, we may surmise that the spectators on this occasion, when they return to their homes, many of these situated in the most distant part of China, will not fail to recount what they saw on the 17th April, 1874, of his Majesty and of his acts; and these recitals will assuredly have a beneficial influence that will tend to bind the most distant parts of China still closer to the Ruler at the metropolis. I consequently view the proceedings as a political action fraught with future substantial advantages to the present dynasty.

I should now mention that the Wang-hae-low is the first station from the capital on the western route, and to it, on the Emperor leaving for the Tombs, a large number of the high functionaries of the metropolis, besides those who had to go with the Court, followed his Majesty, and from it saw him depart on his journey. On the near approach of the Emperor to that station on his return, these high officials were there, waiting to receive him and accompany him back to the palace. The high functionaries who had not, as well as those who had, accompanied the Court wore fine silk Court dresses. Their gay appearance then, and the knowledge on the part of the spectators that they had before their eyes their Sovereign and the highest functionaries of the Empire, could not fail to impress every one present.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 3rd May; the French mail from London March 13 arrived out on the 28th April. The following items of news are from the North China Herald :—

Shanghai has been intent on racing during the week, and only collected itself to face the outgoing mail. The weather has been perfect—a cloudless sky, and the heat of the sun tempered by a pleasant breeze. The racing was very good, and a large number of spectators attended to witness it on the Grand Stand. The Spring Racket Handicap has been played through, and has resulted in Turnbull winning the A. and McMinnies the B. Sweepstakes.

A report has been circulated by the Chamber of Commerce, in English and Chinese, regarding the deterioration in quality of Chinese Silk. Attention is called to the warnings issued by the Chamber in 1872, and to the verification of its prediction that great reduction in value would follow unless more care were taken in reeling and packing. The warning having been neglected, and the result having happened, Chinese Silk Merchants are now urged to impress further on the producers the necessity for more careful and honest preparation, to enable China Silk to recover its position in the market.

The fact that the French Municipal Council intend making one or more roads through the ground in which the Ningpo joss-house stands, and which is very generally underlaid by old graves, has called forth a display of feeling on the part of the Ningpo Chinese. The other morning some 800 or 1,000 assembled on the ground, where they remained four or five hours, protesting by their presence and utterances against the proposed invasion. A policeman was sent to warn them off, and the more excited suggested that he should be taken into the joss-house and well beaten, but calmer counsels prevailed.

The riots on the French Settlement commenced with the repairs on a road leading past a Joss-house, objection to which had been made by the Ningpo men, who raised a mob, stoned the foreigners, and burnt houses. Armed police were called, who shot several of the rioters, sailors from the men-of-war landed, and the volunteers were called out. The riot was confined to the French Settlement.

A new morning paper has been started in Shanghai under the title of the Morning Gazette. We extract the following paragraph from to-day's number :—Yesterday was the day appointed for the Shanghai team to shoot off the military rifle match with Hong Kong ; but as the wind was somewhat gusty in the morning, it was thought advisable to postpone the firing until a more propitious day. The team is composed of Capt. Tucker, of No. 3 Company, Privates Carnie, Cullen, and Hall, of No. 1 Company, and Dunman and Glass, of the Mih-ho-loongs. This contest is the issue of a small-bore rifle challenge offered to the Shanghai Volunteer Corps by the Hong Kong Rifle Association, which the former accepted on the condition that the latter entertained the present competition. The arrangement having been completed prior to the recent prize meeting of the S. V. C., the six best men of its last autumn meeting were nominated to represent Shanghai, and they were Capt. Cann, Lieut. Sim, Sergt. Bishop, Privates Carnie, Dunman, and Glass. The matches were to come off some time before the 30th May, each team being allowed to select its own day for shooting.

A successful amateur dramatic performance has been given at Ningpo, which seems to have taken a new lease of life.

The Foochow Herald says Admiral Shadwell is expected to visit that port very shortly. He will be accompanied by a portion of the squadron under his command, and, after a brief stay, will proceed northward.—The usual exodus of Teamen and others connected with the supply of "the leaf" is taking place, and the customary preparations are being made for the coming season.—A billiard handicap is being played.—A rifle meeting is spoken of.—An athletic sports meeting was held on the 17th.—The races came off with great success on the 7th and 8th April.

With reference to a paragraph regarding the Scotland, we now learn by the steamer Kiushiu, from Swatow, that a barque supposed to be the Scotland has been totally lost on the White Rocks (Lammocks group.) The masts of the vessel were above water, and divers were to be sent down to her. Up to the time the Kiushiu left nothing had been heard of the crew. A despatch from the United States Consul at Swatow to the Consulate-General here, which has been courteously placed at our service, gives all that is known so far. Mr. Wingate states that on the 11th inst. he heard it was reported by Chinese fishermen that the masts of a sunken vessel were visible off the Island of Namoah, and that it was supposed every one on board was lost. Thinking it probable this might be the wreck of the Scotland, Mr. Wingate at once wrote to the Chinese Admiral at Namoah, asking him for the facts known as to the occurrence. He also sent his constable to Namoah, to obtain any information possible regarding the wreck or the crew ; the rough weather, however, prevented the constable from visiting the wreck. The Admiralty in reply, referring to the storm of March 20th, in which one hundred native boats and some three hundred lives were lost, said he had not heard of any foreign vessel being wrecked, but that he would order a search and inquiry, and would inform Mr. Wingate of the result. We hear also that Messrs. Boyd and Co.'s wrecking steamer, the Leven, is at work on the Sedan, which now lies about a mile and a half to the N.N.E. of the bearings given as the place where she struck.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 9th May; the French mail from London March 27 was received on the 7th May. We take the following items of news from the China Mail :—

A meeting of the Council was held on the 5th, pursuant to notice. There were present H.E. Sir Arthur Edward Kennedy, K.C.M.G., C.B. (President), the Hon. Chief Justice (Sir J. Smale), the Hon. Colonial Secretary (Mr. Austin), the Hon. Acting Attorney-General (Mr. Hayllar), the Hon. Acting Colonial Treasurer (Mr. C. May), the Hon. R. Rowett, the Hon. W. H. Alexander, and the Hon. James Whittall. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, H.E. proposed that the second reading of the Emigration Ordinance be resumed. The Acting Attorney-General pointed out that this was merely a consolidation of previous Ordinances, and that no new principle was introduced. The only changes there were in it had been discussed before. The only new change since the last adjournment was the power given to seize ships to the Governor instead of to the police magistrate. The latter course was inconvenient, inasmuch as information on oath must be made, and this might cause delay. Besides, the seizure of a ship was a serious step, and the power should be placed in the hands of the highest authority in the Colony, and this was the Governor himself. Moreover, serious damages might be claimed for the seizure of a ship ; therefore the power should be placed in the hands of the Governor, who had also power to release any ship at once, even after condemnation by the Supreme Court.

The second reading of the Ordinance was then proceeded with. It, however, raised no discussion whatever, and in the end was passed.

Before adjourning the Council sine die, his Excellency said that personally he felt, and no doubt the public would feel too, that they were under great obligations to the Acting Attorney General for having taken the consolidation of these Ordinances in hand. He thought the consolidation was very convenient, and would be of great benefit to the Colony.

H.E. Major General Whitfeild, Lieutenant Governor of Hong Kong, left in the French Mail steamer on the 2nd for England. On leaving Government Wharf in H.E. the Governor's barge a salute was fired by H.M.S. Princess Charlotte, and he was received on board the mail steamer by a large number of military and Government officers, merchants and others. A deputation, consisting of the Chief Justice Sir John Smale, the Hon. P. Ryrie, the Hon Richard Rowett and James Greig, Esq., went on board the steamer and presented to H.E. the General a numerously signed address. The Chief Justice said he had been requested by the other members of the deputation to present an address to H.E.

The steamer Legislator, which arrived last week, has docked, for the purpose of having her bottom cleaned ; she has been chartered by the Australian Mail Steamship Company, in place of the Sunfoo, recently lost. She however only goes as far as Singapore this trip, and then returns to take her turn for Australia with the mails.

We understand that a Club is being got up, the list of members being headed by H.E. the Governor, to introduce rabbits into Stone Cutter's Island, the special object being for shooting. This will be allowed when sufficient time has been given for breeding purposes. A consignment of rabbits has been ordered from England and Australia.

Two small junks laden with iron plates (part of the wreck of the late steamer Sunfoo) arrived on the 6th, and were discharging alongside of Messrs. Vogel and Hagedorn's Wharf. We hear that the two ends of the vessel have not broken up, and will have to be blown to pieces by gunpowder so as to recover them ; the engines are lying on the bottom, apparently not much injured, and no doubt will be eventually recovered.

The first collection of Hong Kong plants ever sent to the British Museum was shipped per last mail by the Rev. James Lamont, Pastor of the Union Church. The consignment includes 350 specimens (including 53 ferns), all indigenous to Hong Kong. We understand that the rev. gentleman hopes shortly to be able to send a good many more, so that in course of time a complete collection will doubtless be found in the British Museum Herbarium. At present Kew is the only place boasting anything like a Hong Kong collection.

We much fear that a final tragedy will soon have to be recorded in connection with the coolie trade. Many months ago the steamer Rosita y Nina, late the Venus, left Macao with some 800 coolies on board. News of the vessel was occasionally heard, connected with break-downs in her machinery, but the latest news, it is asserted, is her reaching Rio de Janiero with only between 130 and 150 alive! We shall be glad to be placed in a position to contradict this story, which is at all events going about the colony and adding another item to the difficulties which beset emigration in any form.

All the ships of war in the harbour flew their colours half-mast on the 7th, in memory of ex-President Fillmore, of the United States, recently deceased.

Admiral Shadwell will meet the Cadmus at Swatow, and change his flag to her. The Iron Duke is going to Japan for docking purposes.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 17th May. The French mail from London April 10th arrived out on the 10th May. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

The Legislative Council meetings still fail to afford any interest to the public. The only subject under consideration has been an amendment to the Courts Ordinance passed last year, by which, in addition to retaining the jurisdiction of the Courts of Requests up to $50 in Province Wellesley and Malacca, the power for distraining for rent, which is at present limited to $50 in the Courts of Requests, is in Singapore and Penang to be placed under the control of the Summary side of the Supreme Court, without any limit whatever. This will at least be advantageous to landlords, who will no longer be at the mercy of independent and untrustworthy distraining agents.

The principal event of political importance during the past fortnight has been an expedition undertaken by H. E. the Governor, in conjunction with the Naval officers on the station, to Sunghie Ujong, with a view to put a stop to the illegal exactions and extortions from British traders levied from certain stockades on the Rumbow side of the Linghie river, on the borders of our territory of Malacca. As the chief who held the principal stockade failed to meet the expedition amicably, or even to come to a conference at all, the naval boats proceeded up the river, and the men were landed, and clambered up a steep hill to the fortification, which they found had been hastily evacuated, without a shot being fired on either side. The stockade was demolished, and the attap erections in it burned, as was also another stockade lower down the river. As the Datu Klana of Sunghie Ujong, who is desirous of opening up his country and developing its resources, professed himself able to prevent the re-occupation of the old or the erection of new forts, the expedition returned to Singapore.

The visit of Mr. Birch, Colonial Secretary, to Laroot, has not been so successful as could be desired. Mr. Birch, accompanied by Mr. Swettenham,—an official from the Penang Land Office,—went to Laroot and thence overland to Perak, with a view to learn something of the country and its people. The main object of the visit, however, was to induce the submission of the Rajah Bindahara of Perak to the succession of the Rajah Mudah as Sultan, and obtain from him for the latter the regalia of royalty which the Bindahara holds. As however, the Bindahara still claims the throne, he declined to part with the jewels to his rival, and Mr. Birch was not able to get sight of him until the arrival of the new Sultan, accompanied by an influential chief who succeeded in bringing about several interviews, which, however, ended in nothing. Messrs. Birch and Swettenham were therefore obliged to return without having accomplished their object, and though the Bindahara has at present no apparent power, he is evidently well aware that he holds a decided advantage in the retention of the jewels, which the new Sultan may himself have to obtain by force, unless they are got hold of by our own Government and placed in his keeping. The natives, we understand, evinced a very unfriendly spirit to Mr. Birch's party, and were forbidden to furnish assistance or even necessaries to them. From this it is evident that unless the Government assumes a determined attitude it will find its relations with the native States exceedingly difficult to maintain on a satisfactory basis.

The Government Gazette contains only two or three fresh notifications. E. A. Irving, Esq., as Acting Auditor-General, was on the 25th April sworn in as a member of the Executive Council. His Excellency the Governor has appointed J. B. Caldbeck, Esq., a justice of the peace.

The average note circulation of the local banks during April was:—

Oriental Bank	$227,160
Chartered Mercantile	393,250
Chartered Bank	650,850

The arrivals via the Suez Canal have been the Nestor on the 9th, and Sarpedon on the 12th, from Liverpool; Japan and Ionia on the 13th, and Glenlyon on the 14th, from London. The only departure homeward has been the Emiliano, on the 6th, for Liverpool. The Ulysses leaves for London to-morrow.

The concert in the Town Hall took the shape of a complimentary concert to Madame Goddard by amateurs of Singapore, and no homage which could be paid by amateurs to such musical genius as Madame Goddard's could be too great. The "padding" of the concert was as pleasant and satisfactory as on the former occasion, the only novelty in this department being the performance of a trio for the violin, piano, and harmonium. Each performer in this did the best that could be done with the rather stupid and meaningless piece of music selected—a Nocturne by Tours. The piano part of this was kindly undertaken and well performed by a young lady.

A squall swept through the harbour yesterday about noon, which, striking the British barque Kusrovie abeam, threw her over on her beam ends, and she filled and sank in three fathoms water, where she now lies on her side. Those on board succeeded in getting off in sampans before the vessel went down. Efforts are now being made to get her up again.

MALACCA.

The British steamer Khiva, Captain Daniels, arrived here from Singapore last Monday afternoon, and sailed again for the same port the following night. She brought a large number of Chinese passengers, who came expressly for the purpose of following a grand Chinese funeral procession which took place last Tuesday.

H.M.'s steam gun-boat Avon, Commander Powlett, from Penang with dates to the 25th ultimo, anchored in the harbour last Monday afternoon, sailed for Qualla Linghy on the morning of the 30th April, and returned to this port the following morning. She left again for the same place in company with H.M.'s steamer Charybdis.

The Straits steamer Sharpshooter, Captain Augustine, from Penang, en route to your port, arrived here early last Wednesday morning, and sailed again the following afternoon.

The British steamer Medina, Captain Kneen, from Jeddah (via Penang), bound to Singapore, arrived here last Thursday, and sailed the same evening for her destination.

His Excellency the Governor has visited this settlement. As it was not his Excellency's intention at first to land, but only an afterthought, no demonstration of any kind was made on his Excellency's landing; indeed very few persons received any intimation of the fact, excepting a few Government officials.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

HANKOW.—In consequence of extended credit being allowed in most instances, large sales had been made in Plain Cottons during the fortnight, principally in 8¼ lb. Grey Shirtings, which had been quitted to the extent of 67,400 pieces. A good business had been done in Raw Cotton, and the stock was estimated at 12,000 piculs. Prices were quoted at Tls. 9.80 to 10.50 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—The market generally had remained in an unsatisfactory state, and prices in some instances showed a further decline, more especially for common qualities, of which the bulk of the stock consisted. Cottons: A modest business had been done in 8¼ lb. Grey Shirtings at about previous prices for best chops, but rates for inferior goods had again given way. T-Cloths had also been dealt in to a limited amount, and prices were quoted without alteration. Transactions in Drills showed a further decline. There was no change to note in other descriptions of Plain Cottons. Fancy Cottons continued dull, without improvement. Woollens: The demand continued very limited, and prices for most kinds were quoted nominally lower. Early in the fortnight some business was done in Camlets, but the demand had not been maintained and towards the close there had been nothing done. Metals continued very quiet, and nominally unchanged.

FOOCHOW.—Sales had been—Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., 400 pieces, at $2.53 per piece; T-Cloths, 7 lbs., No. 1, 500, at $2.55; Do., 7 lbs., No. 2, 500, at $2. Lead, 500 pigs, at $8.50 to 8.75 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The market showed no signs of life, and the advices from the North were still very discouraging. In spite of these adverse influences heavy supplies continued to be forced upon the market, and while this continued to be the case it was hopeless to expect any response on this side to the reported firmness and advancing prices in Manchester.

CANTON.—There had been little demand for Lead within the fortnight, and the business transacted had been of a retail character. Sales had amounted to 500 pieuls L.B. quality, leaving about 2,400 piculs in stock. Quotations:—$7.60 to $7.75 for L.B., and $8 to $8.20 for W.B. Quicksilver was quoted $180 to $185.

BATAVIA.—The market for Cotton Goods had been flat, the demand being confined principally to Dutch Staples, in which, however, only a limited business had been done, owing partly to the firmness of holders, and partly to the scarcity of money among dealers who buy only on long credit terms. English Grey Goods and Cambrics were in very little inquiry, and values were a shade lower. There had been no revival in the inquiry for Yarns

SINGAPORE.—The market for all descriptions of Piece Goods and for Woollens had been very dull, and prices had tended in buyers' favour. Metals had been quiet, and Coals were without change.

PENANG.—The market for all descriptions of Goods had been extremely quiet. The few sales that had occurred had been made generally at lower rates.

EXPORTS.

—o—

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A few small samples of the new leaf had been shown, and the new Teas were expected to commence arriving about the 1st June.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Latest advices from Hankow reported favourable weather for the picking of the new leaf. The market was said to have opened in the Ningchow district at extreme prices for finest quality. Green: No arrivals or settlements had taken place during the fortnight. The stock was composed of 1,017 half-chests Country Tea, 189 half-chests Pingsuey, and 700 half-chests Local packed. No reliable information had been given regarding the new season's Pingsuey.

FOOCHOW.—No positive information had been received from the interior and none of the country markets had been reported as opened.

AMOY.—The supply of Congous was expected to be larger than that of last year, and it was thought that high prices would most likely rule at the opening.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s report says very sanguine ideas of the course of the London market would appear to be entertained by operators in Tea at this port. Contracts are eagerly made, wherever natives are found willing to commit themselves; and prices to be paid seem quite a secondary consideration, so long as the Tea can be secured for early shipment. Several Hongs are understood to be under engagement for some quantity, still to be delivered, and are purchasing the crude leaf at very full rates for rather poor quality. So close has the new season followed on the former one, and several shipments reported as new having been old and new leaf mixed, it is impossible to separate the figures, for an exact comparison of export. Below we give the quantities including contracts, as reported by the Chinese. Congous:—Those on offer have been mostly of the thin flavoury descriptions, which are now somewhat neglected, and reduced rates would be accepted. The supply of first crop is now almost exhausted. Scented Teas are decidedly preferable to recent seasons. Capers are generally clean, and of olive complexion, with good strength and pungency, but as to the scenting, it is yet premature to venture an opinion, for so eager have some been to hurry forward supplies, a large quantity has been shipped without scent, a little has been partially scented. while only a few parcels have been properly cured, and even these are somewhat deficient, the flower as yet possessing but little virtue, by reason of the cold wet weather, but unprecedented prices, as high as Tls. 100 per picul, are said to have been paid. Rates for Capers, as far as can be ascertained, even allowing for the better quality of the leaf, are about Tls. 5 per picul over the basis of value current last May. Of Pekoes, the supply is rather short, on account of the competition for the leaf to make into Congous. Holders name very full prices, and purchases could not be made within Tls. 2 to 3 per picul of last year's rates. New-make sorts have been settled as high as Tls. 22 per picul. The following are the settlements, including contracts reported by Chinese to date:—District Congou, 15,000 boxes at Tls. 23 to 28; Scented Orange Pekoe, 3,500 boxes at Tls. 22 to 30; Scented Caper, 25,000 boxes at Tls. 21 to 34; Canton Greens, Imperial, 300 boxes at Tls. 20 per picul.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

THE ATCHIN WAR.

THE HAGUE, JUNE 16.—An official despatch bearing date Penang, June 14, has been received here from Colonel Pel, who is in command of the Dutch troops in Sumatra. The despatch says:—"Yesterday (probably the 10th inst.), the enemy, who is in strong force in the neighbourhood, attacked all the Dutch posts, especially that at Blangoe; but after a severe engagement he withdrew with loss. The health of the troops is bad."

KASHGAR AND CHINA.

BERLIN, JUNE 20.—The report imputing to China the intention of making an attack upon Kashgar is denied, on the ground of what professes the authentic intelligence from China. The concentration of Chinese troops in Barkul and Khara is being effected merely in self defence, in order to meet an apprehended attack from Yakoob Khan.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

We have advices of the sailing from Foochow of the steamers Glenearn on the 14th inst., the Braemar Castle on the 15th, the Mongol on the 19th, and the Glaucus on the 19th; also of the departure of the Cutty Sark, sailing vessel, on the 16th inst. The following is a statement of the cargoes afloat so far as they are known:—

Woosung Dates.	Name.	From	Cargo—lbs
May 30 ...	Agamemnon (str.) ...	Hankow	2,687,500

CANTON DISTRICT TEAS.—SEASON 1874-5.

There appears to have been greater eagerness than ever this season to secure the new leaf in the South of China, judging from the large arrivals lately to hand; the consequence is that there has not been that care given in the curing, &c., and the bulk of imports are below an average quality. Tayshan Congous have been pressed for sale, whilst a larger proportion than usual have been offered at public auction without reserve. The prices current for good to fine quality range from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 7d. per lb. There are no finest in the market. Scented Capers (as usual so early in the season) are deficient both in quality and scent, and the novel practice of colouring with turmeric (having been discovered by analysis) prejudices the sale, and prices for such are on a level with glazed leaf kinds. In the face, however, of the distrust relative to Scenteds the consumption keeps to within nearly the same standard as formerly, and there is no question if this class of tea is imported genuine, pure olive colour, as from the Tayune districts, remunerative prices to all interested would be established. There is a great scarcity in all descriptions of truly fine Scenteds, which command high figures, and prospects for first arrivals are very promising. Telegrams from China give the export of new leaf to date at 24,000,000 lbs. This is not excessive, and if followed up by a period of quietness (which telegrams from Shanghai advise) will afford a better prospect in dealing with the first arrivals from Hankow and Foochow; but under any circumstances the new country congous will be dealt with very cautiously on the part of dealers at the commencement, as trade throughout the country has not been satisfactory during the past four months.

Green.—The uncertainty as to the ultimate working of the Adulteration Act has broken up the range of prices, valuations being quite fanciful, and at the whim of the buyer. It will be well for all concerned in this important branch of the trade when the law is defined, that merchants may know the "coloured" tea to import.

Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

HARBOUR OF COLOMBO (LOAN) BILL.

(June 18th.) The Earl of CARNARVON, in moving the second reading of this Bill, said that as their lordships were aware the steamers for India, China, and Australia all touched at Ceylon. The harbour they had hitherto made use of there was that of Galle, and arrangements had been made by his noble friend opposite (the Earl of Kimberley) for the spending of a sum of money in the improvement of that harbour. Since then there had been an inquiry, the result of which was to show that the extent of the harbour of Galle was inadequate, that the currents were dangerous, that there were considerable swells there, and that it was indented with rocks. One of these rocks was only discovered last year. Many wrecks occurred there. Indeed, there was scarcely a year in which there was not at least one. A very experienced captain said that he had never gone into the harbour of Galle without a sense of apprehension, and had never got out of it without a sense of relief. Colombo was free from those drawbacks. There were no currents or dangerous swells there, and Colombo was the terminus of a line of railway by which the produce of the island was brought down to the coast. Under these circumstances, it had been thought advisable to make Colombo the harbour of call in lieu of Galle, and the object of this Bill was to transfer to the former the loan made in favour of the latter. The colony was prepared to spend £600,000 on the harbours, and the Treasury undertook to advance by way of loan a sum of £250,000 at 5 per cent., 3½ of which was to be for interest and the remaining 1½ to form a sinking fund for the repayment of the principal. The security of the island was quite a safe one. The revenues of the island had rapidly advanced during the last three or four years, and there was a considerable balance of receipts over expenditure.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY entirely concurred with his noble friend in approving the object of the Bill. His noble friend had, however, made a slight mistake in saying that the arrangements for the loan to Galle were made when he was at the Colonial-office. These arrangements had been made before his accession to office. He found that the expenditure would be so large and that the improvement of that harbour was beset with such difficulties, further inquiry was desirable. That inquiry had been made by competent engineers, and the result was a report in favour of the harbour of Colombo. He agreed with his noble friend that the security for the loan was sufficient. The colony was acting with spirit in the matter, and the advance by way of loan from this country was no more than ought to have been expected.

The Bill was then read a second time.

The Sumatra (str.) from Java to Holland was towed into Aden on the 20th inst. short of coals.

Naval and Military.

The naval papers are still discussing the question of who shall succeed to the China command, and have brought forward the name of Rear-Admiral King Hall. These are mere rumours and conjectures, no decision having been arrived at by the Lords of the Admiralty. The Audacious, now fitting at Chatham, is not likely to be ready until September, as she is to receive new boilers. The Amethyst is intended for the Pacific and not the China station. The necessary machinery for the repairs of the engines of the Modeste, now at Bombay, will be forwarded out, and she will, when in order, proceed to the China station. The Adventure, which will convey supernumeraries to the Australian station, and thence proceed to China, will probably leave Portsmouth to morrow. The Victor Emmanuel, it is expected, will leave for Hong Kong in a week or two.

A draft consisting of three officers—Captain Whitla, Lieut. Elliot, and Lieut. Lang—three serjeants, and eighty-five rank and file of the 10th Regiment, is under orders for Singapore; and a draft of the Royal Engineers, one serjeant, one corporal, and nineteen privates, is under orders for Hong Kong. These detachments, together with the draft of the 80th Regiment for Hong Kong, noticed in our last issue, will proceed in the Victor Emmanuel.

The 81st Regiment being under orders for India, Capt. H. T. Jones becomes disqualified for the appointment of Brigade-Major in China, to which he was recently nominated, in succession to Capt. Walker.

Rear-Admiral F. A. Campbell died on the 10th inst., at his residence, in Beaufort Gardens, in his fifty-seventh year. He entered the Royal Naval College in January, 1830, and embarked, January 2, 1832, as a volunteer, on board the Madagascar, stationed in the Mediterranean, where he became midshipman of the Barham. After serving for a few months in the President and Vernon, the former of which ships conveyed his father, Sir Colin, to Halifax, he joined, in August, 1834, the Thalia, bearing the flag of Sir Patrick Campbell, at the Cape of Good Hope. From February until October, 1836, he was successfully employed in suppressing the slave trade on the coast of Africa, in the Waterwitch; he passed his examination in December of the same year; and on May 11, 1837, at which period he had been serving in the capacity of mate, again in the Thalia, he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in the Scout. In that vessel, as in the Waterwitch, he cruised with great activity in quest of slavers. While on the coast of Africa Mr. Campbell suffered very much from fever. His appointments in the character of lieutenant, after he left the Scout, which was paid off in November, 1839, were—Jan. 28, 1840, as additional, to the Winchester, flagship of Sir T. Harvey, in North America and the West Indies; March 7, 1841, as senior, to the Cleopatra, on the same station; Feb. 11, 1842, as additional, to the Cornwallis, bearing the flag of Sir W. Parker, on the coast of China; and Aug. 25 and Nov. 17, 1842, to the Harlequin, and, as first, to the Cambrian. As additional of the Cornwallis, Lieut. Campbell served in the Driver, up the Yangtsze Kiang, and off Nanking during the latter part of the first China war. From the Cambrian he twice jumped overboard, and on one of these occasions had the good fortune to save the life of a boy. His gallant conduct in each instance was mentioned officially. On the paying-off of the Cambrian, in Aug. 1845, her officers and crew were complimented by the Admiralty upon the order and efficiency of their ship, and on April 27, 1846, her first lieutenant, who had been strongly recommended by the commodore, was promoted to the rank of commander. Capt. Campbell's next appointments were—Aug. 20, 1847, to the Espiègle, in which vessel, paid off in Feb. 1849, he was again employed on the China station; Oct. 27, 1851, for nine months, to the Rosamond, in the West Indies; and, May 16, 1854, to the Hornet, on the Home and North Sea stations. During his command of the Espiègle he twice obtained the acknowledgments of Lord Palmerston; the first time, for the manner in which he conducted a delicate and difficult mission to Nankin, and the second for affording protection to Chinese vessels against piracy. With reference to the former service, he received a letter of approval from Commodore Plumridge, the commander-in-chief on the East India station, who also thanked him for his remarks on the navigation and defences of the Yangtsze-Kiang. He was advanced to his post Sept. 13, 1854; was appointed, Dec. 8, 1855, to the Trusty, floating battery; and on June 3, 1856, to the Vulture, in the Mediterranean. He attained his flag rank on April 1, 1870, his last command being the Detached Squadron. Admiral Campbell had received the China medal.

A telegram from Simla announces the death, on the 7th inst., of Surg.-General George Stewart Beatson, C.B., M.D., principal medical officer of Her Majesty's British Forces in India, and an Honorary Physician to the Queen. The late Dr. Beatson studied at Glasgow University, and entered the Army Medical Department as an assistant surgeon in 1838, and served in Ceylon from 1839 to 1851, when he was appointed surgeon to the 51st Light Infantry, with which regiment he served throughout the second Burmese War in 1852-53, for his share in which he received a medal, with a clasp for Pegu. He also served in the Crimean War during the winter of 1854-55, being employed on the medical staff at Scutari and Smyrna; and after being promoted to the rank of Deputy Inspector-General in 1859, he served for eighteen months in the Ionian Islands, and then for two years in the Madras Presidency. In 1863 he became surgeon-general, and was appointed principal medical officer of the British troops in India. In the course of a career extending over thirty-six years Dr. Beatson had earned the reputation of being one of the ablest medical officers in the British service, and by his death the Army Medical Department has sustained a severe loss. Dr. Beatson was nominated an Honorary Physician to Her Majesty on the 13th of March, 1866, and was created a Companion of the Bath in 1869.

Navigating-Lieutenant James P. M'Ewan, R.N., has been appointed from the command of H.M.'s colonial steamer Sherbro, attached to the Government of Sierra Leone, to H.M.'s colonial steamer Pluto at Singapore.

RUSSIA AND CENTRAL ASIA.—An interesting article on "Germany's Interest in Central Asia" is contributed by Dr. Emil Schlagintweit to the Cologne Gazette. The States which, he says, are most interested from a commercial point of view in the advance of Russia in Central Asia and the construction of railways in Persia are Germany and Austria. The completion of the Russian railways, the abolition of serfage, and the consequent augmentation of the prosperity of the Russian peasants, the development of Russian industry, and the increase of the influence of Russia on her Asiatic frontiers, have produced so favourable an effect on the trade of Germany with Russia that the opening up of Central Asia and China must produce a commercial revolution of incalculable importance. The land-trade between Russia and China is as yet comparatively unimportant. The exports and imports amount on an average to 30,000,000 marks a year, and will probably not increase during the next few years, for no improvement in this respect can be looked for until peace and order are restored in the Chinese Empire, and the roads and railways, now only in contemplation, are finished. But when this is done Russia will be a much more formidable competitor for the international trade with China than the Americans with their Pacific railway.

GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—The Royal Geographical Society held its annual meeting at Burlington-gardens, under the presidency of Sir Bartle Frere, yesterday. It was stated in the council's report that the net increase of members during the year had been 177. The President, in his review of the year, alluded to the deaths of Dr. Livingstone, Mr. Charles Livingstone, the Bishop of Winchester, Sir Henry Holland, Sir Robert M'Clure, and Mr. Francis Garnier. The Founder's Medal was awarded to Dr. Schweinfurth for his travels in Central Africa, and the Victoria Medal to Colonel Warburton for his exploration of the hitherto unknown part of North-Western Australia. In the evening the usual dinner was held at Willis's Rooms, the guests numbering about 180, Sir Bartle Frere presiding. Sir Bartle Frere has resigned the Presidency of the Society, and is succeeded by Sir Henry Rawlinson.

CHINA MISSIONS.—At Hanley, Staffordshire, a great missionary meeting was held on the 15th inst., at which addresses were delivered by the Revds. W. N. Hall and J. Lees, of Tientsin, and Mr. Edmund Wheatley, of the Chinese Customs Service. It was resolved to raise £2,000 for the special training of native preachers in connection with the Methodist Mission at Tientsin. Mark Firth, Esq., of Sheffield, gave £500 in aid of the project. A valedictory service took place on Friday night at the United Methodist Free Church, Grove-Street, Liverpool, the occasion being the departure of the Rev. R. Swallow, late of Grimsby, for China, as a missionary in connection with this denomination. The Rev. R. D. Maud, the superintendent of the Liverpool circuit, presided, and a number of ministers and ladies and gentlemen associated with the church and taking an interest in missions attended to wish Mr. Swallow "God-speed."

COLONEL GORDON'S EXPEDITION.—A letter in The Times from Mr. Horace Waller, referring to Colonel "Chinese" Gordon's expedition, states that the Colonel, leaving Khartoum on the 21st of April in a steamer, visited the Sobat river and the various stations on either side, and reached Gondokoro before any news of his arrival in the country could get wind, and he was back again at Khartoum on the 4th of May, the only difficulty or delay arising from the cutting wood for fuel during this forty-three days' trip. The slave trade appears to have been at its lowest ebb previous to Colonel Gordon's arrival in the land, and those who know him best may be quite sure that the power so wisely placed in his hands by the Khedive will, with firmness and mercy, be turned to the best account in extinguishing it altogether.

TEA ADULTERATION.—At the Birkenhead Police-court six grocers have been summoned for having sold adulterated green tea. The cases had been adjourned pending an appeal in the Court of Queen's Bench against a decision of the magistrates who had ordered a grocer to pay a fine of 5s. and costs for selling tea faced with gypsum and Prussian blue. The decision of the magistrates (as reported in our issue of the 5th inst.) was confirmed by the higher Court, which, at the same time, decided that sellers of adulterated tea should inform their customers of the circumstance. The magistrates did not attribute any dishonest intentions to the defendants, but were of opinion that a verbal notice should be given to their customers. The defendants, who pleaded guilty, were then each fined 5s. and costs.

THE TONNAGE MEASUREMENT OF MERCHANT VESSELS.—At a conference held on the 13th inst. at the Board of Trade, regarding the Merchant Shipping (Measurement) Bill, there was a large attendance, including representatives from London, Liverpool, Hull, Glasgow, and Leith, and the following Scotch members:—Mr. Grieve, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Whitelaw, and Mr. Macgregor. The clauses of the Bill were discussed at great length, and after three hours' conference, Sir Charles Adderley, the President of the Board of Trade, consented to a select committee of the House of Commons to consider the Bill.

THE Netherlands Mail Steamship Company's new steamship Prinses Amalia sailed from Southampton on the 19th inst., en route from Amsterdam to Padang, Batavia, Samarang, and other ports in the Dutch East Indies, via the Suez Canal, taking out 62 passengers, 150 Dutch troops, 14 bags of mails, and a full general cargo.

THE China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vasco de Gama arrived at Hong Kong on the 13th inst., from Yokohama and San Francisco, and would leave again on her return to same ports on the 17thinst.

IT is stated that four of the competitors for the prizes offered by Mr. Edward Pease for essays on the opium traffic are young Chinese writers.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 17.

In a former letter I gave you the outlines of the interpellation about the Atchin War; but now that the official Byblad, containing the Parliamentary reports, has been published, I think it necessary to give you a translation of a part of the Ministerial reply. The main question was, is the War finished with the second expedition, or will a third one be necessary? The reply was, as you know, anything but satisfactory. Mr. Fransen Van de Putte shrugged his shoulders, and said it was impossible to say, as he was not yet in possession of the reports, which were forwarded by Mr. Van Swieten at and since (!) his departure from Atchin. It thus seems that it was not worth the trouble and the cost to telegraph the principal tenor of these reports, notwithstanding that an extraordinary credit of a couple of thousand guineas was asked and granted for this purpose. The Minister could only state that the following clauses appear in a report of the 17th of March, forwarded by the Commander-in-Chief to the Governor-General:—"As it will be proved to your Excellency by the several reports, the situation here is such that it is very difficult to foresee when the war will be finished by the submission of the chiefs and the people. This may occur within some months, but it is likewise possible that it will last years. The Government can only say this; it appears from a large number of communications which the Ministry received that the Atchinese flatter themselves that the second expedition will leave as it came, and that our troops cannot stay in Atchin; it is not improbable that they will be more inclined for submission when they see that they have miscalculated on this. Nothing can be said with any certainty. It is possible that we shall experience continual opposition, and that we shall be obliged again to send new troops to Atchin. But nothing is decided by the Government, neither has any proposal been received. Still less has been decided if General Van Swieten will casu quo return to Sumatra. How could anything be decided before the final report of Van Swieten has been received, and before some time has elapsed, during which the course of affairs can be seen? The Chamber trusts that the Government remains active, and will try to do and to prepare what might be necessary." The Arnhemsche Courant—the enfante terrible of the Liberal party—says in a criticism:—"The Minister has spoken most prudently; he did not say one word for which he cannot answer for. For an optimist it is not possible to speak less optimismously. But the reply was anything but satisfactory and encouraging. It is an excellent tactic both in and out of Parliament not to say what we do not know; but it is disappointing that the Government has so very few things to say in a matter of so much interest. For the moment we must again wait and not give an opinion. All that is done will depend on the behaviour of the Atchinese chiefs." The same paper further demonstrates that it is clearly proved that the Minister was not inclined to say anything that might hurt Mr. Van Swieten. This is quite right, he could not and might not act otherwise because Mr. Van Swieten was absent. But he spoke with so much prudence and so much reserve that it leads to the conclusion that the Minister was not quite content, and is disappointed in some degree. It does not need to be demonstrated further that our situation with Atchin is as vague as it possibly can be, and only time will show what is to happen. The thick-and-thin supporters in the press, of course, cry louder than ever, Victory! and snap at all those who dare to say that the situation is not so rose-coloured. The article of the Penang Gazette, which arrived by the last mail, made some impression here; formerly this paper was in opposition to our authority, but it now advises the Atchinese to submit themselves, because their opposition will be henceforth in vain. I need not say that the Reuter's telegram about Captain Van Dalen made some sensation here, the more because we did not know what had happened—we only heard this from the last mail papers. This deplorable fact proved that discontent prevails amongst the officers of the army; notwithstanding that this is denied by the Liberal papers.

The Parliamentary session will soon be closed; a number of the members have already left the Hague to enjoy the beautifnl weather elsewhere. Still very important questions are to be decided. To-day the debate will be opened about the Reform Bill, which, perhaps, will be carried; the members will further deal with the Bill proposing to abolish the duty on soap. Several papers propose the abolition of the duty on sugar, but the Minister disinclines to propose it, because the treasury needs the five millions which this tax produces. He is of opinion that the trade in this article will not suffer, now that England abolished the tax. A total reorganisation of our tax-system is, however, necessary, and it is generally wished that this should have taken place before the Reform Bill was discussed. The Minister Van Delden stated, when he demonstrated that the treasury cannot do without the five millions of the sugar-tax, that our actual budget will leave an unfavourable balance of three and a half millions, which, however, can be covered by treasury bonds. The Ministry is authorised to issue them for an amount of six millions to provide in the costs of building State railways. The question of the reorganisation plan of the navy will not be brought on the tapis this session, the members being of opinion that the Minister has projected his plan with too much haste. The definitive budget, viz., the figures, must be carried before 1st July.

In my former letter I told you that the Government would this session lay before the members a Bill to provide Java with railways. Now that the official Byblad has come to hand, it seems that this is not quite right. The Minister said that this Bill "would undertake in this session the voyage to the Chamber." A strange expression indeed, which was misunderstood by many. The Minister should have said that the Bill was on its way to the Council of State. And what a crusade will be made against it when it arrives there. And those poor Javanese who have hoped on for three years that railways would be introduced!

The King will leave the Hague before the 18th for his trip abroad. It is said that he will start at once for Ems to meet the Emperor of Russia.

Mr. Van Assen, the newly appointed editor of the Bataviaasch Handelsblad, will start next month with the Prins van Oranje.

In the district, Amersfoort, an election must take place to fill the vacant seat in Parliament. The Liberal candidate is Mr. G. M. van der Linden, the anti-revolutionary one Mr. M. M. Van Asch van Wyk.

Last Friday an annual meeting of shareholders of the International Credit and Trading Company was held. The report stated that the operations of the last year had given a most satisfactory result. The business has developed enormously, and the undertakings were crowned with success, especially on Java, which must be ascribed to the energy of the Java managers. The transactions for their own account, undertaken by the head-office, were not favoured by the circumstances that in average a lull for imported goods prevailed on the Java market, and prices generally declined. The cotton goods, which were forwarded to Japan in 1873 for an amount of f.303,432.66, have given a profit of f.21,840.35, but this profit was reduced to f.1,026.37 by a loss of f.4,513.98 (resulting from a former consignment), and by discharging the account under this head with f.16,300 on the goods in stock. The sale of the other merchandises has led to an unfavourable balance of f.5,143.98. The trade in produces, which have not taken place on a large scale, because the initiative was principally left to the Java managers, has given a loss of f.16,066.26. On the contrary, the business for account of others has developed enormously, and has been successful. The exports for account of third parties amounted in 1871 to f.362,494 only, in 1872 to f.432,584, and in 1873 to f.1,009,420, uncounted the large lots which were consigned directly to the Java branches. The consignments from Java reached also a large amount, so that in toto the commission account of the head-office shows a favourable balance of f.70,864.74½, that is, about 90 per cent. more than last year. The profits made by the Java branches were very important. The business for their own account resulted, at Batavia, in a profit of f.156,321.20; at Samarang, f.241,944.02; at Sourabaya, f.25,321.57; making a total of f.423,586.79. For order and account of third parties important transactions took place; in 1873 we shipped for an amount of f.3,363,571, whilst to the three branches (partly for account of the head office) was consigned for a sum of f.4,032,000. The credits that were given produced a loss of f.23,386.32 only. The following is said respecting the culture-estates:—The tobacco undertakings, Djepon and Glentingan in Rembang, have given an important profit to the tenant, of which the company receives 25 per cent. instead of rents; when the account of the crop of 1872-73 is made up, the net profit will be brought on the profit and loss account. The tobacco undertaking, Lodjadjar, has given a profit of f.60,552.19. The small estate, Djambirons, of which the company owns the half, will produce a crop valuated at 30,000 lbs. Some other tobacco affairs showed on December a debt of f.59,238. The indigo undertakings did not give a satisfactory result, they were debtors for an amount of f.671,688. Four coffee planters, working with their own capital, remained credited on the said date for f.103,986, whilst the debts of the other plantations, which are worked with capital provided by the company, amounted to f.332 762.52. The sugar manufactory in Krawang has not yet given a satisfactory result; the debt was decreased to f.443,669.60. The relations with Chinese sugar manufacturers is being developed. The commission account of the Java branches showed a loss of f.365,209.65 or 28 per cent. more than last year. The interest account closed with a favourable balance of f.112,319.54½. The total amount of profits was f.1,048,352.39, which was reduced to f.511,890.59, on account of several expenses, dividend for the Java branches, &c.; whilst there was still a favourable balance of f.1,665.88 of last year, which was added to the net profit. To the shareholders was paid on their paid-up capital an interest of 5 per cent., or f.62,500, whilst f.5,223.14 was added to the reserve account. Of the balance of f.445,833.33, 20 per cent. was destined for the reserve account, which reaches now a capital of f.207,321.44, 5 per cent. to the commissaries, 15 per cent. to the managers, and 60 per cent. to the shareholders, so that their dividend amounts to 26 4-10 per cent. The report of the books and balance was most satisfactory. The administration—the commission appointed to inquire after it—was in the very best order. Both the reports were approved. Mr. P. Havelaar was re-elected as commissary; whilst in the place of the late Mr. Sander Mr. J. Mees was duly elected.

A general dulness prevails in our Money and Stock Markets, and transactions have been of little importance.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 18.

The First Chamber will re-assemble on the 25th inst. According to statistics presented by the Minister of Finance, our war with Sumatra has already cost 13 millions of guilders, and will cost probably 6½ millions florins more. The last calculation however, is rather vague.

The Minister of the Naval Department has answered the section report about his Budget. I gather from his reply that in his next Budget he will ask the necessary credit to increase the pay of naval officers.

The valuation of the 86,637 bales Coffee, to be put up in auction by the Trading Company on the 24th inst., is based on a quotation of 56c. for good ordinary Java.

Prince Alexander has been appointed a Captain in the navy.

The King started to-day for his trip abroad.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—There has been a good demand for consumption, and prices have advanced 1c. Good ordinary Java is quoted 56½c., and but small quantities are offered at this price. A lot of 1,500 bags Macassar, ex Batavia, has found buyers.

RAW SUGAR.—The market is firmer, and a steady trade is being done for export and home refineries. The sales amount to about 10,000 mats at f.2½ to f.2, under November values.

TEA.—The trade is busy inspecting the cargo of China, ex Kirkland, which will be offered for sale on the 18th inst. About that date some lots of Java will also be offered by private tender.

RICE.—The market is rather dull, and the only sale has been 4,498 bags Java, ex Maddaloni; the parcels ex Java Packet remained unsold.

JAVA VANILLA.—About 60 kilo, ex Prins Van Oranje, were sold at high but secret prices.

THE NEW TREATY WITH SIAM.
BRITISH INTERESTS IN LAOS.

THE text of the new Treaty concluded between the King of SIAM and the Viceroy of INDIA, for the more satisfactory settlement of our relations with the tributary chief of Chiangmai, will be found in extenso in another column of this journal. The ratifications have, we believe, been already exchanged, and the Treaty itself will come into operation on the first of the ensuing year. It is too late for any modifications to be made in its provisions now, and our business therefore is to review the probable effects of an arrangement which for good or for ill we have bound ourselves to accept, and which cannot be revised till seven years shall have expired. There are few British subjects, if any, really born in the West to be found in Chiangmai; and it may perhaps be a very long time before a white colony is established in Laos; but for all that there are a great number of our Birmese people there, trafficking, many of them, with English capital advanced in Moulmein, at work in the Chiangmai teak forests, or pushing trade in English goods among the towns. Such persons as these, if unprovided with passports, are no longer to enjoy the protection of extra-territorial rights; but, in the case of claims brought against them by Siamese, they are to be dealt with in the ordinary local Courts. The same rule is to prevail with respect to criminal matters. Native Indians, subjects of Her Britannic MAJESTY, if they enter Chiangmai without passports, shall be liable to the local Court, and to the local law, for offences committed by them in Siamese territory. This is a concession of doubtful expediency. It is an attempt to steer between two broad principles, each of which has hitherto obtained supporters, though from widely opposed schools of thought. In the one camp we are urged to remember that native Courts depend for their evidence on torture, that the underpaid judges are bribed as of course, and that the interests of justice and civilisation, to say nothing of commerce, require that Great Britain should everywhere look to it that her children are always tried by those rules which righteousness and justice require. On the other are gathered those who argue that we have no right to force our usages and predominating power upon an independent unoffending nation completely against her will, pointing out that if a British trader repairs to a foreign country he does so for his own profit or pleasure, and must abide by the laws established there, or else remain at home. We are not going to investigate this subject here; our wish is rather to point out that in our little Treaty with Chiangmai we have given up one principle, and yet not gone wholly over to the other. By so doing we have committed a serious error, and we shall by no means find litigation among the British Birmese in Chiangmai made any the more easy to deal with than it was before. As to passports, they are of some use undoubtedly, but a man ought not to be deprived of his rights as a British citizen because he has lost that valuable document, or turns up unprovided with it to support his claims. Birmese and Tongsoos travel in companies, and each company obtains a single passport, containing the names of the party, and entrusted to the leader's care. Often they quarrel when on their journey, and turn some of their number adrift; or else by assent, for the sake of trade, or because they cannot agree upon the better of two routes to pursue, they voluntarily divide their expedition. Those who quit the main body of course leave their passports behind, and thus respectable persons, entrusted with English goods or capital, may be deprived of their lawful protection by accident or caprice. Nothing is so common among Asiatics as to bring false charges against one another. Sometimes it is an accusation of theft got up to recover the value of property alleged to have been stolen. Sometimes it is the crafty weapon of a rival in trade, or of a personal enemy athirst for his revenge. Hence any British Birman or Tongsoo—and these people are always falling out—who knows that his antagonist has not his passport in his own possession, may get the latter involved in the meshes of a Chiangmai Criminal Court by laying some information there against him. These are no fancied evils, we are raking up no imaginary cases. Disputes of this kind will assuredly occur, as those well know who have had any experience of the litigious and quarrelsome Birman or Tongsoo. Another question we may well ask is, why British Indians unprovided with passports are to be tried for their crimes by the local courts in one remote province of Siam and not in any other remote province? On what principle can we concede this right to the Court at Chiangmai and refuse it at Ubon, for example, or Tringanu, which are equally portions of his Siamese MAJESTY'S realms, places which British Indians frequent, but where no British officers reside? Treaties should be based on well-defined comprehensive principles, and not patched up to meet some difficulties in one particular spot.

Now as to the teak forests. It ought never to be forgotten that these forests are the property of the members of the reigning family in Chiangmai, and are one of the main sources from which, in the shape of a duty on the trees felled there, their incomes are derived. Hence the more teak cut in the forest the better for its proprietor. And because the latter gives one man a permit to work there, he never considers himself bound to refuse similar permits to every other applicant. This is the custom of the country. Monopoly grants are not understood, and naturally so. In the forest there is room enough for all whom its owners authorise to cut there. And because a man is the first applicant for a permit usage does not grant him a right to the forest in severalty for a term of years. How could the proprietor obtain his revenues if this were the case? The grant must be for a term of years, otherwise no one would embark the necessary capital in the undertaking, and hence any grantee who failed to raise the money for his operations might, if the permit were construed as a monopoly grant, keep the forest actually closed, and the owner without income (tolls, that is, not rent) for a protracted period of time. After this explanation our readers will probably agree with us that the 11th clause of the new Treaty makes a very unsatisfactory attempt to settle this part of the question. "The "Prince of CHIANGMAI," so it runs, "shall endeavour to "prevent owners of forests from executing agreements "with more than one party for the same timber or forests." The PRINCE "shall endeavour." Yes, but what if he fails? He will certainly insist that he has done his best, and tried his utmost, and that he has not found himself able to get the owner to agree. The wording, be it remarked, is not "The PRINCE will prevent," which would bind him to compel, but "will endeavour to prevent," a phrase going no further than persuasion or advice. Unless great caution is used in clearing this point up by a memorandum of the two contracting Governments appended to the Treaty while there is yet time, the forest owners, whose incomes depend upon their timber tolls, will find themselves in a very hard case, and difficulties will assuredly arise. If rights in severalty are henceforth to be conveyed, the whole conditions of the permit ought to be changed. First rents should be reserved, instead of tolls or dues on the trees actually felled. Each forest should be parcelled out into small districts, and every such district made the subject of a separate grant. Lastly, the grantee should be obliged to find sufficient security for at least one year's rent of his district; and a clause should be introduced giving the owner a right of re-entry in the event of his dues being in arrear. It seems, from a consideration of this Treaty, to be most desirable that a resident British officer should be permanently stationed at Chiangmai; endless trouble, litigation, and ultimate miscarriage of justice would thus be avoided, at a really trifling cost to our national exchequer. The teak trade is good, and the business in piece goods is not inconsiderable in Northern Laos, if credit were only sufficiently established there to attract capital into the country. Nothing is so necessary for this purpose as the knowledge that a British officer is on the spot, ready to settle disputes, to see agreements duly carried out, and to press the native officials to keep their highways clear of dacoits. This point is of all the more importance because the overland route with China is once more drawing public notice. The first step towards opening up that channel of commerce is to do what we can to get the Shan tribes in a settled condition, with their highways open, and their trade untrammelled either by political jealousies or burdensome local dues. In this the British Resident would be in the true sense a pioneer. The French, too, now are in treaty with Birma, and we ought for this reason all the more to open our eyes in the direction of Northern Laos, instead of shutting them to all that happens outside the British frontier lines.

M. VON BUTZOW AT PEKING.

BY a telegram via Kiachta we learn that M. VON BUTZOW, the newly-appointed Russian Minister to China, was officially received by the EMPEROR at Peking on the 20th May, with the usual ceremonials. This intelligence, so far as it goes, is eminently satisfactory, and though we await, with some little anxiety, the details of the reception of the Russian Plenipotentiary, there seems no reason to suppose that there was any material difficulty about the matter, or that his Excellency allowed himself to be treated with the same scant courtesy as was exhibited on that memorable day at the end of last June towards Mr. WADE and his colleagues. We trust that, in future, all Envoys will, immediately on their arrival at Peking, imitate M. VON BUTZOW'S good example, and demand audiences of the EMPEROR for the purpose of presenting credentials from their respective Sovereigns in the same manner as if they had been accredited to any European Court. If they will only take this course in a firm and at the same time properly respectful manner, we doubt not that ere long the ridiculous exclusiveness of the Chinese Court will be effectually broken down, and that official intercourse will then be carried on more in accordance with the ideas and usages of civilised nations. Some people may think this a matter of small moment, and so it may be in some respects, but yet it has its importance, for it cannot be doubted that, when it is once patent to the Chinese Empire at large that their Sovereign is ready and willing on proper occasions to receive foreign Envoys as coming from his equals, the relations existing between the middle kingdom and the outside world will be placed on a far more satisfactory footing—a result which in itself is much to be desired, and will furthermore be productive of the greatest possible advantage to all parties concerned.

IN the last number of the London and China Telegraph we reproduced a notable document emanating from Her MAJESTY'S Legation at Peking, and signed by Mr. W. GRAHAM SANDFORD, Secretary of Legation. Mr. SANDFORD has, we find, served the QUEEN in various capacities, but though he has been in the Diplomatic Service some sixteen years, he is evidently still the veriest tyro at the composition of circulars and despatches; otherwise he would hardly have informed the British residents at Peking that "the streets along which his MAJESTY goes and returns will be closed to all passengers." The educational tests to which Mr. SANDFORD was subjected before becoming an attaché could not have been of a very severe order, for, on reference to the Foreign-office List, we observe that "he passed an examination [presumably not "competitive] before the Civil Service Commissioners, and "obtained an honorary certificate," all in one day! Apart from the style and composition of this circular, we object in toto to its substance and promulgation from the Legation. It is another example of the manner in which Mr. WADE maintains the prestige and dignity of the British Minister at Peking.

IT appears that private telegrams have been received which announce that a misunderstanding between China and Japan has resulted from the operations undertaken by Japan against Formosa. This is what we foreshadowed would take place if the Japanese persisted in the expedition. The precise nature of the casus belli is not yet known; but the telegram goes so far as to say that the difficulty has led to a declaration of war.

WE understand that the Hon. T. G. GROSVENOR has been appointed to succeed Mr. SANDFORD as Second Secretary at Peking. Mr. GROSVENOR has already served in that capacity, and only returned last year from Peking.

TREATY CONCLUDED AT CALCUTTA BETWEEN LORD NORTHBROOK, GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA, AND HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF SIAM.

ARTICLE I.

His Majesty the King of Siam will cause the Prince of Chiangmai to establish and maintain guard stations, under proper officers, on the Siamese bank of the Salween River, which forms the boundaries of Chiangmai belonging to Siam, and to maintain a sufficient police force for the prevention of murder, robbery, dacoity, and other heinous crimes.

ARTICLE II.

If any persons having committed dacoity in any of the territories of Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon, cross the frontiers in British territory the British authorities and police shall use their best endeavours to apprehend them. Such dacoits, when apprehended, shall, if Siamese subjects, be delivered to the Siamese authorities at Chiangmai; if British subjects, they shall be dealt with by the British officer in the Yoongzaleen district.

If any persons having committed dacoity in British territory cross the frontier in Chiangmai, Lakhon, or Lamphoon, the Siamese authorities and police shall use their best endeavours to apprehend them. Such dacoits, when apprehended, if British subjects, shall be delivered over to the British officer in the Yoongzaleen district; if Siamese subjects, they shall be dealt with by the Siamese authorities at Chiangmai.

If any persons, whether provided with passports under Article 4 of this Treaty or not, commit dacoity in British or Siamese territory, and are apprehended in the territory in which dacoity was committed, they may be tried and punished by the local courts without question as to their nationality.

Property plundered by dacoits, when recovered by the authorities on either side of the frontier, shall be delivered to its proper owner.

ARTICLE III.

The Siamese authorities in Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon will afford due assistance and protection to British subjects carrying on trade or business in any of those territories, and the British Government in India will afford similar assistance and protection to Siamese subjects from Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon carrying on trade or business in British territory.

ARTICLE IV.

British subjects entering Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon from British Burmah must provide themselves with passports from the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, or such officers as he appoints in this behalf, stating their names, calling, and description; such passports must be renewed for each journey, and must be shown to the Siamese officers at the frontier stations or in the interior of Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon on demand. Persons provided with passports and not carrying any articles prohibited under the Treaty concluded between Her Majesty the Queen of England and his Majesty the King of Siam on the 18th of April, 1855, and the supplementary agreement concluded between certain Royal Commissioners on the part of the Siamese Government, and a Commissioner on the part of the British Government, on the 13th of May, 1856, shall be allowed to proceed on their journey without interference; persons unprovided with passports may be turned back to the frontier, but shall not be subjected to further interference.

ARTICLE V.

For the purpose of settling further disputes of a civil nature between British and Siamese subjects in Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon, belonging to Siam, the following provisions are agreed to.

A. His Majesty the King of Siam shall appoint proper persons to be Judges in Chiangmai, with jurisdiction—

(1.) To investigate and decide claims of British subjects against Siamese subjects in Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon.

(2.) To investigate and determine claims of Siamese subjects against British subjects entering Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon from British Burmah, and having passports under Article 4, provided such British subjects consent to the jurisdiction of the Court.

B. Claims of Siamese subjects against British subjects entering Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon from British Burmah, and holding passports under Article 4, but not consenting to the jurisdiction of the Judges at Chiangmai appointed as aforesaid, shall be investigated and decided by the British Consul at Bangkok, or by the British officer of the Yoongzaleen district.

C. Claims of Siamese subjects against British subjects entering Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon from British Burmah, but not holding passports under Article 4, shall be investigated and decided by the ordinary local Courts.

ARTICLE VI.

Siamese subjects in British Burmah having claims against each other may apply to the Deputy Commissioner of the district in which they may happen to be to arbitrate between them. Such Deputy Commissioner shall use his good offices to effect an amicable settlement of the dispute, and if both parties have agreed to his arbitration his award shall be final, and binding on them. Similarly British subjects in Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon having claims against each other may apply to any of the Judges at Chiangmai appointed under Article 5, who shall use his good offices to effect an amicable settlement of the dispute, and if both parties have agreed to his arbitration his award shall be final, and binding on them.

ARTICLE VII.

Native Indian subjects of Her Britannic Majesty entering Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon, from British Burmah, who are not provided with passports under Article 4, shall be liable to the local Courts and the local law for offences committed by them in Siamese territories. Native Indian subjects as aforesaid who are provided with passports under Article 4 shall be dealt with for such offences by the British Consul at Bangkok or by the British Officer in the Yoongzaleen district according to British Law.

ARTICLE VIII.

The Siamese authorities in Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon, and the British authorities in Yoongzaleen district will at all times use their best endeavours to procure and furnish to the Courts in the Yoongzaleen district and the Consular Court at Bangkok and to the Court at Chiangmai and the Court of Siam respectively such evidence and witnesses as may be required for the determination of Civil and Criminal cases pending in the Courts.

ARTICLE IX.

In cases tried by the British Officer at the Yoongzaleen district or by the Judge at Chiangmai appointed under Article 5 in which Siamese or British subjects may respectively be interested, the Siamese or British authorities may respectively depute an officer to attend and listen to the investigation of the case, and copies of the proceedings will be furnished gratis to the Siamese or British authorities respectively if required.

ARTICLE X.

British subjects provided with passports under Art. 4 who desire to purchase, cut, or girdle timber in the forest of Chiangmai, Lakhon, and Lamphoon must enter into a written engagement for a definite period with the owner of the forest. Such agreement must be executed in duplicate, each party retaining a copy, and each copy must be sealed by one of the Siamese Judges at Chiangmai, appointed under Art. 5, and by the Prince of Chiangmai. A copy of every such agreement shall be furnished by the Judge at Chiangmai to the British officer in the Yoongzaleen district. Any British subject cutting or girdling trees in any forest, without the consent of the owner of the forest, obtained as aforesaid, or after the expiry of the agreement relating thereto, shall, if provided with a passport, be liable to pay such compensation to the owner of the forest as the British Consul at Bangkok or the officer of the Yoongzaleen district may deem reasonable; if unprovided with a passport he may be dealt with by the local Courts according to the laws of the country.

ARTICLE XI.

The judge at Chiangmai appointed under Art. 5, and the Prince of Chiangmai shall endeavour to prevent owners of forests from executing agreements with more than one party for the same timber or forests, and to prevent any person from improperly marking or effacing marks on timber which has been lawfully cut or marked by another person; and shall give such facilities as are in their power to purchasers and fellers of timber to identify their property. If the owners of forests prohibit the cutting, girdling, or removing of timber under agreements duly executed in accordance with Art. 10, the Judge at Chiangmai appointed under Art 5, and the Prince of Chiangmai, shall enforce the agreements. And the owners of such forests acting as aforesaid shall be liable to pay such compensation to the persons with whom they have entered into such agreement as the Judges at Chiangmai appointed as aforesaid many deem reasonable.

ARTICLE XII.

British subjects entering Siamese territory from British Burmah must, according to custom and the regulations of the country, pay the duties lawfully prescribed on goods liable to such duty; Siamese subjects entering British territory must, according to the regulations of the British Government, pay the duties lawfully prescribed on goods liable to such duty.

ARTICLE XIII.

The British officer of the Yoongzaleen district may, subject to the conditions of this Treaty, exercise all or any of the power that may be exercised by a British Consul under the Treaty between H.B.M. the Queen of England and H.M. the King of Siam on the 18th April, 1855, and the supplementary agreement concluded between certain Royal Commissioners on the part of the Siamese Government and a Commissioner on the part of the British Government on the 13th May, 1856.

ARTICLE XIV.

Except as and to the extent herein specially provided, nothing in this Treaty shall be taken to affect the provisions of any treaty or agreement now in force between the British and Siamese Governments.

ARTICLE XV.

After the lapse of seven years from the date on which this Treaty shall come into force, and on twelve months' notice given by either party, this Treaty shall be subject to revision by Commissioners, appointed on both sides for this purpose, who shall be empowered to decide on and adopt such amendments as experience shall prove to be desirable.

ARTICLE XVI.

This Treaty has been executed in English and Siamese, both versions having the same meaning, but as the British Plenipotentiary has no knowledge of the Siamese language it is hereby agreed that, in the event of any question of construction arising on this Treaty, the English text shall be accepted as conveying in every respect its true meaning and intention.

ARTICLE XVII.

The ratification of this Treaty by his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India having been communicated to the Siamese Plenipotentiary this Treaty shall be ratified by his Majesty the King of Siam, and such ratification shall be transmitted to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department at Calcutta, subject to modification within four months, or sooner, if possible. This Treaty, having been so ratified, shall come into force on January 1, 1875, A.D., corresponding with the first day of the third Siamese moon, in the year of Choh, 1236, of the Siamese Era, or on such earlier date as may be separately agreed upon.

TEA ADULTERATION.

The Committee of the House of Commons appointed to enquire into the operation of the Adulteration Act have taken further evidence on the subject of Tea Adulteration. The evidence of the witnesses was in substance as follows:—

Mr. Volckner, the analyst of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, was examined by Mr. C. S. Read. He gave his opinion that it could not be allowed that "colouring" or "facing" should be recognised as lawful, as this would be opening the door to every adulteration. He would not, however, have considered 1½ per cent. of facing an adulteration. Asked who would be the best judge of tea, a dealer of experience or an "average analytical chemist," he held that an analyst could do very little in regard to tea, as it was a matter more of quality than anything else. As to the judgment of the "average analysts," he thought this should be open to question; many of them, who were hastily appointed after the passing of the Act, had had to learn their business, and many of them had not even now had a sufficient training to enable them to be judges of fact in food analyses. Some of their statements in evidence had been very flippant and unwarrantable, and they had done harm by rendering the Act obnoxious to honest men, who had been wronged by analysts' statements founded on a want of knowledge. The witness referred to the statement of the "wholesale examinations" (many thousands in a brief period) described by Dr. Tidy as having been made by him, and said that this was not the way that analyses should be made, for it was impossible, from the number made, to take every case carefully, and thoroughly examine every sample with all the minutiæ necessary to arrive at the truth. This could not be done in a wholesale or hasty way. The witness did not think that tea was adulterated in this country, and he thought the sale of adulterated tea would come to an end here if all such teas were stopped at the Customs. He had not found any decidedly adulterated tea. In reply to Sir Henry Peek, he said he thought there should be a laboratory at Somerset-house to give the means of judging the analyst's analyses. He looked upon damaged tea when used to mix with other tea and sold as pure as an adulteration. He did not know that it was necessary to "face" tea to make it bear the voyage. He could not say—either in agreement or disagreement with Dr. Allen of Sheffield (whose evidence we reported last week)—whether when there was 69 per cent. of insoluble matter found in tea the tea contained exhausted leaves. In reply to Mr. Sandford, the witness said that though he knew that the facing of the tea was practised to make the tea appear better, yet he did not think it was morally an adulteration, because it was generally understood that tea was faced, just as it was known there was colour in butter and cheese; but in these cases the working man ate his butter and cheese and did not think about it. As to the facing of green tea being required to enable it to bear the voyage, black tea bore the voyage and was not faced.

Mr. James Barringer, who was described as a starch manufacturer, and who is known as a local administrator in London, said that years ago he had been employed to colour teas, and he now uncoloured teas. Before the passing of the Act he had been engaged by Lloyd's Salvage Committee to re-dry damaged tea, and this was done in bond. That tea (there was only one instance, he said, of this being done) was damaged by sea water, and he "faced" the whole of it, putting in colouring to some in order to make the whole of a uniform colour, but what was the colouring matter used he objected to say. The re-drying was done with the knowledge and concurrence of the Customs' authorities, and the officers came to his place, where they stopped day and night. He had faced "scented caper" to make it like "Canton gunpowder," and it was sold as gunpowder. What he had done had not added to the weight of the tea in any way, and the quality was not in any way injured. He considered, in fact, that in some cases it was improved by what was done. He had refused to have anything to do with green tea colouring since the decision in the Birkenhead adulteration case by Justice Blackburn, under the Act. Since the passing of the Act he had been engaged in taking the colour off tea. He had never mixed exhausted or foreign leaves, nor had he ever been asked to do so by his customers. He knew of no factory where exhausted leaves were remade up, and he did not believe it possible that there could be a factory for this purpose in England. He had not himself considered "facing" tea an adulteration, for it was not in any way injurious to the public. He considered the "facing" practised by him no deception upon the public, and he would not be a party to any such deception if he had thought it was such. He did regard himself as a "tea improver." There was no concealment in the conduct of his business. Having had read to him the statement of the witness Jackson (reported in our last issue) the witness said he did not believe the statement. The tea he "improved" was good tea, and only altered in appearance. Examined by Mr. Carpenter Garnier, the witness said he had "improved" this tea chiefly for country dealers. He kept two men at work upon it. In reply to Mr. Sandford he said he had not faced any of late. He chiefly received the teas he improved from wholesale dealers for customers in the country, but not entirely. What the object of his customers was in facing "scented caper" as "Canton gunpowder" he could not say, for in the scented caper the customers would get a good tea—as good as if they had the "gunpowder," for he believed that originally the two teas were alike. Of course there were different qualities of the teas, and perhaps the "facing," if it did not make the tea of better quality, made it of more value. Facing did not make tea heavier, for he had had a difficulty in getting the teas he had had to go back the same weights as they came—some of the dust being lost in the process. He had been engaged in taking colour from teas since this inquiry, and he thought in consequence of it. In reply to Sir H. Peek, the witness said that in the bonded damaged tea he had redried and coloured he did not think there was anything unwholesome about it. As to the reasons for colouring and uncolouring teas, in some parts of the country the people would only have black and in other parts only green, and so the teas were altered to suit the varying tastes. He knew nothing of the composition called catechu (said to be used to make teas astringent), and it was not true, as stated by Mr. Jackson in his letter to The Times, that damaged tea worth only 14d. a pound was made up into fine tea. In reply to Mr. Heygate, the witness said he thought that by removing the colour off tea he "improved" it. He did not desire to say publicly what the composition was with which tea used to be faced by him. He had treated teas for many houses in the country, but not for many in town. He had not faced tea since the judgment in the "Birkenhead case," for he did not wish to make himself amenable to the law. He could say nothing as to the value of the teas before they were unfaced by him, and what their values were after, and he could not say positively what the reason was for the change being desired. In reply to Mr. Welby, the witness said he had made no inquiry as to the reasons for changing "scented caper" into "gunpowder," and vice versâ, and he did not know, and he could not account for it, except that it was desired to make the change when there was a stock of the one on hand and a scarcity of the other in the markets. His immediate business was that of a starch manufacturer, and not that of a "tea improver," and he supposed that Lloyd's Salvage Committee found him out to improve the damaged tea in 1864 because the apparatus employed for starch-making suited the drying of tea. He had, however, special apparatus for dealing with tea. It was not unlikely that the object of taking colour from tea was to make the article appear of a superior quality to what it was. He could not say—positively he could not—what was the value to the dealers of the teas before and after being improved. He took the colour out of 2 cwt. or 3 cwt. a week now, and two men were engaged at this branch, but not all their time, for he carried on two or three other businesses, though only in one establishment. The witness was also examined by Mr. Colman, Dr. Brady, and Mr. Muntz, and denied that the colouring matter used by him was injurious.

Mr. Horniman, a tea importer, stated that he had been engaged in the trade for many years. He dealt in uncoloured teas, and as they ordered them to be so from the growers they thus received them. In reply to a question pressed by Mr. Sandford, the witness acknowledged that he had bought coloured tea in the market and had had the colour removed. His reason for doing this was that his firm had a speciality for uncoloured teas.

Dr. A. H. Hassall, the well-known analyst, gave some interesting evidence. He said that he had given his attention to the subject of the composition of foods for about twenty-five years, and had written various works on different matters connected with it. Some of the most frequent and most important adulterations were, he declared, very easily detected with a little observation. For instance, artificially coloured tea was easily discovered, and the presence of mineral substances (steel filings) and sand could be found, the one with a magnet, the other by placing the tea in the mouth. The retailers were in a great measure answerable for the adulterations he indicated, for, he said, they did not pay for the adulterated articles, the price which would be charged for genuine articles, and the dealer who did not desire to sell adulterated articles ought to be placed on his guard even by the price charged to him wholesale. Besides, the retail dealer was not without protection, for he could make the wholesale trader or manufacturer give him a warranty as to the genuineness of the goods bought by him; and, moreover, it would not be too hard to insist that the dealer himself should know something of the goods in which he dealt. The witness said he should most decidedly say that any artficial colouring of tea whatever was an adulteration, for this was practiced to make a tea assume a higher quality, and to make one class of tea appear to be another; but he should not say that the usual colouring in cheese and butter was adulteration. With respect to the suggestion made that there should be a public laboratory at Somerset House, he pointed out that the Government analysts had enough to do to protect the revenue; but while he was against any court of appeal, he thought the Government Inspectors were quite competent to stop the adulterated teas in bond. He thought that if tea was inspected and stopped in bond when adulterated there would be little adulterated tea in this country. In reply to Lord Barrington, he said that it was not necessary for the carrying of tea and the protection of it on the voyage that it should be "faced" previously. Tea could be brought here without "facing." He considered all mineral substances in sugar an adulteration. He did not think the customs should take duty on all substances which passed as tea, or should permit "lie" tea to go through on duty. In reply to Mr. Mundella, he repeated what he had previously stated, that, in general, "faced" green tea was not injurious to health; but, he said, whatever might be the demand for green tea, he would debar it from coming into the country, it being, in his opinion, the duty of the State to prevent such a thing coming into consumption; and this stoppage would instruct the people that the colouring was an adulteration to make the quality of the tea sold appear of a better quality than it was, and to command a higher price than it was worth. Even one per cent. of colouring matter he should consider as adulteration, for it altered the character of the tea. In reply to Sir Charles Dilke, the witness said that in some cases the Prussian blue used for colouring tea was not injurious, but in tea-dust and siftings there was likely to be a large quantity of the Prussian blue—large enough, at all events, to be injurious to health. Mr. Carpenter Garnier asked if taking off the colouring matter removed the deleterious qualities used in "facing," and the witness replied that he apprehended this operation would do so, and he was not of the opinion of Mr. Jackson (the "Wholesale Grocer"), that the deleterious matter would only be concealed. Sir Henry Peek handed the witness some samples of nutmegs, and asked if they were pure. The witness looked at them, and said that possibly they were "limed," and Sir Henry asked, if they were, could witness say they were adulterated. The witness said he should like to see what proportion of lime there was in the nutmegs before he answered, and, of course, he allowed, logically, he ought to object to the limed nutmegs as he did to faced tea. He was not aware, he said, in answer to Sir Henry, that years ago the Dutch Government would not permit any but "limed" nutmegs to be exported, and if that were so then we should have to put up with it; but it should be said on the label that the things were limed.

At the last public meeting of the Adulteration Committee, on the 22nd inst., the inquiry turned back to the "tea question" by Mr. William Jackson being called. Examined by the Chairman (Mr. C. S. Read), this witness said he had been twenty-six years in the tea trade, and was in trade now in Manchester. He was the uncle to Mr. Whitworth Jackson, who had given evidence before the Committee and proved to be the writer of the letter signed "A Wholesale Tea-Dealer" in The Times. Witness was the confidential manager for twelve years of Mr. Robert Jackson, the father of Mr. Whitworth Jackson, and neither witness nor his brother, Mr. Robert Jackson, practised such adulteration as was described by Mr. Whitworth Jackson in the letter in The Times of May 15. Witness was with his brother six months after Mr. Whitworth Jackson joined his father's business. The attention of the witness was then directed to the official notes of his nephew's evidence. These said:—"I have from time to time been in the confidence of persons whom I should consider to be skilful colourers or tea improvers. . . . I entered a business some years ago in which the confidence of the public was reposed upon the one ground, that the house was in a position to guarantee the genuineness of the articles they supplied, and I was, therefore, under the necessity of directing my special attention to adulteration, with a view of detecting and avoiding it." . . . Adulteration is resorted to, "as far as I have seen, with a view of enabling a person who resorts to it to put his hand into the pocket of the purchaser, which has invariably been the object, so far as I have seen, for extracting money from him and selling him something which it is not what it represents itself to be." These things, he said, were accomplished "by giving the tea a fictitious appearance of value, or by imparting to it some quality in which it may be deficient, or by increasing its weight and bulk by the addition to it of articles of lesser or no value." The witness examined on this evidence, said it was untrue. Sometimes caper tea "coloured" was sold as green, but that was not done to increase the value, but to supply grocers with a cheaper green tea than they could otherwise get. Witness had coloured some teas and had uncoloured some. Those teas which were thus changed in appearance were not heightened in value by the change, but all they did was to undersell Chinese coloured tea. It was untrue, as his nephew had stated, that a "scented caper" could be changed to be worth 10d. a lb. more—namely, a tea worth 14d. changed to be worth 2s. The talk about such profits was perfectly absurd. Then, the facing or unfacing of tea would not permit the wholesale dealer to obtain the price of unadulterated tea, as stated by his nephew. Witness never heard of the case of catechu until mentioned by his nephew before the Committee, and then he tried it on some samples with the worst results. Witness said he did not think any adulteration of tea was done in this country; but the Chairman specifically asked if he did not call "colouring" or "facing" adulteration, and the witness replied in the negative. Mr. Robert Jackson, when witness was his manager, did have an engine and cylinder, but these were not kept for colouring tea. They were kept for roasting coffee and grinding chicory, and occasionally a strap was put on to colour a little tea, for that operation by itself "would not have paid to light a fire for." This cylinder, he believed, had been sold about twelve years, and his brother had it for three. He again said he did not believe tea was adulterated in this country, and again answered that he did not regard the colouring operation as an adulteration. Many of the wholesale dealers, he said, sent their teas to their customers direct from the bonded warehouses, and no adulteration was allowed while in bond; and the witness denied most emphatically that the wholesale dealers could impose upon the retailers by selling them a coloured tea for a pure green, for the latter, the witness said, knew their business, and so Whitworth Jackson, who had started the controversy, knew well. As to Manchester being the "hotbed of adulteration," he believed, and he spoke as one who had called upon the grocers, that they were most anxious to have a pure article. The witness was then asked to say, having given a contradiction to some of the statements made by his nephew, what his opinion generally was on that evidence and on the letter to The Times. The witness laughed and hesitated a little, and then said he could say that a large part of what Mr. Whitworth Jackson had stated existed only in his own imagination and the other part consisted of exaggerations. Asked what part was true, the witness said it was true as to the colouring of tea, but not as to all the rest. Examined by Mr. Muntz, the witness said he was with his brother from 1847 until Christmas, 1860, in which year Mr. Whitworth Jackson joined the business—in the June of that year. The "scented caper" was coloured sometimes to meet the demand for "green," and the grocers got the extra profit between what the coloured tea cost and what the Chinese coloured tea would have cost. The grocers certainly know the difference between Chinese coloured tea and tea coloured here. The ingredients used to "colour" tea were "Dutch pink," French chalk, and Prussian blue. This colouring had not now been done for years, for there was now no demand for coloured teas. In nine times out of ten wholesale dealers sent their teas direct out of bond to the retailers, but sometimes they mixed them (the inferior with the better) themselves. This was done in the wholesale dealers' warehouses. Witness had known teas to be damaged by water, when a fire occurred at a tea warehouse, but the only damage was water and the tea was dried on a hot iron and re-made up. Asked by Dr. Brady if he thought the mass of the public were aware that the coloured teas made up as described by the witness were not pure teas, the witness replied that the public asked for green teas and would take no other; and when pressed with the question whether it was fair to pass off coloured teas, the witness laughingly answered that the public at that time would take no other than green tea, and it had to be made to suit the public taste. The question was pressed by Mr. Garnier, and the witness again replied, "If the grocer wanted to sell a pure tea the public would not have had it, and it was made up to meet the requirement of the time." In answer to Sir Henry Peek, the witness agreed that in Canton teas were manufactured up to a certain stage, all that was done here being to put in some colouring matter. There was nothing unwholesome in this, and he denied that there was such an amount of colouring matter as added to the weight of the teas. The statement of Mr. Whitworth Jackson had done great harm to the tea trade, especially in Manchester.

Mr. Robert Jackson, brother to the last witness, and father to Whitworth Jackson, was called, and stated that the witness referred to (the "Wholesale Teadealer") had been in no other "house" to serve save witness's and the Himalaya Tea Company, of the East-end. Witness could say that there was no such adulteration in his warehouse as was spoken of, except that of the colouring, which had been carried on up to four or five years ago. If his son had seen any such practices in any "house" in which he was employed, it could only have been in witness's or in the Himalaya Tea Company's, for his son had been in no other; but this evidence was thoroughly false so far as witness's house was concerned. In reply to Mr. Muntz, the witness said he did have a cylinder and an engine for coffee roasting and other purposes, and this was used for colouring tea. Witness bought it second-hand from Glasgow, and sold it again after three years' use. In reply to Lord Barrington he said he did not believe there was any manufactory for making up used tea leaves, and he certainly did not think it would pay to do it. Witness declared, too, that so far from being "one of the largest purchasers of 'lie' tea," he had never bought a pound of it. In reply to Sir H. Peek, the witness said the Himalaya Tea Company consisted at one time of his son and himself, but they were not together now. An extraordinary scene then occurred. The witness Whitworth Jackson, whose father had just been giving evidence against him, then advanced and said he wished to corroborate his own evidence. He was proceeding to read a statement as to his opinion of the evidence given in opposition to his own and to disprove his, when he was stopped by the Chairman, who requested him to give any facts if he had any to give. The committee conferred together for a moment and then ordered the room to be cleared. When the doors were again opened,

The Chairman said he had been requested by the committee to say that they unanimously declined to receive any further evidence from Mr. Whitworth Jackson.

Mr. Lumley, Q.C., counsel to the Local Government Board, then, in examination, suggested various amendments, chiefly relating to legal technicalities and interpretations. The three statutes now in force with respect to adulteration should, he thought, be repealed and re-enacted in a consolidated form. He also proposed that there should be a definition in the Act of what adulteration was. He saw no reason why the Act should not take effect upon imported articles—such as faced Green Tea from China—as well as upon those of home manufacture. Water, he thought, ought to be dealt with in a Sanitary Act; it could hardly be regarded as the subject of adulteration. It was a grievance that only the analyst of the district where purchases were made could make an analysis of such purchases. A trader in Stafford, for instance, who bought groceries in London, had now to be at the expense of sending them to London to be analysed. Witness thought there should be no such restriction on the duties of analysts. Another difficulty which had tended to obstruct the Act in its working was, that the inspector who seized goods on suspicion of their being adulterated had to deliver them to the analyst in person. It was a general thing that the inspector and the analyst lived widely apart.

Monetary and Commercial.

A prospectus has been circulated of the Royal Exchange Shipping Company (Limited), an undertaking formed "to own first-class ships, to be employed in the foreign and general trades." The new iron sailing ship, Eastern Monarch, 1,768 tons register, has already been purchased, and has sailed under charter out and home. The capital is £200,000, in 20,000 shares of £10 each.

The directors of the Imperial Ottoman Bank recommend a dividend of 10 per cent. for the year 1873. This will give a payment of 10s. per share on the 1st of July, and leave £18,400 to be carried forward.

The directors of the Colonial Bank have decided to declare at the half-yearly general meeting, on the 2nd July, a dividend of 7½ per cent. for the half-year ending the 31st December last.

The report of the Bank of South Australia recommends a dividend of 10 per cent. per annum.

The directors of the London and Provincial Insurance Company have decided on the payment of the usual interest at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year ending June 30.

The directors of the British and Foreign Marine Insurance Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend for the half-year of 6s. per share, being at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum.

The Home and Colonial Marine Insurance Company announce a payment of interest for the half-year ending the 30th June at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum.

The report of the South Australian Company recommends a dividend of 8 per cent. per annum.

The report of the Lebong Tea Company (Limited), to be presented on the 24th inst., shows a profit of £10,480; £1,000 has been carried to reserve, and a balance dividend of 6 per cent. is recommended, making, with the interim dividend paid in December, 11 per cent. for the year 1873.

The annual report of the Ceylon Company shows a net profit of £78,701, out of which the directors recommend the payment of a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. A large proportion of the amount paid as dividend in the year ending 31st March, 1873, was taken from the reserve of undivided profits; that amount has been repaid, and a further sum has been added to reserve, which now stands at £39,033 9s. 7d. The report says:—

The directors have completed the sale of Mount Temple (one of the estates in Ceylon), and the difference between the amount it realised and that at which it stood in the books has been written off from profit and loss. They have also sold the estates Gongoltenne and Mahapitty, for rather more than the amount at which they stood at in the books; but, as the sale of the latter was not completed before the 31st March, the result does not appear in the annual accounts. In Mauritius, a sale of Riviere Noire, one of the estates acquired by foreclosure, has been effected, and the amount realised has been credited to the account of foreclosed estates in that island. The whole of the annuities (amounting to £3,636 per annum) charged on the estates in Mauritius have been redeemed, and the balances of purchase money (amounting together to £10,100) due in respect of those estates have been paid off.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Mirzapore, which left Southampton June 18, was, in gold, to Galle, £1,560; in silver, to Shanghai, £8,630; to Hong Kong, £24,333; to Singapore, £72,300. Total in gold, £1,560; in silver, £105,263.

EXPORT OF COTTON GOODS TO THE FAR EAST.

The following is a summary of Mr. Sam Mendel's Tables for the present month, containing details of the quantities of Cotton Manufactures and Yarn shipped from the ports of London, Liverpool, Southampton, and the Clyde, to Hong Kong, Shanghai, Japan, Singapore, Batavia, Manila, and Ceylon, during the month and twelve months ended 16th June, 1874, compared with the corresponding periods of the two preceding years:—

HONG KONG AND WHAMPOA.

PLAIN COTTONS.—Export for the month ended 16th June, 1874, 6,985,733 yards; for the twelve months, 120,504,643 yards; for the twelve months, 1873, 84,985,915 yards; for the twelve months, 1872, 90,041,407 yards. Increase for 1874 against 1873, 35,518,728 yards.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

LIVER, LUNGS, AND KIDNEYS.—A large number of internal maladies arise from obstructions, over the removal of which these celebrated Pills exercise the most perfect control. A course of them is strongly recommended as a remedy for almost all chronic affections, as liver complaint, congestion of the lungs, torpidity of the kidneys, and other functional disorders which cause much present suffering, and, if neglected, lay the foundation of dangerous diseases. Holloway's Pills are specially adapted for the young and delicate; their gentle and purifying action ranks them above all other medicines. In indigestion, nervous affections, gout, and rheumatism these Pills have achieved for themselves universal fame. They expel all impurities from the blood, and thus restore cheerfulness and vigour.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 6th May; but the Pacific mail steamer Great Republic arrived at San Francisco on the 15th inst., with a fortnight's later news, viz., to the 23rd May. The following summary has been telegraphed to New York:—

The Japanese Government, after countermanding the Formosa expedition, was compelled to resume it, as the troops declared positively they would go, and refused to obey all orders to the contrary. The Government took the matter in hand and sent them to Amoy, where it was intended they should remain until it heard from a special envoy sent to Peking on this particular business. This plan was changed, and news reached Yokohama on May 23 that the evpedition had landed at Formosa without opposition.

There is a decidedly improved tone in the demeanour of the Japanese Government towards all classes of foreigners.

Eighteen Japanese, who were wrecked on the coast of Corea, were beheaded simply because they were Japanese. The Coreans are building forts and drilling their troops for defence against Japan.

There is much excitement at Yedo, owing to an alleged attack on the British Legation. It has transpired that the police were pursuing an individual connected with the Legation and supposed to be guilty of some offence against Japanese law.

The Herald has the following:—A rumour has found its way from Peking to the effect that the Chinese Government are so irate at the presumption of the Japanese in sending an expedition to Formosa that there is a probability of their making a reprisal by taking possession of the Loo Chew group of islands. It is a significant fact that the Chinese are in the market for arms, several thousand having been purchased in Yokohama during the last few days.

The Japan Mail says:—A Korean expedition from this country is a mere question of time. But there is much to be done before it takes place. It must be by the voice of the country speaking through its representatives, and this as yet cannot be heard. It has been already told that the establishment of the representative parliament is agreed upon; but it is deferred for the present. This places it almost in as unsatisfactory a position as if it were rejected altogether. And this seems likely to provoke civil discord of a more severe nature than the late rebellion.

The return of Shimadzu Saburo to Tokei is closely connected with it. His object in going to Kagoshima was primarily to induce Saigo Kitchinoski to come to Tokei and assist the Government. Saigo so fully explained to him the impossibility of carrying on the Government in its present shape that Shimadzu is a convert; and he has himself demanded the fulfilment of the prayer of the petitioners who asked for the establishment of a parliament. If it be not carried out he will assume his former rank, and call his clansmen to their own country. If it be carried out all will be well.

The delay arises from the disclosures that are sure to follow the assembling of the members. Every department of State to some extent dreads the betrayal of its secrets; and the old Sangi assert that, under the present system, it is impossible to obtain from the departments the information required by Government, or to have their orders enforced.

NAGASAKI.

Our advices extend to the 3rd May; the French mail from London March 13 arrived out on the 2nd May. We take the following from the Nagasaki Express:—

On the 18th April some 600 soldiers, intended to form part of the expedition, arrived here from Kagosima, vid Mogi. They had been landed at that village, and thence marched overland to this place. On the 20th the P. M. steamer New York, which has been chartered by the Japanese Government, arrived from Yokohama. She brought down treasure and stores, and amongst the passengers was Okuma, Minister of Finance, chief in command of the Formosa expedition, accompanied by General Le Gendre. The Japanese steamers Yuko-maru and Hozui-maru arrived here the same day from Kumamoto (Higo), the former bringing 280 and the latter 800 soldiers. These were landed at the Ohato. On the following morning the British steamer Yorkshire, from Shinagawa, arrived with 580 more soldiers, stores, &c., but this vessel was only chartered by the Japanese Government to come to this place. On the 25th April, the Japanese steamer Hockai-maru arrived from Shinagawa with 200 more soldiers. These troops form part of the expeditionary force. We hear that several officers will be despatched to Formosa in advance of the main body of troops about to proceed there from this place. Further detachments of troops are expected here shortly from Higo, and it is stated on excellent authority that the total number, including those already arrived at this place to join the expedition, will be about 5,000 men.

Several of the expeditionary vessels have started on their journey, the first one, the Japanese mail steamer Yuko-maru, (late Nepaul), leaving this port for Amoy on the 28th April, with one hundred and fifty soldiers on board, and besides these she also took a supply of ammunition, provisions, stores, &c. We learn that she also embarked for conveyance to Amoy, several Japanese officers, who are to form the staff at the Consulate about to be established at that port. Further detachments of troops were subsequently embarked, some at the Ohato, others at Sagaramatz jetty, and were conveyed on board the Japanese steamers Meiku-maru and Mikuni-maru, which have been chartered by the Government, and left this port on the 2nd May, in company with the Japanese corvette Nitsin-kan and the gunboat Teibo-kan, but on account of the bad weather and heavy sea the four vessels have returned and anchored just inside Takaboko Point, and will leave again as soon as the weather moderates. Their destination is Amoy. About three thousand five hundred soldiers in all, and the whole of the transports are commanded by foreign officers. Over two thousand soldiers have already been despatched, and the remainder will follow by the Japanese steamer Hockai-maru, which will leave shortly. The warlike preparations which have been made have given an air of activity to this place. Both the town and harbour of Nagasaki have presented a bustling appearance not often visible, and were this activity caused solely by the progress of commerce it would indeed be a most satisfactory picture to contemplate.

The names of the twelve insurgent leaders executed at Saga, have been made public by the local government, they are:—Shima Yoshiwo, Yeto Shimpei, Fukuchi Tsuneaki, Nishi Yoshitada, Nakashima Rinzo, Asakura Hisatake, Katsuki Tsunegoro, Yamanaka Ichiro, Shigematsu Motokichi, Murayama Nagayashi, Nakagawa Yoshizumi. Soyeshima Yoshitaka. Yeto Shimpei was formerly a Cabinet Minister.

Sanjonishi Suyetomo and Tanakayori-mochi, two important officers of Department of Religion (Kiobusho), together with the Shinto priest of Ishe, and some other officers are expected to arrive here shortly, to establish a branch of the department at this port. The Chewkiyoin is to be erected in Fugiya-machi, and in it the festival of 4th chief Shinto God is to be celebrated on the 16th of May.

The United States corvette Lackawanna, en route from Hong Kong to Yokohama, arrived on the 30th April. After coaling she again proceeded. H.B. Majesty's flag-ship Iron Duke has arrived from Amoy, and salutes were exchanged between her and the Japanese corvette Nitsin-kan. We hear that Admiral Shadwell is expected to arrive here about 21st May in the Cadmus, and both vessels will proceed to Yokohama. The Iron Duke is to go into dock at Yokoska.

Lot 26A, Oura, known as Messrs. Walsh, Hall and Co.'s tea firing premises, has been sold by public auction by the China and Japan Trading Company to Messrs. Henry Gribble and Co. for $1,500. The tea-firing pans, together with the brickwork settings, were sold separately, and realised fifty cents each pan.

The amount of revenue collected at the Custom-house for the month of April was:—

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 10th May; the French mail from London March 20 arrived out on the 3rd May.

The great event of the week had been a serious riot on the French Concession, in which several foreigners and Chinese were badly injured, and eight Chinese killed. The origin of the riot was an objection by the Ningpo Guild to certain roads which the French Municipal Council wished to run alongside their Joss House, and which the Guild declare would pass over land that is full of graves. They had been remonstrating for some time against the Council's action, but so far ineffectually, although the question had not been closed. It is difficult to learn the immediate cause of the outbreak—whether it were the spontaneous act of the Ningpo men (of whom there are many thousands in Shanghai), or whether it were inspired by the Guild in the hope of supporting their remonstrance. We incline to acquit the latter, and to attribute it to an accidental collision with the police, which in the excited state of popular feeling was sufficient to cause outbreak. At any rate the riot was a most serious one, and necessitated the calling out of the Volunteers, and the landing of men from the American and French men-of-war in harbour. The Consul-General gave in to the demand of the Guild, on the second day, and quiet was restored. The following account of the disturbances is condensed from the columns of the North China Herald:—

A Chinese mob assembled on Sunday afternoon, May 3rd, in the quarter of the French settlement near the Ningpo Joss House, attacked the house of the Inspector of Roads, maltreated M. Percebois and his family, gutted and subsequently set fire to his house; attacked the neighbouring house, occupied by Miss Maclean, a missionary lady, seriously maltreating the occupants, and went on to burn down M. Charrier's stables (in the neighbourhood) and a number of adjacent Chinese houses. Eight Chinese met their death in the riot, one being shot during the first attack on Mr. Percebois, and the others shot or bayoneted later in the evening. The Volunteer Force was called out at 9 P.M., and warning of their arrival induced the rioters to disperse; the streets were nearly empty when the men reached the ground. While it lasted, the incendiarism seems to have been of the most determined character, the rioters thrusting wisps of burning straw into the premises they wished to destroy. Rumours had reached the Chief of the French Police that an outbreak was imminent, and the heads of the Ningpo Guild had indeed represented to the Taoutai, and the latter to the French Consul, lhat the excitement of the people was becoming serious. Still the extent of the danger was not fully credited. The leaders of the Ningpo community affirm, and there seems reason to believe them, that the riot occurred against their wish, and wholly without pre-arrangement. But public feeling was excited to the point at which an incident suffices to cause explosion.

The immediate cause in the present instance seems to have been a collision, about 2 P.M., between some Ningpo men and the police. The police declare the Chinese attacked them; the Chinese, that the police first used violence. However this may be, the fact remains that a policeman on his beat at the western end of the Rue du Consulat was maltreated by a crowd of about 200 Chinese. He was hit in the side, his sword taken hold of from behind and pulled from the scabbard, his shako knocked off, and the man was otherwise beaten badly. Some Europeans passing came to the rescue, and conveyed him to the Central Station. The next thing heard at the station was through Mr. Percebois, the Inspector of Roads, who came in with his wife and five children. Mr. Percebois showed wounds on his head, and stated that his house had been surrounded, the windows smashed in, the rooms gutted, and that the place was also being set on fire. He had been injured by stones, while his wife had been dragged by the hair along the ground. She managed to escape down the Rue Wekwei, however, and three sailors from the mail steamer Tigre—who were also assaulted, and one of whom lost his watch—secured the safety of the children and brought them to the station. M. Barbe, Chef de Police, sent to advise the Consul-General of the disturbance, and went with the police at hand, under arms, to disperse the crowd. When they arrived they found a number of Chinamen, dancing in rings, with the clothes of Mrs. Percebois parcelled out amongst them, after having gutted the house and smashed everything to minute atoms. The house was a perfect wreck from top to bottom. The police fired three or four shots, as M. Barbe states, in the air, to intimidate the mob.

About seven o'clock the mob again came to the charge, and set fire to M. Percebois' house. M. Charrier's stables, exactly opposite, were also set fire to, as well as some new Chinese houses in the Rue Hue, in the same neighbourhood. The mob prevented the mafoos from taking out the carriages stored at M. Charrier's, which were therefore destroyed, but the ponies got away. About this time a lieutenant of the French gun-vessel Couleuvre came on the spot with twenty men, and took command of the situation. Fifteen volunteers were sent under a sergeant of police to protect the gasworks, and remained there. The police did not return to the scene of the fray. At nine o'clock the East Gate Police Station, where only four men were placed, was attacked, and twenty sailors from the U. S. S. Ashuelot (of whom a detachment of eighty with one gun had been landed) were sent th[illegible]. Forty more were temporarily stationed in the Consular Compound [illegible]d the remaining twenty at the Hotel Municipal, where they were quartered in the large hall. A hundred and fifty Chinese soldiers from Kaou-changmeau were also sent in by the Chinese authorities, at the request of the Consul-General. The Chihsien was asked to secure ten of the leaders of the mob, in order to afford a clue to the real raisers of the disturbance, but up till 10 P.M. only three prisoners had been made. Many of the Chinese in the neighbourhood of the fires and of the Municipal Hall began to remove their effects, owing to warnings they had received from the rioters that their houses would be burnt down.

The foregoing relates almost wholly to the attack on French property, but with this the mob had not stopped. Following up the attack on M. Percebois' house, they at the same time assailed the neighbouring one, tenanted by Miss Maclean, late of the Union Chapel Mission. Here they knocked in the windows, and assaulted the inmates—Miss Maclean, and Messrs. D. Cranston and Weir (chief engineer of the steamer Gordon Castle). Mr. Weir escaped with fortunately slight injuries, but Mr. Cranston received a severe wound on the head from a stone, as well as other injuries, which have necessitated his removal to hospital. Miss Maclean was thrown down the stair of the house and roughly treated, but upon her calling out to the mob in Chinese that she was not French, they desisted, and friendly hands helped her to a place of safety. The furniture of this house was then partially saved by foreigners, who went to the scene after the French police had checked the mob. The appearance of a number of foreigners and the Chinese authorities—the Chehsien and magistrate of the French Mixed Court—restored a season of quiet; but still the mass of Chinese remained in the open space between the places attacked and the Ningpo josshouse, and surged about excitedly. At this time there were probably over 5,000 Chinese on the ground. The Chehsien and his chair were the objects of hostile demonstrations, but he was ultimately allowed to pass through.

At 8 P.M. the Chairman of the Anglo-American Municipal Council called out the Volunteers, who were ordered to muster immediately at the Main Guard, where the Treaty Consuls also met in consultation. The men were formed up in the road, Rangers on the Right, and Nos. 1, 2, and 3 Rifle Companies and the Miholoongs in the order named. The news was that the excitement was subsiding; but it was thought well to march the force into the French Settlement, and especially round the quarters where the rioting had been most active. Even if their active services were not required, their presence would tend to deter further outbreak. Captain Cann announced that Captain Hart would take command for the evening; and the force was countermarched to the Bund, along which they proceeded to the Rue du Consulat, and down that street to the Municipal Hall. Here a halt was called, while further measures were concerted, and seamen from the Ashuelot came up. The whole force was then marched down past the scene of the conflagration to the Ningpo joss-house, where it was rumoured that some of the ringleaders were shut up—as well as that a number of rioters were assembled on the green, with the intent to stone all comers. Whether the reports were imaginative, or whether any Chinese who may have been out there decamped on hearing of the approaching force, we cannot say. At any rate, not a man was seen. The volunteers were then formed in column opposite the entrance to the joss-house (in the French Road), the rangers patrolling the roads, while the sailors proceeded—in the presence and by the wish of the Chehsien—to break open a side door on the Settlement side, through which the magistrate, accompanied by the British, American, German, and other Consuls, at once entered. But here the result was the same—no one was found; and after a thorough search the volunteers were marched back in reversed order to the Bund.

Subsequent to this time no fresh attempt to disturb the peace of the Settlement was made. Chinese soldiery occupied the streets in the neighbourhood of the disturbance during the night, and the men-of-war's men from the Couleuvre and Ashuelot guarded the Municipal buildings. Some few foreigners residing nearest the threatened quarter removed to the English side, and many of the native residents took the same precaution; but there arose no occasion for alarm. Next morning it was reported that disaffected crowds again filled the streets, and an "Express" reminded the Volunteers to turn out. A visit to the locality, however, showed that though certain portions of the streets were unusually crowded, and a number of people were grouped about the Ningpo joss-house, all was perfectly quiet. The bodies of the dead, to the number of six, had been removed across the creek to a place close by the City Wall, where thousands visited them; but there was no display of feeling. A meeting of treaty Consuls was held during the afternoon, when they resolved to use all the force at their disposal to maintain order. The Taoutai was invited to join the meeting; he agreed in condemning the action of the mob, and promised to issue a proclamation that such outbreaks would be repressed by all available foreign and native force.

There have been some proceedings at the French Mixed Court with regard to the men captured during the riot. The men caught with firebrands, having set fire to the houses, were sent to the Taoutai for severe punishment, as also were four others charged with riotous conduct and assaulting the police. Twelve men arrested by the Che-hsien's soldiers were dealt with in various ways, some being remanded, some sent to the Che-hsien, and others released on security. A number charged with theft which had been committed during the fire were settled in various ways, the majority of the culprits being sent to the city magistrate for punishment; while some of the small offences were disposed of on the spot, the defendants receiving in Court a certain number of blows with the bamboo, and then being required to make a speedy exit. Some of the charges for using abusive language to the police in the compound of the Municipal Hall were also bambooed, with the distinction that they received their quantum in the compound. Others, again, were sentenced to 100 blows, and then to be sent to the Che-hsien for punishment. The number convicted was over thirty.

Matters seem now to be perfectly quiet on the French Concession.

The following items of news are also from the North China Herald:—

We have received a copy of the Municipal Budget Estimate for 1874-5. The income for 1873-4 (including Tls. 21,000 raised by loan, and Tls. 7,500—proceeds sale of iron bridge) was Tls. 265,005.96, and the expenditure Tls. 264,844.97 (including Tls. 15,899 deficit left by the Council of 1872-3). The estimated income for 1874-5 is Tls. 237,160, and the estimated expenditure exactly equal.

The A.D.C. have given their fourth performance for the season and it came off with the success that always attends A.D.C. entertainments. "In Possession" did not go off with quite the amount of life a farce should, though some of the parts were very amusingly sustained. "Checkmate," however, was capital throughout; the leading parts cleverly done and the subsidiary well filled. The scenery also evoked applause. The orchestra, under M. Remusat, played three selections in their usual admirable style.

A sale of race ponies has been held at the Horse Bazaar, when nearly fifty were offered. Half the number were actually sold, at prices generally from Tls. 50 downwards. For Doubloon, the winner of the Griffins, Tls. 450 were offered, but he was reserved at Tls. 600; and Maron Glacé was bought in at Tls. 375. Pice was sold for Tls. 150; Jossakeed, Tls. 100; Gownee, Tls. 80; Alone, Tls. 55; Savernake, Tls. 40; the rest generally at lower rates, unless bought in.

The body of a marine, dressed in full uniform, has been picked up in the river. It was past identification, but is supposed to be that of a man named Mullaney, who while on guard at the gangway of the American man-of-war Lackawanna, early one morning during her recent stay in this port, suddenly fell overboard in a fit, to which it appeared he was subject.

The postponement of the annual meeting of ratepayers from the 11th to the 18th inst. is notified, various causes having hindered the publication of the report for the past year.

Our Peking Correspondent writes that the Peruvian mission was to leave for Tientsin on the 27th May, there to conclude negotiations for a treaty with Li Hungchang.—The examinations for the degree of Tsin-sze commenced on the 23rd May.

We hear that, in consequence of the action taken by M. Godeaux in connection with the recent riot at Shanghai, the members of the French Municipal Council have all sent in their resignation.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 16th May; the P. and O. mail from London April 3 was received on the 11th May. We take the following items of news from the Daily Press:—

The first hearing of the case of Tsoo-Wing Yong v. Woo-soo and others came before the Supreme Court. Mr. Hayllar, in opening the case, said the plaintiff had been a trader in the well-known firm of the Wing-kee shop in this colony, and the defendant Woo-soo was also a partner in that firm. At that time, also, Woo-soo and Achang (deceased) were joint proprietors of the dock at Whampoa, called the Luk Sun Dock. It had been leased by S. P. Hall and Co., but in 1864 the Whampoa Dock Company was formed under a new Ordinance which was then passed, and the lease of S. P. Hall and Co. was assigned to them. But when the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company took the lease, they discovered that the dock was not long enough for them, and they were anxious to have it lengthened to 350 feet, and the person who at that time had had negotiations with the plaintiff and defendants with reference to this was Mr. Sutherland. This brought them to the point where the disputes arose. The negotiations for the lengthening having been made, they looked about for a contractor to do the work. Li See was a contractor, and accordingly negotiations were entered into with him through a man named 'Ng-lum-cheong (deceased). 'Ng-lum-cheong knew Li See, and the matter resulted in the latter being introduced to the defendants. They then explained to him how matters stood, and also that they wanted an estimate from him of the amount of money necessary to carry out the work. They gave him the specifications and plans which had been prepared on behalf of the Dock Company by their architects. Li See took home these plans, and he made an estimate that the outside price which the dock could be altered for was $29,000, but that the contract could be carried out for a sum of $26,000. This estimate, as it turned out, unfortunately was under the mark both as to time and money, and had been a most disastrous thing for the plaintiff. It was taken by Li See and Woo Soo to Mr. Sutherland, who expressed his willingnes to enter into a contract, and to pay $8,000 in advance, provided they obtained a capitalist as security. 'Ng-lum-cheong then suggested that they should request plaintiff to become security, as he was known at that time to be a substantial man. In consideration of the sum of $2,000 he agreed to become security for the whole carrying out of the work. This being made known to Mr. Sutherland, a material guarantee was demanded from plaintiff, and in consequence of this he took the title deeds of certain property to deposit for this purpose. He was told to leave his title deeds, and call again in a week's time, after they had been investigated. Plaintiff was then told that his title deeds were of such a kind as could not be accepted. He was not very well pleased at this, and went away saying he should have nothing more to do with it. Li See, Achang, and Woo Soo then proposed terms to plaintiff, which were subsequently executed in a written deed, which the learned counsel put in. The terms were that plaintiff should advance the whole money, estimated at $26,000, from time to time as required; that the whole four should enter into the work as joint contractors and partners; that the money should, upon the conclusion of the work, be repaid to plaintiff by the partnership, together with twelve per cent. interest; the profits, if any, to be shared. That was especially agreed upon by the parties, and upon that agreement they went and proposed these terms to the Dock Company, and were accepted. Subsequently the deed was drawn up, accepted by the Dock Company carrying out these terms, and was signed by all the four parties. The learned counsel read the document, submitting that it formed as between the parties to it a direct contract of indemnity and contribution. He urged first that the facts showed a clear partnership; and secondly that the document created a mutual indemnity and joint interest to these transactions. The work was begun under the superintendence of Li See, and from time to time sums of money were paid to him, on account of the name under which the partnership traded. It amounted to $50,000, and went to benefit the property of defendants. The object of the present suit was, therefore, to recover from defendants their share of the money expended, or to re-arrange and settle the partnership. Li See was then called by plaintiff, and spoke to carrying out the contract, and seeing the document signed. The Court was then adjourned.

A letter from Foochow says:—The newly organised Courier service between this place and Amoy has been started, and we wish every success to its enterprising promoters. We may mention that the first trip between the two ports was accomplished in forty-six hours, which shows, as regards time, a vast improvement on the old service.

Eight battalions of Japanese troops are reported to have been landed on the East Coast of Formosa for the ostensible purpose of operating against the aborigines. As the island forms a portion of this province, we await with much interest the action of the Chinese authorities in regard to the invasion of their territory. Our impression is that the Viceroy's military force is inadequate to make a successful resistance, even if disposed to do so; and we further venture to question the ability of the Japanese Army to surmount the great obstacles presented by the mountainous nature and jungle of the country in which they will be called upon to operate, to say nothing of the difficulty that will be experienced in obtaining supplies on a coast almost, if not entirely destitute of harbours.

The steamer China, commanded by Captain Hennings, has completed her one hundredth trip between Canton, Hong Kong, and Shanghai. As she came into port she flew at the foretopmast head a very large and handsome white silk Chinese flag, edged with a red scalloped border, with black characters recording the meaning of the flag and its object. This flag was presented to Captain Hennings by the most influential Chinese merchants of Shanghai, in commemoration of the vessel having with safety completed her 100th trip. About twenty of them sat down to a dinner on board, when they presented to the captain the flag and a very handsome testimonial, and expressed in most laudatory terms their appreciation of the fitness of the vessel to carry the cargoes.

By the China an English lady has arrived, whose maiden name is Miss Roberts, but she is a princess by marriage to a Japanese prince, named Matchung, of high distinction.

BORNEO.

SARAWAK.

The 3rd of June was the birthday of Rajah Brooke, and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired in honour of his Highness, and the day was observed as a general holiday. The inauguration of the New Court House took place at noon; it has been seven years constructing, and is pronounced to be a very handsome building.

Several interesting reports appear in the Sarawak Gazette on the subject of Borneo coal. The Government are working the Sadong coal mines, and turning out sufficient to supply their own steamers. The coal is reported on very favourably.

The arrival is announced of a gentleman who has had considerable experience of diamond working at the Cape. He will examine the diamond fields in Sarawak.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 25th May. The P. and O. mail from London April 17 arrived out on the 17th May, and the following French mail of April 24 was received on the 24th May. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

A correspondent, under date 28th May, gives the following items:—The Colonial steamer Pluto, Acting Commander Welner, having on board H.E. the Governor and suite, as also the Hon. the Attorney-General, and the Hon. the Colonial Engineer, arrived here from Singapore en route to Penang on Wednesday the 20th May. His Excellency, together with these Government officials, landed shortly before noon and embarked about 6.30 P.M. At noon on the same day, a Royal salute was fired in commemoration of H.M.'s birth-day, and a company of soldiers belonging to H.M.'s 110th Regt., at present stationed here, fired a feu de joie. The Straits steamer Sharpshooter from Penang, and the Japan from Singapore arrived here yesterday morning. The Malay steamer Telegraph, Capt. Valberg, arrived here from Klang yesterday morning, and will return to the same port to-morrow afternoon.

The pigmy steamer Quedah, Capt. Jeremiah, from Singapore with dates to the 20th May, bound to Penang, arrived here last Thursday, and sailed the same night for her port of destination.

Our new Assistant Colonial Chaplain, the Reverend L. C. Biggs, arrived here on the 10th May, by the B.I.S.N. Company's steamer Coconada, and his predecessor, the Rev. S. R. Dingley, returned to Singapore per steamer Benmore last week.

The charge of criminal breach of trust preferred by the Chief Clerk of the Audit Office in Singapore, on behalf of Government, against W. Reutens, the clerk to the Magistrate of the Police Court here, was called on for hearing on Saturday, the 16th instant, when the case for the prosecution was brought to a close and the counsel for the defence, J. D. Vaughan, Esq., applied for a remand for the purpose of allowing the defendant an opportunity of minutely going over the books formerly kept by him and comparing them with the charge sheets. The remand was accordingly granted by the Hon. Captain Shaw, the magistrate who tried the case, and the matter was called on for a further hearing, when witnesses were examined on behalf of the prosecution and defence. The magistrate sentenced the defendant to three months' rigorous imprisonment. A notice of appeal to the Supreme Court was immediately given to the presiding magistrate by the counsel for the defendant. The whole of the evidence in this case, as also the outline of the speech made by the learned counsel for the defence and the legal objections raised, I hope to be able to furnish you in a future letter.

The Straits Times, referring to the telegram of the 20th May, containing an account of the speech of Lord Stanley of Alderley upon the subject of Sir Andrew Clarke's proceedings, says:—"It shows clearly that the efforts for good of a Governor here have not only to meet the criticism, possibly the antagonism, of local opinion, but may, as in the present instance, be taken up as a handle for the purely political purposes of a party. We confess our surprise and disappointment that the person who in this case has thought proper to complain of the proceedings of Sir Andrew Clarke is Lord Stanley of Alderley, who can be in no way ignorant of the condition of the Malay Peninsula, who has been himself on the spot to see and judge, and who at one time was looked to by the public here as their most likely champion."

The Government Gazette contains notices of several new appointments, which we summarise below,—and announces that in the Government offices Wednesday will be substituted for Saturday as a half-holiday until further orders. The appointments are:—

George Phillippo, Esq., to be a temporary judge of the Supreme Court.

The Hon. Capt. Shaw, R.N., Lieut.-Governor of Malacca, to be a Magistrate of Police and Commissioner of the Court of Requests at each of the three Settlements.

Capt. A. R. Ord, to be Assistant Treasurer and Assistant Collector of Land Revenue at Malacca; and E. E. Isemonger, Esq., to be Magistrate and Commissioner of the Court of Requests at Malacca.

Mr. C. H. Lloyd is appointed to act as a Member of the Pilot Board during the absence of Mr. E. M. Smith.

The leave of absence, on half-salary, of the Hon. C. B. Plunket has been extended for one month from 31st May, and that of Capt. Bradbery, for a period not stated, from 12th April.

The Court Suitors' Deposit Ordinance, 1873, was directed by the Governor in Council to come into operation on the 11th May instant.

Letters Patent have been directed to be issued, appointing Theodore Thomas Ford, Esq., Junior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court, the appointment to take effect from the 15th ultimo; and further, that Mr. Ford has been appointed a temporary Judge of the Supreme Court at Penang, from which we infer that he has arrived there. The leave of absence of the Hon. C. J. Irving, Auditor General, has been extended for one year from the 1st proximo. H.E. the Governor provisionally recognises the appointment of Mr. H. F. Maack as Italian Vice Consul in this colony.

A cricket match has been played at the cricket ground on the Esplanade between the Singapore Cricket Club and eleven cricketers from H.M.S. Charybdis. The S. C. C. went first to the wickets and scored 157 in their first innings, which their competitors failed to overtake in two innings. They, however, only sent eight men to the wickets in the second innings, but the S. C. C. had so long a start that the naval party had no chance of winning. As it was, the S. C. C. had an innings and eighty-six runs to spare.

We are glad to learn that the police have succeeded in getting hold of the entire gang, six in all, who committed the robbery in Havelock-road last Friday morning. One was the man arrested by Detective Sergeant Shokalingum in Victoria-street with part of the property in his possession, and the remaining five were arrested in Chin Chew-street.

A Chinese funeral procession passing along Neill Road, when at the top of the hill just beyond the corner of Tanjong Pagar road, was attacked by a party of armed samsengs or fighting meu, who were secreted on the hill known as Bukit Passoh. A general fight ensued, which raged with violence for a few minutes, but an alarm being raised by sentinels posted for the purpose, that the police were coming from the Sepoy Lines, the whole attacking party rushed off in various directions. A Malay peon was seen, who according to the accounts of eye-witnesses behaved admirably, rushing into the thick of the fight, and receiving numerous blows. He succeeded in securing a prisoner from among the crowd, but as the Chinaman arrested was only armed with an umbrella, it is probable no charge will lie against him. We understand the fight arose out of rivalry between the Hai San and Ghee Hing kongsees, as to which should have the honour of burying the deceased, who had two sons, one in each kongsee. Superintendent Maxwell last night visited the Hai San kongsee house, and arrested three men said to have taken part in the attack; one of these, who was detected endeavouring to screen himself, had marks of blood on his clothes from a wound on his forehead.

IMPORTS.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Wilson Cornabe and Co.'s Circular, dated 1st May, says, since the issue of our last report, business in imports generally has not been very active, and prices of most articles have experienced a decline. Cotton Goods: 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings have been in fair enquiry, but prices have been gradually tending downwards. Drills, T-Cloths, and Fancy Cottons have not been asked for, Woollens have been in but little demand. Metals: Iron, both Nail, Rod and Bar, continues readily saleable, at about our last quoted rates. Lead has been dealt in to a considerable extent, but prices, owing to supplies having come on by steamer from Shanghai, have declined.

SHANGHAI.—The North China Herald Market Report says:—Another unsatisfactory week has ended, and still there is no sign of improvement on the Piece Goods market. A moderately large business goes on at Hankow, but dealers have in no way been affected thereby. The lethargy that has taken hold of them is evidently immovable. It is true that, for activity, Hankow stands alone amid the reports received here since last mail day, but even there it looks like the last flicker of a candle, trade being forced by a dangerous extension of credit, without the equivalent of paying prices; and this, no doubt, has acted as a deterrent upon our River buyers. But Tientsin is the heaviest clog. From that port and from the North generally, the accounts are simply sickening. They are ever the same—no business, and rates lower; and very similar news continues to reach us from Japan. From Knight and Co.'s Newchang Circular of 1st May, we notice that Tientsin and Chefoo are short of sycee, and are sending a "cry" to that effect to Newchang. Several other ports might do well to imitate the example, if Newchwang can and will afford any help. The Circular adds, "that, whatever may be said by individuals, or furnished in official reports, the fact is incontrovertible, the trade in theD rug is impoverishing the whole North of China of its silver, to the direct ruin of the trade in Cotton and Woollen goods.' Opium is meant, but as far as the ruin of the cotton goods is concerned, the Circular might have embraced a few of the drugs that are used in Lancashire without materially lessening the worth of its remarks. It embodies a suggestion by a local buyer, "that if the goods contained less foreign matter, Grey Shirtings, &c., would not require such expensive covering protection from damp."

MANILA.—The market for Plain Staples had undergone little change and values remained in most cases the same. Dealers, who complained of the small amount of business transacted in their shops, showed but little inclination to purchase to any extent. Coloured goods were in much the same position.

SAIGON.—The market for Piece Goods had been very flat, and sales had only been effected with difficulty. Quotations were, Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs. $2.47, 7 lbs. $2.05; T-Cloth 6 lbs. $1.55, 5 lbs. $1.27½, 4½ lbs. $1.15; White Irishes $1.55.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

We note the sailing from Hankow on the 18th inst. of the steamer Japan, which is the only departure reported since our last issue. The total export of new season's Teas to the 25th inst. had been 20,875,000 lbs. Telegrams report the market at Foochow active, but prices declining at Canton. Freights are without alteration. The following are the cargoes now afloat.

THE SILK CROP AND INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS IN ITALY.

A correspondent of The Times writes:—The whole of Lombardy revels this year in a perfect glut and surfeit of its beloved worms. A huge crop of this year's silk will be added to the store of last year's silk yet unsold. Prices must fall, of course; but the Italians do not despair, for they trust that plenty will enable them to undersell their rivals of Japan and China, and if they cannot earn their livelihood by spinning they will compete with the French as weavers. There is nothing more pleasing than to see the spirit of industry and enterprise which is waking up throughout the country. Politicians may blunder, financiers may be out in their reckoning, but work is brisk in Italy, and the very literature of the country is assuming an almost exclusively utilitarian and speculative character. The country is flooded with books and pamphlets on economical subjects. Journals devoted to practical agricultural and commercial pursuits are springing up in all district centres, and with them clubs and associations busy with the spread of useful technical knowledge. A good deal of trash and twaddle is the result; but occasionally, also, respectable labour with a plausible purpose and a satisfactory result. I need hardly allude to the diffusion of good economical science to which Francesco Ferrara in Piedmont, and Girolamo Boccardo in Genoa, with others in Lombardy and Tuscany, have given impulse; but even in the Venetian Provinces, more lately withdrawn from foreign thraldom, the symptoms of a stirring life are perceptible, and progress is undeniable. I have before me the works of Alberto Errera, a young Professor, whose Italia Industriale, and Nuove Istituzioni Economiche, and Caratteri delle Società Operaie, are entitled to as much attention as the Vita e Tempi di Daniele Manin, with which he has been busy for several years. Even in remote Friuli I hear of Società Agrarie and Società Enologiche, and of the plantation of many thousand vine-stocks on hill-sides which had been waste and barren for centuries. One might number by thousands the new landowners who have sprung up throughout the country owing to the sale of so many broad acres of State and Church property—100,159 lots sold for 462,475,005f. from October, 1867, to May, 1874,—and no less considerable is the extent of soil brought into cultivation by the drainage of Northern marshes and the tillage of Southern fallows. The swamps of the Valli Ferraresi and the wilds of the Tavoliere di Puglia are made to yield abundant agricultural wealth, while the extension of the system of navigation through the Cavour and other new canals doubles the productiveness of the most fertile districts of the Piedmontese and Lombard plains.

MONGOLIA.

A meeting of the Asiatic Society was held on the 22nd inst. James Fergusson, Esq., Vice-President, in the chair. Dr. S. W. Bushell read a paper on the old Mongolian capital of Shangtu. The extensive ruins of this city were visited by the writer, together with the Hon. T. G. Grosvenor, on September 16, 1872. They are situated some twenty-seven miles N.W. of Dolonnor. Abbé Huc wrongly supposed the latter place to have been built on the site of the ancient city. Shangtu was founded in A.D. 1256, during the reign of the Emperor Hien Tsung, and became the imperial residence for a time every year. In 1268 it was made the seat of a Governor-general. After the fall of the Yuan dynasty the city rapidly diminished in importance. It was taken in the second year of the new reign (A.D. 1369), but remained constantly attacked and harassed by the nomade Mongolian tribes, until it was finally abandoned by the Chinese in A.D. 1430, when the frontier was contracted to the line of the Great Wall, and the garrison removed to Tu-shih-kou.

The site was visited by the Jesuit missionary, Gerbillon, towards the end of the seventeenth century. The ruins are now known by the Mongol name of Chao naiman sumé Hotun, "the city of a hundred and eight temples." The city had a double wall, the outer forming a square of about eight li with six gates, the inner being about eight li in circuit, with only three gates, one of which, a perfect arch twenty feet high by twelve feet wide, is still intact. The ground in the interior of both inclosures is strewn with blocks of marble and other remains of large temples and palaces, the outlines of the foundation of some of which can yet be traced; while broken lions, dragons, and the remains of other carved monuments lie about in every direction, half hidden by the thick and tangled overgrowth. An inscription of the Yuan dynasty, in an ancient form of the Chinese character, on a memorial tablet lying amid many other relics on a raised piece of ground evidently the site of a large temple, has been copied and translated by Dr. Bushell. It is surrounded by a border of dragons boldly carved in deep relief.

Mr. Henry H. Howorth read a paper on the "Origins of the Manchus." The paper started from the etymologies of the word "Manchu" proposed by various writers, the derivation of the word from "Manchusi," the name of a Korean deity, appearing to the writer to be the most obvious. He then proceeded to examine at length the legendary accounts of the Manchus regarding their own origin, and their history from the earliest times down to A.D. 1625, the year of the death of Tai-tsu.

MISSIONS TO CHINA.

On the 26th inst. the chapel of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was the scene of one of those impressive services with which this Society is wont to send forth her missionaries to the ends of the earth. At 10 o'clock the chapel was filled with the personal friends of the first two missionaries sent to China by this society. Amongst other friends were the recently consecrated Bishop Burdon of Victoria, the aged Bishop of Newfoundland, the Rev. G. H. Wilkinson, the Rev. W. Cadman, and the Rev. H. Rowley, organising Secretary for London.

The special service for the "Missionary Farewell," compiled by the Society, was conducted by the secretary, the Rev. W. T. Bullock, after which the Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop of Melbourne, who had been selected to give the parting address.

His lordship, after commending the wisdom of the Society in appointing such a gathering in the absence of any authorised service, specially commended the life of the great Apostle to the Gentiles as a pattern for the missionaries now going to China to follow closely. (1) In his marvellous sympathy, (2) in his inflexible integrity and unswerving adherence to the truth, (3) in his strict self-government; and lastly, he exhorted them, as they were sent not singly but together, to be in all things a help and not a hindrance to one another.

At the close of the service many friends pressed round to give a last shake of the hand and bid a hearty "God speed" to the Rev. C. P. Scott and the Rev. M. Greenwood, who leave Liverpool this week for New York, en route for Chefoo and San Francisco.

CHINESE AND MALAY LABOUR IN AUSTRALIA.—The following is a copy of a letter from the Hon. Thomas Reynolds, of Palmerston, in North Australia, formerly the Treasurer of the South Australian Government, addressed to Lieutenant-Colonel Palmer, of Nazing, one of the original Colonisation Commissioners of 1835. The letter is dated from Palmerston, March 10, 1874:—"The construction of a trans-continental tram or railway from Port Augusta to Port Darwin supplies more than a new mode of transit. I look upon it as settling a very grave and pressing question, in which the whole of the colonies are deeply interested. I will assume that some hundreds of thousands of Chinese coolies, Malays, &c., are introduced (I prefer a mixture) to construct the rail or tramways. Large numbers of these will settle eventually upon the soil. Numbers will filter through to the other Colonies, and supply domestic servants, mechanics, gardeners, &c. Such a movement would tend to raise the Asiatic race and push the Anglo-Saxon higher. I am here, notwithstanding my antecedents in South Australia. I have placed myself here as a proof that I believe in the future of this place. I declined the residency upon many grounds. I generally prefer to be free: still, I feel a very great interest in the success of this place, and have not the slightest doubt of its eventually becoming a position of vast importance as a connection between Australia and the East. The teeming populations of Java, China, and Japan and the Dutch Islands struck me as furnishing the means of supplying our pressing wants. I should, as I said before, prefer a mixture; I prefer the Chinese from Amoy or Swatow for plodding industry; the Malay and the Cingalese for house servants; the Madurees for all kinds of hard work, from the island of Madura, lying just off Java, and all apparently a hard working and industrious class. The Javanese are a more delicate race of men even than the Malay, and more like in character to the natives of Ceylon. I think no difficulty would be experienced in selecting suitable people at any of the Java ports, or at Swatow or Amoy. It would be necessary first to get the Council of India to extend the operation of their emigration law to South or Northern Australia before any supply of coolies could be imported here.

UNITARIANS IN JAPAN.—A contemporary remarks:—The British and Foreign Unitarian Association has just been holding its forty-ninth annual meeting. It is as difficult to find out from the speeches as from the balance-sheet what the Association has done, or is doing, or intends to do with its income of some £3,000 a year. The report for the past year dilates in vague terms on the spread of "our principles" at home and abroad, and on the promotion of "the doctrines of pure Christianity," complacently assumed to be identical with Unitarianism. It gives tidings of the progress of the Unitarian faith in Japan, Australia and Iceland. But the news from Iceland is simply that a disaffected Lutheran Minister visited London and was introduced to the committee. The Australian news is little more than that "with our brethren at the Antipodes we sustain most friendly relations." The report relating to Japan shows that the Association has presented Unitarian works to the Japanese Ambassadors; the Japanese Government have requested to be favoured with a dozen reports of the Association, which, we presume, have been gladly supplied; and one of the members of the Embassy has called at the Association's offices to learn more about Unitarianism. We learn from a New York journal that Unitarianism is also declining in the United States.

INTERNATIONAL GEOGRAPHICAL CONFERENCE.—The organisation of the International Geographical Conference, to be held at Paris during the next Easter vacation, is being carried out by the Société de Géographie with great activity. The official delegates of foreign nations, whose names have just been sent in to the President of the society, Vice-Admiral Baron de la Roncière le Noury, by the Ambassadors of the great Powers, are the following:—For England: Earl Derby, Sir Bartle Frere, and Sir Henry Rawlinson. For Germany: General Bäyer, the originator of the International Commission on Geodesy; Baron von Richtoffen, President of the Geographical Society of Berlin; Herr Petermann, editor of the Mittheilungen; Oscar Peschel, of Leipzig, one of the most accredited professors of history and geography; Kiepert, whose maps and atlas are known all the world over; and Vappäus, author of one of the largest and most important dictionaries of geography. For Austro-Hungary: General Dobner von Dobenau, director of the Military Geographical Institute of Vienna; Admiral Wullerstorff-Urbair, commander of the scientific expedition round the world on board the frigate Novara; Count Sceczen, Franz Pulski, J. Hunfalvi, President of the Geographical Society of Buda-Pesth; and Hermann Vámbery, so well known for his explorations in Central Asia.

A LECTURE was delivered at the schoolroom of the Blackheath Chapel by Mrs. Edkins, of Peking. The address was extremely interesting, and dealt with the subject of missionary labours in China and of the social habits of the Chinese. With regard to the conversion of the natives, Mrs. Edkins remarked that the chief difficulty was with the women, as, although the men were indifferent, they were less stubborn, and could more easily be converted. She earnestly impressed upon her audience the necessity for female missionaries to China. Mrs. Edkins provided illustrations in the shape of pictures, dresses, toys, and models of articles of everyday life at Peking, including itinerant cookshops, &c. Mrs. Edkins, who appeared in excellent health after twelve years' residence in China, purposes to return to Peking with her husband early next year, and carry on with renewed vigour her school and other missionary work she has so well inaugurated. We trust she may find some equally able and earnest lady to accompany her.

Colonel James Robert S. Sayer, C.B.—who on the arrival of his regiment, the King's Dragoon Guards, from India, was placed on half-pay, and who for a short time has been most inadequately compensated by the command of an Infantry Depot—will succeed Colonel Conyers Towers, C.B., in the command of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, the latter officer being about to be appointed as commandant at the Cavalry Depot, Canterbury, v. Colonel Cureton.

Major-General D'Aguilar, C.B., will take over the command of the Woolwich District from Major-General Sir D. E. Wood, K.C.B., on the 1st July. General D'Aguilar served in the Crimean campaign from September, 1854, to March, 1855 (medal with two clasps, C.B., Fifth-class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal), and in the Indian campaign of 1857-58 (mentioned in despatches, brevet of colonel, medal with clasp).

THE Messageries Maritimes steamer Tigre, with the present inward mail, arrived at Marseilles on the 27th inst. at 9 A.M. She brings 112 passengers and a general cargo, including 244 bales of silk, 31,693 packages of tea, and 1,572 packages of sundries for London, which part of her cargo will be forwarded to its destination per Company's steamer Ganges, due in London on or about the 7th of July.

THE China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vancouver Captain T. Shaw, sailed from San Francisco on the 25th inst., for Yokohama and Hong Kong. The same company's steamer Vasco de Gâma Captain J. F. Rice, arrived at Yokohama from Hong Kong on the 23rd inst., and sailed for San Francisco on the 25th inst.

AT a recent meeting of the Zoological Society a communication was read from Mr. Robert Swinhoe, containing an account of a new Cervine form discovered in the mountains near Ningpo, China, by Mr. A. Michie, and proposed to be called Lophotragus michianus.

Rear-Admiral Beauchamp Seymour, C.B., will probably succeed to the command of the Channel Squadron on the expiry of the period of service of Rear-Admiral Hornby. Captain Lord Walter T. Kerr is named as Admiral Seymour's flag-captain.

THE balance-sheets of the Methodist New Connexion shows that the expenditure last year for missions in China was £1,944 16s. 6d. This was the largest item in this class of expenditure.

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK has presided at a meeting held at Willis-Rooms, with a view of forming a National Association for the Training of Nurses for the Sick Poor.

The annual distribution of prizes to the young gentlemen on board the training ship Worcester, which is moored off Greenhithe, has been made by the First Lord of the Admiralty.

Commander Marcus E. Smithett, having attained fifteen years' seniority as a Commander, has been allowed to assume the rank and title of a Retired Captain.

A good-service pension for captains of the Royal Navy of £150 a year, vacant by the death of Captain Thomas Cochrane, has been awarded to Captain Charles Wake.

THE Antenor (str.), which arrived from China on the 22nd, is the vessel which broke down, and has consequently made a long passage, having eft Shanghai 25th Feb.

THE French Consul at Honolulu (M. Pernet) has informed his Government of the approaching visit to Paris of the King of the Sandwich Islands.

Commander Arthur R. Wright, and Commander William R. Kennedy, have been promoted to the rank of captain.

TEA ADULTERATION.

THE subject of Tea Adulteration, which has come before the Committee of the House of Commons, appointed to inquire into the working of the Adulteration Act, is of such extreme importance to the China trade and the public at large that we think it may be well to call particular attention to that portion of the evidence adduced, which we reported in our last issue. Mr. VOLCKNER, the analyst of the Royal Agricultural Society of England, on the whole, does not think that tea is adulterated in this country, and on being further questioned, he said that, though he knew that the facing of tea was practised to make it appear better, yet he did not think it was morally an adulteration, because it was generally understood that tea was faced, just as it was known that there was colouring matter in butter and cheese. Although Mr. VOLCKNER is tolerably decided in his opinion about the unfitness of the analysts appointed under this Act, his own notions about what constitutes adulteration do not appear to us to be very strict. Much more interesting than the evidence of the scientific witness is that of Mr. JAMES BARRINGER, described as a "starch manufacturer." The revelations of this gentleman, though perhaps not wholly unexpected by those learned in matters connected with the tea-trade, are of a decidedly startling nature to the innocent consumer of that beverage, which "cheers but not inebriates." Mr. BARRINGER says his immediate business is that of a starch manufacturer, and not a "tea-improver," but he admits that some years ago, before the passing of the Adulteration Act, he was employed by LLOYD'S Salvage Committee to re-dry tea which had been damaged by salt-water, and that his operations were carried on in bond, and, therefore, with the full knowledge and consent of the Customs' authorities. Mr. BARRINGER supposed that LLOYD'S Salvage Committee found him out to improve the damaged tea, because the apparatus used for starch making suited the drying of tea; he had, however, a special apparatus for dealing with tea; and possibly it may have been owing to this fact that he was favoured above other starch manufacturers. In regard to this matter we cannot but express our opinion that the conduct of the Government was utterly inexcusable, and ought on every ground to be condemned, for it is clear from Mr. BARRINGER'S evidence that by its agents—the Customs' officials—it aided and abetted in the "facing" and "fixing up" for consumption of a vast amount of salted tea, which ought never to have been allowed to pass on to the market. Mr. BARRINGER also tells us that he had faced "scented caper" and turned it into "Canton gunpowder," and that it was sold as such; and he further considers that teas were improved by the manipulation to which they were subjected in his establishment. Mr. Justice BLACKBURN'S decision in the celebrated Birkenhead adulteration case has had an odd effect in changing Mr. BARRINGER'S ideas in regard to the propriety of facing tea, and now he is occupied in the converse process, and unfaces it. He told the Committee that he took the colour out of two or three cwt. a week now, and employed two men at this branch of his business, but not all their time.

On the whole, Mr. BARRINGER'S evidence, in reply to the searching questions of the Committee, is decidedly outspoken, and we cannot but admire his courage. A grain of comfort is to be derived from his assertion that "he had never mixed exhausted or foreign leaves, nor had "he ever been asked to do so by his customers;" and there is also another satisfactory point in his evidence, and that is, that he denies the truth of some of Mr. WHITWORTH JACKSON'S allegations, which have caused a certain amount of sensation and alarm; and it will be some further consolation to disconcerted tea drinkers who have read and pondered gloomily over Mr. WHITWORTH JACKSON'S evidence, to learn that at their sitting on June 22 the Committee, after hearing additional witnesses, unanimously declined to receive any more evidence from Mr. WHITWORTH JACKSON. The examination of Mr. HORNIMAN, whose specialité is said to be uncoloured teas, was decidedly amusing. Being hard pressed by Mr. SANDFORD, he acknowledged and confessed that he had bought coloured teas in the market, and had the colour removed! After this confession, wrung from him, doubtless, with bitter agony, people will not unnaturally think that the statements in the curious "Chinese letter" which he so often advertises must be taken cum grano salis. To conclude, we would remark that, although the Adulteration Act may have done wrong to some and pressed injuriously upon others, it has, on the whole, done far more good than harm, and in the interests not only of common honesty, but of the public health, we earnestly hope that, if it be amended, it may be amended on the side of the public, that its provisions may always be carried out with stringency, and that the officers to whom is entrusted the working out of the enactment may never shrink from performing to the very letter the duty imposed upon them by the Legislature. If this be the case we may in the course of time hope to hear the last of watered milk, doctored tea and beer, strange compounds for mustard and pepper, sanded sugar, alum bread, &c., &c.

THE CHINKIANG CONSULATE.

THE folly of withdrawing a superior Consular official from Chinkiang is becoming sufficiently apparent. This withdrawal was ordered by the home Government some six years ago at the instance of Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK and Consul HARVEY, notwithstanding that the port was gradually, but surely, increasing in importance. The orders from home, in consequence mainly of Mr. HARVEY'S damaging representations, were to withdraw the Consular Staff altogether, and thus virtually close the port to foreign trade, for Chinkiang is one of those ports where business cannot be satisfactorily carried on without a resident Consular officer to conduct negotiations with the Chinese authorities, as well at the place itself as at Nanking, Yangchow, &c. This policy was so manifestly suicidal, that the late Mr. MARKHAM, then in charge of the Consulate, who was directed to carry it out, took upon himself, with the full concurrence and advice of his colleagues at Shanghai and Hankow, to evade his positive orders and to leave an assistant at Chinkiang to attend to matters of routine. This arrangement of his was acquiesced in by the authorities at Peking and in Downing-street, and has since remained in force, the port being placed under the jurisdiction of the Shanghai Consul and forming part of his establishment, a state of things which, we need hardly point out, was of necessity very absurd, and has been attended with great inconvenience to all parties concerned. The experience of the past six years has shown conclusively that the presence of a Junior Assistant or other officer, dependent on the Shanghai Consulate, is not sufficient to ensure the proper conduct of business and the maintenance of order at Chinkiang. We are no advocates for, or supporters of, extravagant Consular staffs, but in our opinion it is essential for the prosperity of Chinkiang that an independent Vice-Consul of ability, well-versed in the Chinese language, and supported by a steady and intelligent European constable, should be stationed there. It should not be necessary for Her MAJESTY'S Consul at Shanghai to go up to Chinkiang to settle every dispute, whether trumpery or otherwise. The additional expense, caused by the adoption of the course we suggest, need not exceed £300 per annum, allowance being made for the sums now disbursed in travelling expenses.

The proximate cause for these remarks is the occurrence at Chinkiang of a disturbance of a somewhat peculiar nature, which has caused some excitement at that port, and some talk even at Shanghai. We must own that we have not been able to arrive at a very clear perception of the merits of the case, and indeed they are not very material to our position; but, concisely put, the facts appear, according to the Shanghai Courier, to be somewhat as follows:—The representatives of a British firm, accompanied by two Malays, entered the premises of an American, and sought forcibly to seize and remove ten chests of opium that had been stored in his godowns without his knowledge or consent, and which they alleged belonged to their firm. To settle a trivial matter like this, Mr. Consul MEDHURST had to leave his more important duties at Shanghai, and proceed in person to Chinkiang, whereas if there had been a proper Consular authority at the port, the chances are that we should have heard nothing of the affair, for he would have very easily disposed of it in conjunction with the United States Vice-Consul. As it was, of course, Mr. MEDHURST settled the matter in a very brief space of time; the Malays were directed to relieve the port of their presence, and the British subjects, "by whose orders the Malays acted, "and who took part in the trespass and menace of "violence, were called upon to write a letter of apology "to the aggrieved American," and on payment of certain charges they got back their opium. Such a case as this, we maintain, ought never to have got beyond the region of a Consular Court, and in all human probability it would never have occurred at all if there had been a proper controlling authority always present at the port, in the face of which the British subjects in question would not have ventured upon the lawless method of procedure of which we have spoken, and, we should think, the anterior difficulties connected with the local opium trade, which led to the whole disturbance, could not possibly have arisen.

WE notice with much pleasure the energy and perseverance of Sir ARTHUR KENNEDY in legislating with regard to emigration matters at Hong Kong, and in bringing all the previously-existing Colonial Ordinances on the subject into a compact and consolidated form. Although no essentially fresh principle or feature was introduced into the new Ordinance passed at the meeting of the Colonial Council on May 5th, except, perhaps, in throwing additional responsibility upon the Governor, in respect to the seizure of suspected vessels, yet, as his Excellency remarked, the consolidation of the Ordinances is a very convenient measure, and will be productive of great benefit to the colony. We need not now fear that Hong Kong can again be accused of any participation in or connivance at the vile and odious coolie trade, for which Macao has for so many years had such an unenviable and infamous notoriety. If Governor KENNEDY be equally successful in putting down, once for all, the system of overhauling peaceable trading vessels, which Chinese cruisers are reported to have recently practised in close proximity to Hong Kong harbour, he will, by these two measures alone, have done good service to the Colony.

WITH regard to the paragraph in the China Mail which states that the coolies on board the Rosita Y. Nina had suffered severely, we notice that by accounts in the Rio papers the steamer arrived at that port in December, and left in January for Havanna, with 731 coolies. She had been seven months out, four of which were passed at Assumption, her engines having broken down. Nothing is said in regard to mortality amongst the coolies. She arrived at Havana March 5.

WE understand that an agreement has been arrived at between the Post-office and the directors of the P. and O. Company for a re-arrangement of their contract, under which the Southampton portion of the mails will for the future be conveyed through the Suez Canal. It also provides for an acceleration by twenty-four hours of the Brindisi portion of the mails, which will be forwarded via Egypt as at present.

WE understand that H.E. SANO, with Baron VON SIEBOLD, Secretary, and other members of the Japanese Legation at Vienna, will shortly visit London, and proceed on to San Francisco and Yokohama.

WE believe that the number of Essays on Opium sent in for adjudication is over fifty. The prizes are £200 for the first, and £100 for the second in merit.

CUSTOMS REPORTS ON THE TRADE OF CHINA.

The Customs Gazette for the quarter ending December, 1873, supplies the following statistics of the trade at the various ports, as compared with the corresponding period of 1872:—

NEWCHWANG.—The tonnage entered and cleared is about the same as in 1872. The imports of cotton goods are larger this year, while the exports show no marked change. The revenue is slightly lower than 1872, the figures being Tls. 73,847, against Tls. 76,347 last year.

CHEFOO.—The tonnage figures show an increase. The imports of some descriptions of cotton goods are lower. This is also observable in sugar. The exports show but little change. The revenue shows a decided decrease this quarter, the amount being only Tls. 82,930, as compared with Tls. 104,274 in 1872.

TIENTSIN.—The tonnage shows very little alteration. The imports of cotton goods on the whole show a slight increase, and the exports are rather higher also. The revenue is slightly in excess of 1872, the figures being Tls. 111,421, against Tls. 109,237.

HANKOW.—The tonnage figures are slightly higher. The import and export figures are nearly all below those of 1872. The revenue this year is Tls. 33,338, against Tls. 28,575.

KIUKIANG.—The imports show no considerable variation, while the exports are, as a rule, higher. The revenue shows a considerable increase, the figures being Tls. 174,670, against Tls. 100,972.

CHINKIANG.—The tonnage figures are higher. A slight falling off is observable in most of the imports, with the exception of opium. The revenue is lower than during the corresponding period in 1872, the amount being Tls. 39,474 and Tls. 50,948 respectively.

SHANGHAI.—The tonnage of the ships entered and cleared is rather higher than in 1872. The import of opium is less this quarter, and there is a falling off in many of the other imports. The export figures show no marked change. The revenue is higher, the figures this quarter being Tls. 931,434, against Tls. 816,989 in 1872.

NINGPO.—The imports and exports show no great change, and the revenue is Tls. 221,099, against Tls. 224,741 in 1872.

FOOCHOW.—The imports show but slight alteration, while the export of tea is considerably lower. The revenue shows an important decrease, the amount this quarter being Tls. 464,547, against Tls. 586,241.

TAMSUI (FORMOSA).—The tonnage figures are lower than in 1872. In imports there is no great change. In exports coal has fallen off. The revenue amounts to Tls. 31,381, against Tls. 38,551 in 1872.

TAKOW (FORMOSA).—The tonnage is below that of 1872, and the imports are lower. The revenue shows a slight falling off.

AMOY.—The tonnage is lower than in 1872. The tonnage entered and cleared being 72,506 tons entered, and 62,115 tons cleared, as against 78,396 tons entered, and 74,163 tons cleared in 1872. The imports are higher in grey shirtings, and lower in white ditto, while the export of hemp bags is lower than in 1872. The revenue figures are Tls. 174,905, against Tls. 170,502 in 1872.

SWATOW.—The imports of cotton goods are higher this quarter, while many of the exports are lower. The revenue has increased from Tls. 115,868 to Tls. 136,268.

CANTON.—An important increase is noticeable in the tonnage figures, although the ships entered and cleared are nearly the same as in 1872. The import of cotton goods is rather higher, while the exports are nearly all lower. The revenue is below that of 1873, the figures being Tls. 225,238, against Tls. 279,610 in 1872.

TEA ADULTERATION.

Mr. Whitworth Jackson, whose evidence before the Committee has been impeached, has since published a lengthy letter in The Times. The following are the principal statements put forward by Mr. Jackson:—

My evidence as to the nature of and the extent to which the adulteration of tea is carried on in China was given with the view of showing that, whatever might be the cost of the examination of tea in bond, its amount would be saved to the public over and over again. My estimates were made upon returns which I obtained from one of the highest authorities in such matters. Concerning the adulteration of tea in this country, my evidence had been collected from a variety of sources, and was to the effect that tea which has been below the sea has been recovered, dressed, faced—some black and some green—and sent out with the appearance of sound tea; that it has been the custom (and that until very recently) to colour scented caper and substitute it for fine green tea, and that it is now the practice to put heavily-faced green tea through a certain process, after which, although the colouring materials have not been removed, the tea is sold as unadulterated. Four witnesses proved the colouring and uncolouring of tea, and one of them gave satisfactory evidence as to the making up of sea-damaged tea. Some difference of opinion exists as to the motives with which these things are done, and as to the profits arising out of such transactions. I venture to say that no one would incur the heavy penalties which are set upon these offences or go to so much trouble unless he expected to make a large profit out of them. The figures which I gave were based upon matters which are within my own knowledge. In the letter signed "A Wholesale Teadealer" I was careful to mention such circumstances only as have come under my own immediate observation. The statements made in that letter have been traversed by two witnesses, the first of whom went out of the house to which that letter refers before the circumstances therein alluded to transpired, and having taken with him a portion of its connection, did not cultivate the acquaintance of those who remained behind. That witness and the writer had communications the one with the other only at intervals few and far between (and upon no occasion for some five years past, or more). His statements, therefore, touching my evidence are upon matters to which he is an absolute stranger. Upon the evidence of the only remaining witness, for obvious reasons, I forbear to express an opinion. He has assumed the responsibility of denying the accuracy of statements with which I carefully abstained from associating his name. In a fitting time and place I may have occasion to show that they are true. An effort is being made to relieve the retail dealers of the hardships and burdens which have been placed upon them in the action which has been taken to deal with the practices herein referred to. How, then, at such a moment can the interests of the consumers and of the respectable portion of the trade be better served than by showing in what manner, for what purposes, and by whom those practices are resorted to? This done, I am content to leave the matter in the hands of the public.

Major-Gen. Hon. F. Colborne, the newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief at Hong Kong, will leave for that port about the middle of next month.

The Rinaldo, screw sloop, Commander G. Parsons, from the China station, arrived at Spithead on the 23rd inst. to be paid off. The Rinaldo left England for China in December, 1866, and was recommissioned at Hong Kong in May, 1870.

The statement that the 57th Regiment is to be removed from Ceylon to India is altogether incorrect.

Deputy-Controller C. K. Cleeve, of the Control Department, has been ordered from China to Devonport.

The Adventure, 2, iron screw troopship, is being fitted up with cabins, and undergoing some other alterations, which are to be completed by the dockyard authorities at Portsmouth by the middle of next week. The officers of the ship are as follows:—

Captain, John D'Arcy; Lieutenants, Samuel L. Osborne, John E. F King, Arthur Furlonger; Navigating Lieutenant, William King; Staff-Surgeon, Henry N. M. Sedgwick; Paymaster, F. B. Baverstock; Chief Engineer, William H. Green; Sub-Lieutenant, Frederick St. G. Rich; Surgeon, William Pearson, M.D.; Assistant-Paymaster, William Brent Clark; Engineers, Charles MacKeever, Job Annable, William J. Coope; Assistant-Engineer, William Ord; Boatswains, second-class, Stephen J. Goodfellow, John Weeks, Frederick W. MacMahon; Carpenter, second-class, John Lakey. The ship's complement is 153.

The Adventure will first call at Plymouth, where she will take in the majority of her passengers. She will then proceed to Madeira, Sierra Leone, and Ascension. At the latter port she will leave a few passengers (the wife and children of the engineer in charge) and a quantity of stores. She will then proceed to Rio de Janeiro, with stores and supernumeraries for the Egmont and Ready, on the south-east coast of America. She will next cross to the Cape of Good Hope, where she will leave passengers and stores, and then proceed to Sydney, with supernumeraries (among whom will be about 300 marines and 150 boys) for the Pearl, flagship on the Australian station. From Sydney the Adventure will sail for China, for orders. Navigating-midshipman John H. W. Theed is taking passage in her to China. It is believed that she will there embark the crews of the Princess Charlotte, receiving-ship, and the Curlew and Avon, gunboats, for England. The battalion of marines who have been serving in Japan are also expected to return home in the Adventure.

Captain George Ommanney Willes, C.B., who has been gazetted to be Rear-Admiral, in consequence of the recent death of Rear-Admiral F. A. Campbell, is the son of the late Captain George Wickens Willes, R.N., K.F.M. He was born in 1823, being therefore in his fifty-first year. He entered the navy in 1836, passed his examination in 1842, and obtained his commission as Lieutenant in 1844. In 1859 he was appointed to the Chesapeake, 51, as flag-Captain to Rear-Admiral James Hope, C.B., on the East India and China Station, and was officially reported from the Gulf of Pecheli on July 5 for his exertions in re-embarking the force when it became evident that the attack had failed, also for his subsequent endeavour to recover the Plover, Lea, and Cormorant, and when that became hopeless to effect their destruction. In 1869 he obtained the appointment at Whitehall of Chief of the Staff, at a salary of £1,264 per annum, being one of the extraordinary creations of Mr. Childers; but in May, 1872, although he had the honour of being the only naval officer who ever held that office, he left Whitehall upon half-pay. He was nominated a Companion of the Bath in 1861, and in 1870 became a naval aide-de-camp to the Queen, which office he vacates on promotion.

Major William John Kirk, staff officer of pensioners for the Edinburgh district, died last week, in his 60th year. The deceased officer was a native of Hampshire, and joined the Ceylon Rifles in 1831, serving in that corps for eleven years. His health suffering from the climate, he returned to England in 1843, and he was afterwards appointed staff officer of pensioners in Monaghan. Thence he was, in 1857, transferred to Dundee, where he had held a similar office. In 1863 he was appointed to hold the office in the Edinburgh district, the duties of which he has discharged for eleven years past.

Colonel William Augustine John Mayhew, formerly Adjutant-General of the Bengal army, died last week, in his 67th year. The deceased officer served as Assistant Adjutant-General during the expedition to Burmah, having been present at the taking of Martaban, the operations in the vicinity and capture of Rangoon in April, and at Pegu in December, 1852. For these services he received a medal, and was promoted to the brevet rank of Major. He retired from the service with the rank of Colonel in 1861.

Corporal Henry Rowe, of the Royal Engineers, who served with his company (the 30th) throughout the Ashantee War, was one of the first to enter Coomassie, and was engaged in undermining and blowing up King's Coffee's Palace, has, although he has not been home three months, volunteered for service in Hong Kong.

It is stated that the claims of those medical officers who distinguished themselves, professionally or otherwise, during the late operations on the Gold Coast, but who, up to the present, have received no reward whatever, are now before the authorities at the War-office.

Lieut.-Colonel E. M. Grain, of the Royal Engineers, has removed from China to Edinburgh; Major A. T. Storer, of the same corps, has arrived home from Ceylon; and Captain J. R. Hogg, also of the Royal Engineers, has been ordered from Ceylon to St. Helena.

The death of Commander Charles Prickett, late of the Himalaya, who served in the 'Highflyer in China, is announced. His last service was on the Gold Coast, where he suffered from the fever. At the time of his death he was forty years of age.

HAMBURG, JUNE 23.

The Chancellor of the Empire has just sent to the Federal Council for their approval the draft of a Bill to be laid before Parliament next session, for the formation of a new institution to be called the Deutsche Seewarte, or Maritime Observatory, the seat of which is to be in this city. It is very short, and runs as follows:—"Art. 1. Under the name of the 'Deutsche Seewarte' an institution is founded, having for its object to improve our knowledge of the nature of the sea, as far as it concerns the interests of navigation, and also to record the meteorology of the German coasts as a guide to facilitate the safety of ships and navigation generally. Art. 2. The Institution has its seat at Hamburg. Stations will be erected at places that may be thought advisable all along the coast, for keeping up communication between the land and vessels at sea, for the observance of the weather and giving warning of the approach of storms. Art. 3. The expenses of the establishment and its filial stations will be borne by the Empire, and placed duly in the annual estimates. Art. 4. The sphere of action of the Institution, its internal arrangements and regulations, as well as its administration, will be fixed by Imperial Decree." The accompanying explanatory "motives" lay great stress on the fact that within the last ten or twenty years the extension of a knowledge of the meteorological and physical relations of the seas, which tend so much to the safety and rapidity of navigation, has become an important branch of science, and recognised as such by all maritime countries. Similar Institutions exist in England, France, &c., for making observations and publishing the result for the benefit of navigators, and have the double object of increasing in safety and rapidity of voyages by examination of the strength and direction of the currents, the extent of the ice, the limits of fogs, calms, and trade winds, the magnetism of the earth, &c.; and, secondly, for safety from storms by regular observations of the direction and strength of the wind within reach of the coast. Such an Institution has never been formed by any of the German maritime States. The attempts of some of them are worthy of praise, such as the Hydrographic Department of the Imperial Admiralty, the Seewarte at Hamburg, and the Prussian Meteorological Institution; but their combined efforts were not able to achieve the satisfactory results required by the progress of science. The rank that German shipping now takes in international commerce demands the establishment of an institution independent of other countries. The absolute necessity of proper stations for meteorological observations in such dangerous waters as the North Sea and Baltic has been fully recognised by the unanimous vote of a commission of naval, scientific, and merchant service gentlemen convened by the Chancellor, and numerous petitions have been received from Chambers of Commerce, Insurance Companies, and Underwriters, urging the Government for safety and protection by the foundation of such an Institution worthy of the name of Germany. It is then demonstrated that this can only be carried out by the State, and that such alone would enjoy the confidence of the shipping and insuring interests.

A petition from the Chamber of Commerce at Bremen has been received by the Chancellor of the Empire, praying in the name of the Congress of Delegates from the German sea-port towns and places of commerce, that the Government take the initiative in proposing to the other principal maritime countries a codification of international maritime law. President Delbruck laid it before the Bundesrath at their next sitting, stating that the great importance of the subject induced him to do so in the present early and unripe stage of proceeding. The Bundesrath acknowledged the grave importance of the object sought for, and referred the petition to their permanent committees for Commerce and Traffic and for Law and Justice to report on. It is quite clear that if negotiations are opened with other Governments, the principle of declaring inviolate private property in time of war will come first to the top and be satisfactorily settled, or else the whole thing will break down; and it must be confessed that if England still adheres to the principles she has hitherto followed in similar cases, there is but little or no chance of a favourable result. But it is to be hoped that the present Government will take a more sensible and enlightened view of the case, and make no difficulty in agreeing to the proposition, that if in time of war private property on land be declared sacred and inviolable, there is no valid reason why private property at sea—with of course the exception of contraband of war, which is another subject for a more perfect definition, as there is a great divergence in the laws of different countries from each other on that point—should not also be exempted from capture and condemnation. It is also to be hoped that the press will take up the subject and commence an agitation on it, explaining to the people in England the advantages to be gained—and we, with our extensive commerce with every part of the globe, are just the nation mostly interested, and should not leave it to Germany to take the initiative—and thus influencing public feeling at home in favour of the idea. There could not be a more favourable opportunity than the present period of the most profound peace, when there is no prospect of a maritime war to excite public feeling, for bringing the subject prominently before all nations, and I think we ought all to be grateful to the Chamber of Commerce at Bremen for having started the subject and at such an opportune time.

The Hamburg Seamen's Office have received from the German Consul at Chefoo official intelligence of the loss of the barque Chance, of this city, Captain Ulrich, by striking on the Vele Rete Rock on the 28th January last, by which accident not only the captain and his family, who were on board with him, but also two of the crew lost their lives. The Chance was a fine barque of 315 tons, owned by Herr H. H. Eggers, of this port. The surviving relatives of those unfortunately drowned are invited to send in their claims to the above-mentioned department, which undertakes to wind up and settle their outstanding affairs.

We learn by a letter from St. Petersburg that on the 16th February last the body of the Russian courier who left Peking for Kiachta with the mail bags for Europe was found in the snow in the Mongolian Desert, frozen to death. The mails were not found with him, but have safely come to hand at Kiachta, and been sent on to Europe, from which it is inferred that the corpse had been first discovered by some Mongolian traveller, who had taken on the mail bags with him and delivered them unopened and in safety. "Such an accident," says the writer of the letter, "has never happened before, though the postal overland service has now been carried on this way for many years, and with wonderful regularity."

The semi-official Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung at Berlin contains the following:—"Amongst the sea-serpents that spring up annually at this dead season of the year to fill up and serve as stuffing for the columns of newspapers is the old one of the intention of Germany to found a colony and have a naval station in the Far East. We can, however, assure our readers that there is no such intention, either on the part of the Admiralty or the Imperial Government, nor is there any need of taking such a step; our ships of war find everywhere sufficient accommodation without the possession of colonies, which would be attended with more disadvantages than benefit for Germany."

Several new lines of railway are projected by the Russian Government for execution this year, but as they have no commercial importance, and are purely strategical lines, the press in that country are unanimous in disapproving of them, and call on the Government to turn their attention exclusively to the urgent claims for the execution of the Siberian railway as by far more important. It is therefore hoped and expected that the subject will be reconsidered, and the Boersen Zeitung even states that such is really already the case, the project having found much opposition among the Ministers.

The Allgemeine Zeitung publishes a letter from Japan, in which the writer states that Herr von Annecke, formerly German Consul-General at Shanghai, is appointed Minister Resident in Japan, vice Herr von Brandt, removed in a similar capacity to the Court of Peking.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 24.

Contrary to general expectation, the Reform Bill has been rejected by the Second Chamber by 39 against 32 votes. This is the more surprising when we consider that the Minister of the Home Department had made so many concessions to gain a majority. Eight malcontent Liberals went over to the Opposition, and were the immediate cause of the Ministerial crisis in which we are now involved. The result had not been foreseen by the Ministers, who reckoned confidently on a majority, if only a small one. This is shown by the fact that the Ministers were not authorised by the King to retract the Bill, until some time after the vote was given. Thus the public business was stopped for some days, and only resumed upon an agreement being made to meet and vote—not discuss—the Budget of the Naval Department. This sitting took place the day before yesterday, and the Ministry then communicated the fact of their resignation. What will now happen is uncertain. Some say that the King will prefer a dissolution of the Chamber, while others predict that the members of the late Cabinet will decline most positively to remain in office. It is very improbable that a dissolution would infuse new blood into the Chamber, inasmuch that people are very indifferent to political matters, and take events very coolly. They don't care to be troubled much by Liberalism or Conservatism, and many consider that the one party does as little as the other. Now that the very moderate Liberal Ministers—the Ministry was little else than a Cabinet d'affaires, without a pronounced policy—refuse to assume another lease of office, it is very difficult to find a combination which will be backed by a majority. I sincerely regret the fate of the Reform Bill—it would not have improved our bad election system to any great extent, but it would have done so in some degree. It was a first step on a good road. The crisis is still more annoying because the King left the Hague some days ago, on his trip to Switzerland. Last Thursday he arrived with the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar at Ems, were they met the Emperors of Russia and Germany, and he afterwards paid a visit to the Empress Augusta, who is staying at Coblentz. It is not very probable that the King will return at once, as he can do all that is necessary by telegraph. In the meanwhile the Ministers have declared themselves ready to deal with neutral Bills which cannot be delayed without injury to the public interests.

It is stated that a Dutch-German Company is to be established for the direct importation of East India produce into Germany. Agents will, it is said, be sent to Java in order to make the necessary engagements with commercial houses. This item of news has created some consternation in commercial circles. Probably your correspondent in Hamburg will be able to give more particulars about this project, as it is rumoured that it is in that town the head office of the company would be established.

The question about Generals Van Swieten and Verspyck remains still the topic of the day—and another officer who is talked about is Captain Van Dalen. The last named is severely censured by some papers for his conduct towards the Governor-General (you know that he declined to shake hands with him), and the two Generals find both supporters and antagonists in the Press. A local paper brought forward the curious idea that the editors of the journals who consider that General Verspyck has been badly dealt with should publish the following:—"The nation thanks the General for the services which he rendered in Atchin towards his country." A paper war has broken out between the Clerical papers and those which support General Van Swieten about the manifesto in which he signified to the Atchinese that Mahommed would disapprove their behaviour (or something to that effect). The Standard complains that the expression is an offence against Christianity!

The Staats Courant publishes a satisfactory report about the East India railways. It states that the line Batavia-Buitenzorg returned last year a net profit of 5 per cent. on the capital. The receipts on the Samarang Principalities railway were f.1,575,010.31 and the expenditure was f.748,251.44½; whilst the receipts on the line Batavia-Buitenzorg amounted to f.379,547.95, and the outlay to f.174,250.37½.

It is asserted that Prince Alexander will start in a few days for Copenhagen, and of course the idea of a marriage with a Princess of Denmark is revived.

The Trading Company has announced for last year a dividend of only f.47, being only about 4¾ per cent., against f.115 in 1872, f.114 in 1871, and f.70 in 1870. The reasons for this unsatisfactory result are not known, the balance-sheet not being made public. From 1850 to 1871 the shareholders received on the average a dividend of 8 per cent. There are, however, precedents of previous years, viz., 1859 and 1868, when the dividend was f.43, and 1869, when it was f.37. But in those years the prices of coffee were not so extraordinarily high as in 1873. In the quotations of the India Trading Bank shares some fluctuations have taken place, which it is rumoured were caused by a financial project of the managers, which will be made known at a forthcoming meeting of the shareholders. Financial men, however, assure me that the statement is incorrect.

The Consul-General of Holland at Alexandria, Mr. Ruyssenaers, has arrived at the Hague. Rumour says that Prince Henry invited him here to consult upon the Prince's plans to build upon the land he has purchased in the vicinity of the Suez Canal.

I regret to record the death of Mr. G. H. J. Elliot Boswell, a most esteemed poet, and a high functionary of the State.

Mgr. Claessens, Catholic pastor at Batavia, has been appointed Apostolic vicar there. His consecration will take place at Sittard, the place of his birth.

ROTTERDAM, JUNE 25.

To-day the annual meeting was held at Amsterdam of the shareholders of the Netherlands India Trading Bank. The balance-sheet for 1873 and the account of profit and loss was approved of, and a dividend declared of 7 per cent. on the paid-up capital, or f.17.50 per share. Mr. G. J. de Clercq was re-elected a member of the direction, Messrs. Th. F. Schill (at the Hague) and G. H. L. van Oordt (at Batavia) were re-appointed commissaries, whilst in the place of the late Mr. W. Poolman was elected as commissary Mr. J. G. C. A. de Vogel, at the Hague. The proposal of the managers to issue a Five per Cent. Loan of three millions of guilders was approved, after a short discussion.

The election for a member of Parliament in the district Amersfoort has not given a definitive result. The anti-revolutionary candidate, Mr. M. M. van Asch van Wyk, obtained 909 votes; the Conservative candidate, Mr. Van Goltstein, 823 votes. Another ballot must therefore take place. The Liberal candidate, Mr. G. M. van der Linden, obtained 148 votes.

At a meeting of the Geographical Society a proposal was made by Mr. W. F. Versteegh to send a scientific expedition to Sumatra. He thought it the duty of the Society to explore the unknown portion of that island, for which a Government subsidy would be necessary. The proposal was supported by Prince Henry, and was carried unanimously. The cost was estimated at £2,000.

There is no news about the ministerial crisis. Mr. Geertsema, the Minister for Home Affairs, has started for Switzerland. The prevailing opinion is that the Chamber will be dissolved.

Prince Alexander started to-day for Copenhagen.

I hear that the loan for the Steam Ship Company "Java" has been fully subscribed.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Netherlands India

Railway Company it was stated that out of the net profit of f.309,000 a dividend would be paid of f.28 per share, which would take f.280,000, and the balance would be added to the fund for material.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—The market has been firm, and for immediate wants 57½c. has been paid for good ordinary Java, and only a very trifling quantity is offered at this price. The result of the forthcoming auction is waited for with much interest.

SUGAR has met with a lively demand, and about 9,000 mats have found buyers at f.2¼ under November value.

TEA.—The cargo of China ex Kirkland was sold somewhat under the broker's valuations. Holders seem inclined to make some concessions, and several parcels of Congou ex Bellona, bought in at the public sale of the 16th of February, have been sold at 7c. to 9c. under the price then offered.

RICE.—14,000 bales Java table, ex Schiedam and Java Packet, found a buyer, but the prices were kept secret. There are no other transactions to report.

SPICES are in general firm, but the business is of no importance.

JAVA TOBACCO.—Important lots changed hands last week, but no particulars transpired. 9,172 bales were offered by private tender, of which 8,292 bales were sold. The stock is very large.

COTTON dull. The only demand is for good ord. stained American.

HIDES have met with a good demand, notwithstanding that to-day 59,739 East India will be offered by public tender, whilst at the same time the arrivals are heavy.

RATTANS have met with a good demand, and important transactions have taken place in second hands, 500 piculs ex Madura finding buyers.

DRUGS dull. There are no particulars to report.

TIN.—In sympathy with the English market, ours is very dull; Banca on the spot has realised f.59 to f.59½, and at this price large quantities are offered, whilst Billiton can be bought at f.56½. A lot of 300 tons has arrived from the Straits.

INDIGO.—About 100 chests Java sold at former prices.

TORTOISE-SHELLS.—236 kilos., ex Zephyr, found buyers at prices that did not transpire.

SHIPPING.

DEPARTURES.—June 17, from Brouwershaven, for Batavia, Nicolette; from Texel, for Sourabaya, Willemina and Clara; 21, from Maassluis, for Batavia, Wyberton.

ARRIVALS.—June 20, at Brouwershaven, from Banjoewangie, Nereus; 21, at Texel, from Batavia, Java (str.).

PASSENGERS INWARD.—From Java, per Java (str.): Messrs. J. K. Karn and family, J. A. Baart de la Faille, H. P. Julsing and family, C. W. Merens and family, J. Munro, E. P. T. Duran, C. de Decker, A. H. Kruseman and family, Miss J. Haga.

Monetary and Commercial.

The Manchester market has continued in the quiet state that previously prevailed. The inquiry for both Goods and Yarns has been of a limited character, and though producers have made no alteration in their quotations, Friday's prices being adhered to, buyers could no doubt have operated at a moderate reduction on the rates then current. The market at the close shows no change upon this state of inactivity.

The report of the Assam Company shows a profit of £48,223 for 1873, being an increase of £13,564 on that of the preceding year—a result attributable to the realisation of better prices, the crop itself having been rather less. A dividend of 17½ per cent. is recommended, making, with the interim payment of 5 per cent. 22½ per cent. for the twelve months. With regard to 1874 the prospects at present are considered equally favourable.

The Eastern Extension Australia and China Telegraph Company have declared an interim dividend for the quarter ended March 31 at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, or 3s. per share, payable on the 15th prox. The Eastern Telegraph Company announce the declaration of a dividend of 4s. per share, making, with previous payments on account, a dividend for the year ending 31st March of 6 per cent., carrying to reserve a balance of about £39,000.

The report of the Central Argentine Railway Company, recommends a dividend of 28s. per share, and that authority should be given for raising £300,000 on debentures; the dividend to be paid as soon as the arrangements for the debenture issue shall have been effected.

The directors of the National Steam Company (Liverpool) have declared an interim dividend of 10 per cent. for the half-year.

At the meeting of the Ceylon Company the directors' report, already noticed, was agreed to.

The official liquidators of the London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank (Limited) have, with the sanction of Vice-Chancellor Hall, declared a sixth dividend of 1s. in the pound (making 7s. 6d. in the pound).

A meeting of the creditors of Messrs. Oppenheim and Schrader, of Mark-lane, who suspended payment last month, has been held. The statement of affairs submitted estimates the liabilities expected to be proved against the estate at £140,971, against assets amounting to £37,615. The meeting resolved to liquidate the estate by arrangement, and a trustee, with a committee of inspection, was appointed.

The failure is reported of Messrs. Tilche and Co., Egyptian merchants, of Alexandria and Fenchurch-street. The stoppage is supposed to be due to the connection of the firm with Messrs. Snellgrove and Leech, whose suspension was announced last week.

Mr. John Pilling, of Ashton, cloth manufacturer, whose premises were destroyed by fire, has filed a petition for liquidation. His liabilities amount to £38,000.

The suspension of Mr. Tom Holroyd, cotton warp sizer, of Manchester, is announced, with liabilities amounting to £15,000.

TEA.

The market continues without any change; some business has been doing in New Season's Canton Congous, but at gradually depressed rates; other sorts of old Tea without material change. Scented Teas rather unsaleable. Green Teas have sold rather irregularly, some rather coarse coloured and glazed kinds having obtained low rates. In public sale common red leaf sold easier at 9¼d. to 9¾d. New makes sold from 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 6½d. Scented Capers 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 1⅝d., being about previous quotations. Green Teas sold at low rates. Deliveries from London from 1st to 22nd inst. inclusive, or 19 days, 9,923,564 lbs., against 9,664,600 lbs. in corresponding period last year. Imports, deliveries, and stocks in London, from Jan. 1 to May 31:—

SILK.

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says:—The periodical public sales commenced on the 24th inst., and were concluded on the 26th. The quantity offered was about 1,300 bales Bengal, 4,500 bales China, 1,200 bales Japan, and about 1,000 bales Canton, and about 60,000 lbs. English thrown. The quantity in aggregate was not unusually large, but a very unusual proportion of the Raw Silk, say about 2,000 to 3,000 bales, and the whole of the Thrown Silk were printed "to be sold without reserve," or taxed at such low prices as to be practically without reserve. The result has been very unsatisfactory to sellers, not perhaps that they could have expected much otherwise, looking at the previously depressed state of trade and the large quantity thus forced upon the market, but the prices realised have been generally worse even than previous quotations—the Thrown Silk especially was sold at miserably low rates, generally lower than it could be produced at the lowest quotation for raws. Manufacturers have thus a large quantity of cheap stuff with which to apply their ingenuity to make some tempting goods. Deliveries 1st to 25th inst. inclusive:—China, 2,103 bales; Canton, 457 bales; Japan, 657 bales; total, 3,217 bales.

CAMPHOR.—Business is at the present moment at a standstill; sales were made of China last week in auction at 67s. 6d. to 70s. per cwt., and there are buyers at the lower figure, but no sellers under 70s.

CHINA PRESERVES.—In public sale 100 cases Ginger were withdrawn, 29 casks ditto bought in at 6½d., and 21 casks Cumquats at 9d. per lb.

COCOA-NUT OIL has attracted rather more attention, and a very fair business has been done; fine to finest Cochin is worth £39 to £40, and sales have taken place of between 300 and 400 tons Ceylon at £34 10s. to £35, according to quality.

COIR GOODS.—Although only a moderate supply of Yarn has been offered by auction, there has again been little disposition to buy, and an unusually large proportion was bought in, a small portion finding buyers, being rather cheaper. A large supply of Rope again offered met no demand, and the whole was withdrawn.

COLOMBO ROOT is in very large supply, but holders remain firm against a decline in prices.

COPRA.—Penang is in good demand at £21 10s.

CUTCH.—The market is very quiet, and sales have been small, Pegue at 22s. 6d. to 23s.

DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—The market is quiet, and business can only be done at lower prices than have lately been current.

EBONY.—At auction of 600 logs (160 tons) Ceylon, chiefly of new import, offered, 45 tons sold at full rates, fair to good at £14 to £18 15s., fine large £19 5s., the remainder being withdrawn.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady; Sumatra steady; and of 294 cases offered only about 20 sold at 67s. 6d. for good 3rds; and £7 to £9 7s. 6d. for middling to very fine 2nds, though false packed; and £6 to £6 10s. good but badly false packed. Copal quiet; small sales at previous value. Damar quiet, but firmly held. None of either offered. Gamboge quiet; of 39 cases offered one-third sold at £11 10s. to £12 for good pipe part run.

GALLS show a further slight improvement, 200 cases China having been sold at 50s. to 51s. per cwt. for good quality; an advance of about 20s. per cwt. upon the prices ruling a fortnight since.

GAMBIER.—There has been more demand on the spot, and prices have recovered, about 2,000 bales block having been sold at 25s. to 25s. 3d. ex ship and ex quay, 100 tons just arrived at 24s. 9d. ex ship, and 250 tons for arrival at 24s. 6d. to 24s. 9d. In auction of 653 bales, 310 bags, &c., pressed cubes, 350 bales, 100 bags fine pale sold at 33s., being steady.

GUTTA-PERCHA continues very dull, and all offers have been retired.

HEMP.—There has been a steady demand for Manila, but the chief business has been effected at public sale, at which good and fine qualities sold readily at an advance of 20s. to 30s. per ton, but fair and lower sorts were slow of sale at former rates. Of 7,109 bales offered about 2,000 sold, ordinary mixed and brown at £30 to £31, mixed and barely fair at £33 to £33 10s., fully fair at £34 10s., good fair roping at £35 to £35 5s., good at £36 to £37, superior at £39 10s. to £40, a few bales fine Lupiz at £67 10s., the remainder being bought in, the bulk fair to good fair at £34 to £35 10s. Privately 500 bales have been sold, good at £37 5s., and 1,000 bales fair current for delivery during the last three months at £34. Six bales China have been sold at £28 per ton.

INDIA-RUBBER.—Market dull; no transactions are reported.

ISINGLASS.—The auctions of the month, held on the 23rd inst., embraced 22 packages Penang, the bulk of which found buyers; pipe, fine, at 4s. 9d. to 4s. 10d.; good, 4s. 3d.; rough, 3s. 10d. to 3s. 11d., being fully the previous value.

JAPAN WAX has continued throughout the interval in large supply, and exhibits a considerable decline in value; of 529 cases offered a portion was sold at 50s. for fair quality; there is some inquiry for fine bright at 56s. per cwt.

MUSK.—Prices are rather easier; there have been brought to the hammer 39 caddies Yunan; 15 sold at 35s. to 36s. 6d. for middling to fine; 4 caddies Tonquin (scarce) at 18s. for rough and tally; 3 caddies Cabardine retired; and 21 tins grain, 12 sold—good at 48s.; the bulk, low adulterated, at 5s. to 12s.

ORCHELLA.—In auction 49 bales Ceylon have been sold at 28s. 6d.

PLUMBAGO.—Ceylon is very dull, and is cheaper; of 2,016 barrels offered over half sold—lump dull common to fine bold, 11s. 6d. to 18s.; Chips, small to good, 9s. 3d. to 11s. 3d.; dust, middling to fine, 7s. to 9s. per cwt.

PEPPER.—Black has been firmer, and fair sales have transpired in Singapore at 6¼d. to 6½d., in Penang at up to 5⅝d., and afloat 200 tons Singapore have changed hands at up to 6⅝d. for May-July shipment and 6½d. near at hand. At auction of 842 bags a small proportion sold at 6½d. for Singapore. White has been dull, and the previous advance was lost last week, when, of 545 bags offered, only one-fourth sold at 9¼d. down to 8¾d. for fine bold bright Singapore; 8d. for fair dull, and 7¾d. for Penang. At auction 678 bags were retired in the absence of biddings.

RATTANS continue dull, and no business is reported.

RHUBARB.—China is very firmly held, and higher prices would readily be paid, but very little good offers. Of 175 cases offered the bulk sold at 11d. to 11¼d. per lb. for rough dull coated high dried pinky and grey fracture, and 6d. pickings.

RICE.—A still further reduction of about 3d. per cwt. having been accepted for floating cargoes of Burmah; the continent has bought more freely than for many months, giving more steadiness to the market, and at the close prices are firmer, more especially for distant shipment. The market on the spot has been dull for hard as well as soft grain kinds, and prices are without improvement. In public sale Ballam sold at 10s. 9d. damaged, first-class at 9s. 6d., 6,837 mats Japan at 12s., heated at 10s. The private sales on the spot are ordinary to fine white Bengal at 9s. 9d. to 12s.; Ballam at 10s. 6d. to 10s. 9d.; Rangoon at 8s. 3d. to 8s. 6d.; Bassein at 8s. 6d.; Necransie at 9s. to 9s. 3d.; and Japan at 10s. 6d.

SAGO.—The market has been steady; of 35 boxes and 1,030 bags offered over half the latter sold at 16s. to 16s. 6d. for fair to good small. Flour steady.

SAPANWOOD.—Ceylon is firm and scarce; an offer of 36 tons was sold at £12 7s. 6d. to £12 10s. Siam is very scarce, and £20 per ton is demanded for fine quality. Manila has sold (15 tons) at £11 per ton.

CASUALTIES.

The Mica, from Java, whilst being taken into Greenock harbour, during the night of the 19th June, swerved past the entrance and fouled the Customs' steamer, and lost jibboom and ran aground; while in this position she was run into by the Wm. Connol (str.), from Glasgow, and was a good deal damaged.

The Royal Minstrel, of Workington, Off. No. 47,150, Price, sailed from Hiogo, on Oct. 17, for Falmouth, with rice, and has not since been heard of. She has been posted at Lloyd's as a missing vessel.

Cape Town, May 26.—The Tromp, Hoeksha, from Amsterdam to Batavia, put into Simon's Bay, 19, for repairs, having experienced heavy weather from April 18 to 22, in lat. 39 S., lon. 22 E.

The Challenge, Ritchie, which arrived at San Francisco June 1, from Swatow, reports having sustained considerable damage to stanchions and afterhouse during heavy gales, in from lon. 155 W. to 140 W.

NOTICES TO MARINERS.

Japan—Nipon—Simonoseki Strait.—Sunken Rock off West End of Takenoko Island.—Information has been received through Vice-Admiral Shadwell of the existence of a sunken rock, on which H.M.S. Ringdove struck on the 7th April, 1874, lying off the west point of Takenoko island, north side of the west entrance of Simonoseki strait. This danger (Ringdore rock) is a solitary rock, about 40 yards long and 15 yards broad, with 7 feet water on it and 5 to 7 fathoms around. From the rock Rokuren lighthouse bears North (easterly). West point of Takenoko island E.N.E., distant 1 1-3 cables. Cape Sizikuts S.E., 2½ cables. As outlying rocks were observed to the northward of the west point of Takenoko island, extending some distance from the shore, vessels are cautioned that in passing the west point of Takenoko island and Cape Sizikuts, they should not approach the shore within a distance of three cables.—Hydrographic Office, Admiralty, June, 1874.

China, East Coast—Formosa Strait.—Intended, and Temporary Light on Ocksen Island.—The Engineer's Office, Amoy, has given notice of the commencement of the erection of a lighthouse on the high, or west, Ocksen Island, from which, when completed, a light will be exhibited. The light will be a revolving light showing a white flash every minute, it will be elevated 286 feet above the level of the sea, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of twenty-four miles. The illuminating apparatus will be dioptric or by lenses, of the first order. The tower will be 64 feet high, round, and built of stone. Position, lat. 24 deg. 59 min. N., long. 119 deg. 28 min. E. During the progress of the works and until the revolving light is exhibited, a fixed white light of the sixth order will be exhibited, and which in clear weather should be seen from a distance of seven miles.—Hydrographic Office, Admiralty, June, 1874.

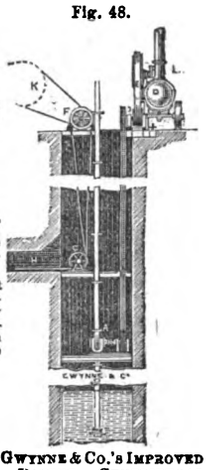
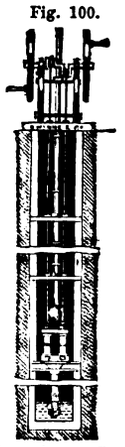
WYNNE & CO.'S PATENT PUMPING MACHINERY, S APPLIED TO EMPTYING DOCKS.
The whole arrangement very compact and self-contained. References to many applications combining unparalleled efficiency with moderate first cost will be given.

Fig. 48.



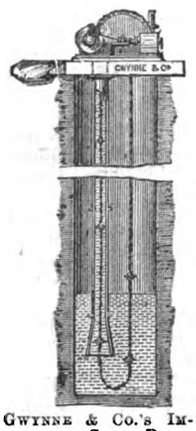
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT CENTRIFUGAL PUMP.
Fixed in a deep well, mine, or coal-pit, and driven by a portable or fixed engine fixed on the surface of the ground. Can be had of all sizes, and capable of raising any quantity of Water.

Fig. 100.



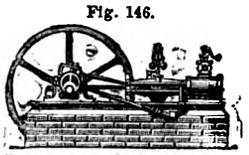
GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED DOUBLE BARREL DEEP-WELL PUMP,
For Hand-power, adapted for ordinary wells of any depth, of most careful construction, and on the most approved system.

Fig. 86.



GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED CHAIN PUMP, WORKED DIRECT BY STEAM ENGINE.
These Pumps work without valves or packing, and raise a considerable quantity of water. They will lift sand, mud, or grit without choking, and require only very inexpensive repairs.

Fig. 146.

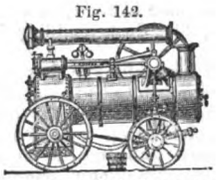


GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED HORIZONTAL HIGH-PRESSURE STEAM ENGINE.
With or without Expansion Gear, for economical working.
From 4 to 100-horse power.

Fig. 154.

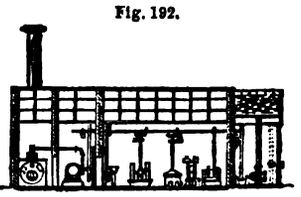
GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED CORNISH BOILERS WITH DOUBLE FLUES.
These boilers are simple and compact They are proved by hydraulic power to double the working pressure, are got up with the greatest care, and none but first-class materials are used in their construction. Estimates given for any size or shape of boiler.

Fig. 142.



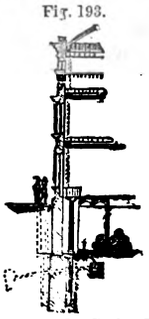
GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED PORTABLE STEAM ENGINE.
Light, simple in construction, durable, and economical, and very superior to "Agricultural" Engines.
From 2½ to 30-horse power.

Fig. 192.



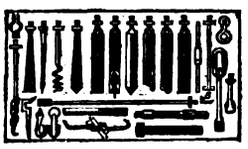
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED MACHINERY FOR PRESSING OIL FROM SEED, OLIVES, FAT, &c., &c.
The above shows an arrangement for a seed oil mill, and comprises, besides the requisite motive power, a crushing mill, pair of runners, heating apparatus, hydraulic press, and pumps. A Centrifugal Pump is added to lift water or any purpose required.

Fig. 193.



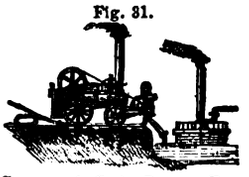
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED HYDRAULIC LIFTS.
Worked by the supply from a tank at the top of the building, or from main pipe of any water company's supply. Well adapted for lowering wine, or other produce, into or up from cellars, or may be modified for lowering bankers' and jewellers' safes into the strong rooms. The waste water runs into the sewer.
Prices on application.

Fig. 121.



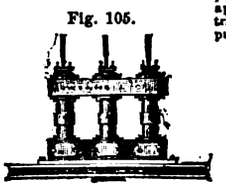
GWYNNE & Co.'S BORING TOOLS.
Of greatly improved construction. The figure represents those most frequently used, but the form and number vary much with the nature of the soil, and size of the bore hole.
G. & Co. can confidently recommend these as the best in the market.

Fig. 31.



GWYNNE & Co.'S PATENT PORTABLE PUMPING ENGINE AND FLOATING IRRIGATOR.
In which the Pumps are furnished with hose for distributing the water over the adjoining plantations. Made in all sizes.

Fig. 105.



GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED TREBLE BARREL LIFT AND FORCE PUMP.
These are made with gun metal barrels, copper piston rods, and brass valves. The workmanship and materials throughout are of the very best class, and comparison with those of other makers is challenged Gwynne & Co. make single and double-barrelled pumps upon the same principles.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

AND PILLS.—COUNSEL FOR THE DELICATE.—Those to whom seasons of changeable temperatures are protracted periods of trial should seek the earliest opportunity of removing all obstacles to good health. This cooling Ointment, perseveringly rubbed upon the skin, is the most reliable remedy for overcoming all diseases of the throat and chest. Diphtheria, relaxed tonsils, sore throat, swollen glands, ordinary catarrh, and bronchitis, usually prevailing at this season, may be arrested as soon as discovered, and every symptom banished by Holloway's simple and effective treatment. This Ointment and Pills are highly commended for the facility with which they successfully conquer influenza. They allay in an incredibly short time the distressing fever and teazing cough.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The Pacific mail brings advices from this port to the 23rd May; the French mail from London, March 27, arrived out on the 14th May, and the following P. and O. mail of April 3 was received on the 19th May. The Japan Herald contains the following summary of news:—

In our last mail summary we mentioned that the Formosan expedition had been countermanded. Such was the case, but those who believed that the affair was thus settled had not reckoned on the peculiarities of the Japanese. On the order to abandon the expedition reaching Nagasaki, which was the rendezvous, the soldiers refused to obey their officers, and even, it is said, threatened their General, Saigo, so that he left them, and took refuge in Kagosima. Thus left to themselves, the soldiers put to sea in defiance of their orders, and the ships proceeded to Amoy, and from thence to Formosa. A part of the expedition has already landed on that island. The Japanese Government, in order to prevent their ships being viewed as piratical, were obliged to stultify themselves, and adopt the responsibility of the expedition. What will be the upshot of the matter is unknown, but as yet no news has arrived of any collision between the Chinese and Japanese, although we know that the Chinese have been gathering both troops and men-of-war in the neighbourhood. Probably the local mandarins are awaiting instructions from head-quarters. Meanwhile, the Japanese have despatched a special Envoy to Peking, apparently with a view of deprecating the hostility of the Chinese. The various complications of the Formosan imbroglio caused, it is said, several resignations of Ministers, but we believe that only one (that of Kido) has been accepted.

The Japanese Government, with a view of showing how utterly false are the statements which appear in home papers of their liberal-mindedness, have just published a notification that the old notice boards defining the limits beyond which foreigners are not allowed to pass (and which have for years been allowed to fall into decay) have been re-erected. Latterly, also, in Yokohama, they have attempted to restrain foreigners from landing anywhere except at the Custom-houses. This, however, was at once put a stop to by the Foreign Ministers.

Amongst other items calculated to add to the growing causes of complaint between the Treaty powers and the Japanese, may be mentioned the seizure of a servant of one of the secretaries of the English Legation, and also the attack and forcible carrying off of an English Legation guard from the precincts of the Legation by the Japan police. Although the Minister for Foreign Affairs has personally apologised for both of these outrages, it seems necessary that measures should be taken to prevent their re-occurrence.

With a view of appeasing those who were clamorous for a Representative Assembly, the Government has issued rules for calling one; but as those having seats in it are all of them Government nominees, we cannot see that the people will derive much advantage from the deliberations of its members. It represents nobody but the Government itself.

But little has been doing in imports since our last, but large arrivals have tended to still further depress prices. The Silk market also exhibits a downward tendency, with but few transactions. The Tea season has opened briskly, at slightly lower rates than those of last season. Settlements amount to between 3,000 and 4,000 piculs.

A further instalment of the Shimonoseki Indemnity has been paid to England, France, and Holland. The share due to America is held in abeyance until instructions shall be received from Washington.

An important case against the agent of Reuter's Telegram Company, for damages arising from a non-delivery of a message, has been decided in the English Court substantially in favour of the defendants.

Shimadzu Saburo has been appointed Sadai-jin, an office next in rank to that of Prime Minister.

The meetings of the Amateur Athletic Association and of the Race Club have been held.

The railway between Kobe and Osaka was opened, without ceremony, on the 11th May.

NAGASAKI.

Our advices extend to the 9th May; the P. and O. mail from London March 20 arrived out on the 7th May. We take the following from the Nagasaki Express:—

The regatta was held on the 8th May. The day although free from rain could by no means be called a favourable one for the sport, as a strong, cool northwest wind blew during the greater part of the day, a most unusual circumstance at this port in the month of May. This, as a natural consequence, made a rough sea, and necessitated the removal of the rendezvous to the more sheltered spot, Nezumi-sima, or Rat Island; but even with this change the races had to be contested for under very unfavourable circumstances. Notwithstanding the unpropitious appearance of the weather, there was a very full attendance of visitors, both foreign and native, and a noticeable increase in the number of ladies who favoured the meeting with their presence. The fleet of boats which had brought down the spectators, appeared to be as numerous as on previous years, the amount received as subscriptions from the general public has been fully up to the usual average, and the number of events set down to be rowed for, and likewise the entries too, may be fairly taken as an indication that boating as a sport maintains its popularity. Races Nos. 1 and 2 fell through, on account of the boisterous weather, and the same fate befel race No. 10, for the Niphon Cup. The principal event of the day, the Governor's Cup and likewise the Akindo's Cup have again resulted in victories for the Club's white boat Bashful Maiden, late Laura, and in the latter race the majority of the crews exchanged, but without producing a reversal of the two boats' positions at the end of the race. The prizes were distributed to the winners by Miss Mackenzie, after the termination of the racing, and the speeches customary on such occasions were delivered.

The following sentences have been passed at the Judicial Court at Saga upon men who participated in the late insurrection in that ken :—A Samurai named Mine Josho, belonging to that ken, has been sentenced to hard labour for two years, and deprived of the rank of Samurai, for assisting the rebels and also inciting the Samurai in Fukahori to join them in the event of their attacking Nagasaki. Matsuda Noriyuki, also a Samurai of the same ken, for associating with the "Yukokuto," (i.e. company of patriotic rebels) and acting as the commander of the detachment from Ogi has been sentenced to a mitigated punishment of imprisonment with hard labour for seventy days, as he did not actually commit any overt act after he joined the movement. Yashimura Hikosaku has been punished with hard labour for forty days, as he conspired with the Yukokuta and came to Nagasaki as a spy for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of the regular troops had been landed at the latter place or not. Kaga Arata and thirteen other men who yielded to the persuasion of the rebels and marched to oppose the Imperial troops, have been brought before the Court, but as they did not actually resist them they have been set free after receiving a caution. Otsuka Kayemon, who visited several places by the order of the rebels, to ascertain whether the Imperial troops were on the march or not, has also been cautioned and dismissed. The same has been the case with Yeguchi Yotaro, a Samurai of Saga ken, Hiraishi Bunzo, a merchant at Ureshino, in the same ken, and another Samurai named Moriquanhei, in Nagasaki ken. Hideshima Yoshiyo, a Samurai of the Saga ken, who assisted to purchase arms from foreigners for the use of the rebels, and posted inflammatory notices has been deprived of the rank of Samurai.

An ex-Samurai, named Ida Shidzuka, a native of Shirakawa ken (Higo), has been sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for eighty days, for swindling. He came here ostensibly for the purpose of transacting mercantile business, and during his stay here stopped at Tsuruda Tori house, in Aburaya-machi. During his visit he deceived a Chinaman, named Chishiran, and from him obtained, under false pretences, fifteen pieces of silk stuff, and afterwards sold these articles to other men. In addition to this, he failed to pay his house rent, and as the estimated measure of the value of his delinquencies amounted to twenty-nine yen, he has been sentenced to the above punishment, but has not been deprived of the rank of Samurai, as he lodged the complaint against himself, fearing that he would have been arrested by the Government had he not confessed.

The four expeditionary vessels, consisting of the corvette Nitsin-kan, the gunboat Teibo-kan, and the two chartered Japanese steamers Meiku-maru and Mikuni-maru, which were detained here by rough weather, left for Amoy on the evening of the 3rd May. The two latter vessels conveyed the stores, &c., and about two thousand soldiers.

Amongst the passengers who arrived by the Pacific mail steamer Golden Age, on the 3rd May, from Yokohama, is Okubo, the Minister for Home Affairs. We learn that the object of his visit here was to have an interview with Okuma, the Minister of Finance, who is in charge of the Formosa Expedition, and to deliver to the latter some instructions which he brought with him. Okubo, accompanied by General Le Gendre, returned to Osaka on the 6th May, by the Japanese steamer Cowun-maru, and from thence they will proceed to Takio by another steamer. Okuma, chief, and Saigo, second in command, still remain here.

A fatal accident occurred on board the Japanese steamer Hosui-maru on the 3rd May. She left this port bound for Hiogo with a general cargo, but soon after she had turned the point, near Papenberg, one of her boilers burst. Five Japanese firemen were in the engine room a few minutes before the accident, but at the time it took place there was but one there, and he was killed almost instantaneously. The accident will necessitate her cargo being discharged in order that she may undergo repairs, which will take some six weeks to complete.

An officer named Moriyama, who went to Tokio in January last, by order of the governor, and returned here after receiving authority from the Educational Department, has, in conjunction with a teacher named Matsuo Tsunenori, from the College of Tokio, established a school here, for the preparation of teachers to be employed in the colleges in this ken. Twenty-five students finished their studies at the end of last March ; and a further number of eighty or ninety are now undergoing preparation.

The flag-ship Iron Duke left here on the 6th May for Yokohama. The French transport Rance, last from Hiogo, arrived on the 5th May and left again on the following day for Shanghai, en-route for home. We hear that her departure for the south has been hastened owing to the receipt of news that affairs in the vicinity of Tonquin are wearing a serious aspect.

The American steamer Shaftesbury has been sold to the Japanese Government, and has changed her flag. We understand that she is to be employed for the present in the Formosa expedition.

A severe shock of earthquake of rather lengthened duration was felt on the morning of the 5th May and aroused most of the residents from their slumbers.

REPORT OF THE "MESSAGERIES MARITIMES."

We have already announced the dividend declared at the recent meeting of shareholders, and we now lay before our readers a brief résumé of the various headings of the Company's Report for 1873, which has been published in the Journal Officiel at Paris.

Matériel Naval.—There is a nett increase of f.440,136 under this head, which includes the cost price of ships afloat, &c., as well as the amount expended on vessels in course of construction and being fitted out. The value of ships afloat is increased by f.1,061,568, after making allowance for depreciation, &c., and for vessels which have ceased to form a portion of the Company's fleet. The increase is due to the two large steamers, the Irawaddy and the Anadyr, having been completed and put on the Shanghai line. Five other steamers have been fitted with compound engines, and two of these five have been lengthened. There are still two large vessels on the stocks, the Orénoque and the Djemnah ; the former is for the Brazil line, and the latter, which will be ready by the end of the current year, is for the Indian and China line. Improved machinery will shortly be provided for the Indus, Donnaï, Dupleix, and other vessels. On Dec. 31 last the Company had, afloat and on the stocks, sixty-six vessels of 23,150-horse power and 173,079 tons.

Approvisionnements of every description at the various agencies show an increase of f.191,684, mainly attributable to a larger consumption of coal and the rise in the price of that important article.

Outillage, mobilier et apparaux, immeubles et etablissements.—Under this heading there is an increase of f.325,233, which is chiefly owing to the acquisition of real property at Ciotat, Port Said, and other places. Several small steamers also have been provided to facilitate embarkation and disembarkation at Constantinople, Port Said, and Hong Kong. An iron wharf, too, has been erected at Saigon.

Trésor créancier.—At the end of 1872 this debt to the State amounted to 4,203,333f., and on December 31, 1873, to 3,152,500f., showing a decrease of 1,050,833f., which is caused by the payment of the ninth annual instalment.

Fonds d'amortissements.—The reserves under this heading, to provide for depreciation of material, have advanced from 48,910,343f. to 49,357,543f., an increase of 447,200f.

Under Fonds d'assurances a brief allusion is made to the melancholy circumstances of the loss of the Nil, last March.

Valeurs de caisse et de portefeuille show a decrease of 4,406,421f., an absorption of the disposable resources of the company, which is naturally explained by the increased activity of its operations, and the enhanced price of all necessaries.

Exploitation.—The vessels of the Company have performed voyages amounting to 603,632 marine leagues (after making certain deductions) as compared with 515,187 leagues in the previous year, which is an increase of 88,445 leagues, due to increased services in Brazil and China, between Marseilles and London, &c. The steamers of the Company, taking them altogether, have attained an average speed of 10·15 knots.

As regards traffic statistics, 121,312 passengers were conveyed on all the lines in the year ; 3,472,000 packages of merchandise, representing a weight of 285,257 tons, specie, &c., f.197,682,618, which figures show an increase of 9½, 18, and 19½ per cent. under the respective heads over those of the preceding year. The commercial result of the year exceeds that of 1872 by a little more than 13 per cent., or taking the different services, 13¾ per cent. in the Mediterranean, 4½ per cent. in India and China, and 34 per cent. on the Atlantic, where a second line has been added to the Brazil and La Plata service, 4 per cent. per league has been gained by the conveyance of passengers on the Indo-China lines, and 6½ per cent. in the Mediterranean. The directors promise to complete as soon as possible vessels more and more suited to the traffic, large steamers in fact of the Senegal type, which has been favourably received by passengers and the mercantile world.

Déspenses d' exploitation.—Owing chiefly to the high price of coal, the working expenses have increased more than 6 per cent. per league ; agency charges have remained about the same, but the Suez Canal tolls have been a serious item, amounting as they did in 1873 to f.1,707,658, which is reckoned to be an overcharge of no less than f.678,574.

The Report goes at some length into the Litige avec la Compagnie du Canal de Suez, into the details of which it is unnecessary for us to enter here, and the directors express a sincere hope that they may never have anything more to say about the matter to their shareholders.

Liquidation de l'Exercice, 1873.—The receipts of every nature amounted to f.52,444,758, and the expenditure (including deductions of insurance, &c.) to f.46,357,020, leaving a surplus of f.6,087,738, from which, however, f.1,026,025 have to be deducted for the interest of obligations. The nett surplus, therefore, amounted to f.5,061,713, which is appropriated as follows: 5 per cent., or f.253,085, are carried to the reserve fund, f.4,800,000 are devoted to the payment of a dividend of f.40 per share, of which f.15 were paid on account in December, and the balance of f.8,627 is carried forward to the 1874 profit and loss account.

KASHGAR AND CHINA.

In the treaties into which we have just entered with Yakoob Beg, the Atalik Ghazee or Ameer of Kashgar, the independence of Kashgar is distinctly recognised, and the engagements there entered into were with the Ameer, his heirs and successors. Friendly relations have also been established between Kashgar and Russia, and Kashgar and Turkey, but Lord George Hamilton in replying to a question put by Sir Charles Dilke upon this subject, referred to a conversation that took place in 1869 between Sir Alexander Buchanan and Prince Gortchakoff, in which the latter represented the difficulty of entering into diplomatic relations with the Atalik Ghazee, in consequence of the treaties existing between Russia and China, which precluded the Emperor of Russia from fully recognising the independence of a successful insurgent against the authority of the Chinese Emperor. The commercial treaty between Kashgar of 1872 though it indicates that Russia has no hostile intentions against the Atalik Ghazee, may not therefore be sufficient to ensure for him the assistance of Russia in maintaining the independence which he won eleven years ago, and the advantage to Russia of remaining upon friendly terms with the Government of China may be sufficient to prevent her from interfering in the pending quarrel. That China will not relinquish Kashgar without a struggle is certain unless she is overawed by the assistance which the Ameer may be able to obtain from foreign sources; and what would be the result of a contest between the small army which Yakoob Beg could bring into the field, if left to himself, and the almost inexhaustible forces of China, it is not difficult to foresee. It is true that the soldiers of Yakoob Bey would probably be better disciplined and made of better stuff than the cowardly ruffians, commanded by treacherous and venal mandarins, who form the Chinese Army, and that man for man they would be infinitely superior, but the hordes of China would be able by mere force of numbers entirely to swamp the army of the Ameer. The Kashgarians, moreover, would be fighting for their independence, in fact for their actual political existence, and to wipe out the stain and avenge the dishonour of their conquest in 1756 by the Chinese. They might therefore be expected to sell themselves as dearly as possible; on the other hand, the Chinese Government, as the Russian Professor Vassilieff points out in an article communicated to the Times a few days ago, has the greatest possible interest in recovering its lost province. "What obstacles," the professor says, will daunt Chinese vanity? Neither time nor expense nor distance can check it. Even though Turkestan brought no profit to the Imperial Treasury, what right had it to secede, and reject the advantages of Celestial rule? But the Chinese are revengeful as well as vain when conscious of their strength. The legions will pour forth. Let us assume that at the first encounter they will be routed; what does that matter? China will never want for troops, let there be only no refusal to take volunteers." Chinese vanity and Chinese revenge and rapacity are known to be insatiable, and actuated by these there can be little doubt that no expenditure of life will be considered too great to effect the restoration of the revolted province. The Chinese Government has, moreover, as the professor notices, shown recently a disposition to improve her army, and to adopt the inventions of modern military science. Her soldiers have been, and would be again, in the event of war, drilled and disciplined by European or American officers, and be supplied with European arms, and the reconquest of Eastern Turkestan would undoubtedly be effected.

CONSULAR JURISDICTION AND THE SUEZ CANAL.

Mr. Baillie Cochrane (says The Times) has called the attention of the House of Commons to "the difficulties which arise from the Consular Jurisdiction in Egypt, more especially as it affects our relations with the Suez Canal Company." On this a strange, confused debate ensued, the question of Consular Jurisdiction being mixed up with the question of the Suez Canal. Both are of the utmost importance, but they have not much to do with each other; for, whatever may become of the "capitulations," it is certain that the Canal, from its international character and the magnitude of the interests involved, must always be managed diplomatically. The subject of the Consular Jurisdiction in Egypt and throughout the Turkish Empire may be considered without reference to this undertaking. Its importance increases yearly as European genius and enterprise, and, it may be added, European rascality pour into the East. In great cities like Constantinople and Alexandria, veritable Babels of diverse nationality, there is no confidence in the administration of the law, civil or criminal. No man who does business can tell into what obscure Court, and before what questionable personage, he may not be dragged. The debtor or the wrongdoer will take refuge in the Court of his Consul, who is, perhaps, his own friend. In any case, the Consul has a natural feeling in favour of his countrymen, and this is sometimes displayed with effrontery, as if to be a partisan were the best proof of being a patriot. The reply of Mr. Bourke to Mr. Cochrane gives hope that the good sense of the European Powers will allow a more just and useful system to be instituted. What was proposed, and what, in one form or another, is likely to be finally accepted, is a mixed Tribunal, in which European and Egyptian Judges shall sit administering justice on principles which will satisfy the European Governments, and having jurisdiction over the whole body of European residents. An International Commission sat at Constantinople, and its recommendations were accepted by this country, but rejected in part by France. The French Government presented a scheme which was also accepted by England. The German war put an end to the negotiations for a time. Last year a Conference was held at Constantinople, when the Viceroy and the Representatives of the various Powers assented to the scheme of France. Since that time France has raised another difficulty of detail, but the Queen's Government hopes that this may be overcome, and the system receive the general assent of the European nations.

The Hour says that it has been made manifest that the question of the Suez Canal is one which it is impossible to regard as settled, and which it will not be practicable always to shelve. The fact that it is not even settled what should be done in time of war—for no arrangements have been made for the neutralisation of the Canal—is enough to prove the necessity for some international agreement being come to on the matter. To this subject Her Majesty's Ministers are doubtless giving their attention, and they will ere long be prepared with a distinct policy under which the international character of the Canal will be ensured. In the meantime the suggestion thrown out by the member for Hythe that England might secure influence in the management of the Canal by providing capital to widen and render it permanent, deserves at least to be taken into serious consideration. There is no doubt that at present the Canal is not so secure as a highway from the West to the East as it might be easily made. By widening and deepening it it would be possible to avoid the danger, which is by no means fictitious or trivial, of the Canal ceasing to be available for its present purposes. There are other matters—as we have seen—which ought also to be discussed; and the whole position of the Canal, its management in the future, the means to be taken to ensure its permanence, the judicial instrumentality for settling disputes, and the neutralisation of the Canal in time of war, are all points which must be taken into careful consideration.

The Standard says the Canal, our Government has always contended, belongs to an Egyptian company—the Khedive himself representing nearly two-thirds of the shares. As a body the company is subject at present to the Egyptian laws, whatever may be the nationality of the managing director, or of the principal shareholders. Such being the case, we might suppose that the French Government would be no less desirous than our own to come into the arrangement which has been proposed—an arrangement which clears up all doubts as to the jurisdiction in mixed cases, and which is certainly as fair for one Power as for another, supposing them all to be equally disinterested. This question is getting every day of greater importance, and presses for a solution. The Suez Canal is an anomaly, which may any day become dangerous. Its epicene character, half public half private; its double purposes, part commercial, part political; its combination of the trading speculation with territorial dominion, render its continued existence, undefined and unrestricted, a very serious menace to the peace of Europe.

Literature.

In the Oriental for June there appears, under the head of "Unrequited Service," a paper on the discovery of tea in Assam some forty years since by Lieutenant (now a retired Colonel) Charlton, of the Bengal Army. The writer complains that beyond receiving the gold medal of the Agricultural Society of Bengal, Colonel Charlton has gained nothing by the discovery. In a paper entitled "China" the writer displays an interest in China and Chinese matters amounting almost to enthusiasm. He evidently is not of opinion that his countrymen share his views on the subject, for he writes, "Not only are Chinese affairs completely unknown to the general body of Englishmen, but the few who know anything on the subject vary decidedly in the feelings they entertain towards the inhabitants of the Central Land." The writer thinks that there is a wonderful unanimity of feeling, however, among Englishmen upon one point, that is in the consideration of the natives of China as a distinctly inferior race to themselves, and whom a kind Providence has created, multiplied, and preserved for the special advantage of British commerce and industry. The progress made by the Chinese is pointed out in this paper, and if it were not that for every word of praise the writer can bestow upon the Chinese an equal amount of dirt is thrown upon the Western intruder who has thrust his ideas upon the Celestial in an obtrusive and impertinent manner, the paper might be read with greater interest.

The Gentleman's Magazine for July completes the first volume of an entirely new series, and the contents are very interesting. Mr. Francillon's "Olympia" is continued, together with the "Water-side Sketches" and "Men and Manners in Parliament." This latter paper is very readable, dealing as it does with the peculiarities of members of the House of Commons. A further instalment of a "Rambling Story," by Mary Cowden Clarke, is also given, and Mr. Blanchard Jerrold contributes a chapter on the late Mr. Van de Weyer.

Mr. Frederic Marshall, in an article in the Fortnightly Review, entitled "Justice Abroad," describes the manner in which ex-territorial privileges and Consular jurisdiction were first obtained from Turkey in the sixteenth century, and proceeds to say that:—

Analogous conditions have been successively extracted by various means from Persia, Muscat, Siam, and Japan. In all these countries English subjects are now amenable to their Consul only as regards disputes between themselves, and to the tribunals of the nationality of the defendant in disputes between Englishmen and natives. In China we go further still, and refer all cases in which our countrymen are interested, either with each other or with Chinese, to our Consuls, who "if they cannot arrange them amicably, shall request the assistance of the local authorities and decide equitably." In the same way and at the same time we have everywhere obtained that our goods shall be imported into all these countries at duties of either three or five per cent.

He then depicts the case of the Japan treaty under the designation of Gobi:—

The Government of the Gobi Desert wishes to present some observations to the Government of England with reference to the treaty which at present binds them to each other.

At the time when that treaty was first agreed the inhabitants of Gobi knew absolutely nothing of European habits, laws, or principles, and the only arms they had were bows and arrows. They were as weak as they were ignorant. This being their condition, a British war-ship sailed up their great river one day, fifty years ago, and its captain said, "I have come to make a treaty." The Gobi Government of that period replied, with natural indignation, "We don't want a treaty; we don't know you: and if you don't go away immediately down the river, we shall send out warriors in a canoe to destroy you." Thereupon, as history relates, the captain shot at the peaceful inhabitants of Gobi city, killed twenty-nine of them, and set fire to the palace of the king. The arguments thus employed did not permit either resistance or discussion; the Government of Gobi consented to make a treaty; but as it had no idea what a treaty was, or what ought to be put into it, the Government accepted, with its eyes shut, the form of treaty which the captain was pleased to indicate. Then the captain went away again, carrying his treaty with him. We burnt the people he had killed, and we rebuilt the palace he had burnt.

A year afterward another ship appeared. The captain landed, and with him came an Englishman, who said he was the Consul, and that he had come to judge disputes between our subjects and his countrymen. We did not understand him, but he told us it was in the treaty, so we did not say anything for fear of cannon.

Then more Englishmen began to come to Gobi, bringing with them opium and brandy; our people bought these things from them, and became, in consequence, very wicked. So the Government told the Consul that it would not allow any more such things to be brought to Gobi, because they did damage to our people; but the Consul laughed, and said, "It is in the treaty." The Government looked again at the treaty (which it had never comprehended), and a saw a clause in it which gave Englishmen the right to bring into Gobi and to sell all manner of goods, on condition of paying to the Government three per cent. Directly the Government understood this it complained to the Consul, who laughed again with much contempt, and said, "It is in the treaty." At last the Government got very angry, and told the Consul it would break so abominable and unjust a treaty, but the Consul laughed once more, very contemptuously indeed; pointed to the ship, and said "Bombardment."

So the Government discovered that Gobi had become a sort of property of this Consul, and it was very much annoyed and felt ashamed. But, as the treaty was only made for twenty years, the Government decided to wait in patience, and to avoid being shelled, with the design of putting an end to the horrible treaty as soon as the twenty years expired. When that time came the Government told the Consul (it was not always the same Consul, but all the holders of the post were alike) that the treaty was finished, and that he could go away. History tells us that the Consul laughed more violently than ever, and that he exclaimed to our Minister of Foreign Affairs (he had obliged us to create a functionary of that name), "Treaty finished! Treaties never finish. A treaty once made goes on for ever. Besides, the clause you speak of says only that the treaty shall be revised. I am quite ready to revise it." Our Government looked at the treaty once more, found out that this was true, and said, with a deep groan, "Well, if we can't put an end to it, let us revise it; so strike out those two clauses about Consular jurisdiction and the right of importing everything at a duty of three per cent." Thereat the Consul laughed so much that we hoped he would be suffocated, but he came round again, and answered, "Poor foolish people, revision gives no rights to you, it only gives rights to us; the reason being that we have ships and that you have not." So we had to sign another treaty, confirming all the old conditions and adding many new ones. After this the English became singularly insolent and brutal; they all treated us as if we were despicable and contemptible; the newspapers they published in our country were full of abuse of us in very vulgar language; but the jurisdiction clause did not permit us to interfere, and when we spoke about it to the Consul he said that it was "all right."

After a time there arose in Gobi a desire for instruction; we opened schools; we learned to read English books; we sent young Gobians abroad to study European teaching, and, by degrees, we found out many things of which we had not suspected the existence. Profiting by this first insight into knowledge, we imitated Europe, and silently, without telling anybody, we instituted a Commission to examine into the nature of the relations between European States. That Commission went to Paris and to London, and to many other places, under pretence of buying brandy (for the Consul was so hard on us that we did not dare to let him know what we were about), and, two months ago, it presented its report to the Government of Gobi.

Thus far we have spoken here historically, as slaves of the English treaty; now we are going to speak morally, as becomes a free and independent nation.

When first you sought us out you found us powerless and ignorant; we understood absolutely nothing of the demands which you addressed to us; we possessed neither ships nor forts, nor troops nor guns; we were as unable to appreciate the conditions which you called upon us to admit as we were incapable of resisting them by arms. Blindly and impotently we accepted them; in our weakness and inexperience we could but yield; you obtained our signature to stipulations of which we in no way comprehended the injustice, the gravity, or the consequences. We submitted to the dictation of superior strength and superior knowledge; we allowed you to impose on us a customs' tariff for your goods, and to deprive us of all jurisdiction over your citizens within our territory.

For many years we continued to remain ignorant of the true signification of these events. So long as we were isolated from the world, so long as we had no opportunity of examining not only the material causes of the prosperity of states, but, still more, the motives and the objects which guide their policy, it was natural that we should rest silent under engagements which, though we suspected them to be monstrously unjust, we were unable to measure by the standard which you yourselves apply.

Now, however, our position has become different.

We have learned that absolute independence of interior action, and absolute equality of exterior relationship are rights which are claimed by and accorded to every State in Europe and America, however small its population, however limited its influence, and whatever be its form of Government. We have thus acquired the proof that the sentiment of universal justice exists, and is applied everywhere without hesitation and without discussion.

It has become evident to this Government that the one object of Great Britain in forcing it to accept this treaty has simply been to render trade more advantageous for English citizens. In other and clearer words, we have been constrained to adopt international obligations which every Christian people would reject with anger and disdain, to assume a position of absolute inferiority, to abandon our sovereign right of equality and independence, in order that a certain number of your traders may make a larger profit out of their transactions with our people. Reduced to its reality, defined in its true sense, this is what our treaty means.

And you tell us that, as we have once signed this treaty, it must go on for ever. You inform us that a signature extorted from our ignorance and our fear is to bind us as long as our two nations last. You point to Turkey as a precedent, and you assert that the "principles" of Consular Jurisdiction and cheap tariffs are admitted by all Eastern countries, and that we must bear our fate like all the others.

We might have gone on bearing it in silence, as we have done for fifty years, if, amongst the information which we have recently acquired, there were not one more fact which we have not mentioned yet. We have discovered that there is in Europe a force more powerful than gunboats, of which Ministers and Governments have to take account, which influences emperors and kings, before which even Consuls tremble. That force is public opinion, and we place ourselves in its succouring hand.

We claim to fix our tariffs without dictation from abroad; we claim to judge the crimes committed by foreigners in our territory; we claim the power of punishing Englishmen who insult us, and we entreat public opinion to grant these claims. If England thinks that our laws are too barbarous to be applied to English subjects, we shall presume to ask, modestly and gently, that Englishmen will be pleased to stay away from us until we have civilised ourselves sufficiently to be worthy of their contact. In the name of the pride which we now know that nations cherish, do not let Europeans ill treat us and make money out of us both at once.

For these motives we declare—not to a Consul whom we fear and hate, but to the entire British nation—that we will not renew our present treaty, and that if England sends a fleet to frighten us into submission we will accept destruction rather than injustice.

What should we reply to a proclamation such as this? Should we go to war upon it? Should we send a fleet to Gobi to force it to renew engagements of which the whole history is a shame? Or should we wake up to a sense of the ill that we have done, own that the Government of Gobi is right, and that we are wrong, and declare that we will have no more of this?

The July part of All the Year Round contains a paper entitled "Chinese Shops and Shop-signs," which gives more information on that subject than we remember to have seen brought together in so brief a space. The article appears to be, in some measure, a compilation, but the writer has been careful to put forward nothing but what can be corroborated by any one who is at all familiar with the interiors of Chinese cities, and his remarks about Peking kite shops will probably be new to many people. The system of shop-signs and sign-boards is clearly explained, and some quaint examples are given of the peculiarities of the Celestials in this respect.

Mr. Duffield Jones, formerly of the China Consular Service, contributes "Notes about Tea" in the current number of Good Words. His main object, he tells us, is "to offer some explanatory remarks with regard to the names by which some of the principal varieties of the leaf are known among the Chinese." He also glances "briefly at a few incidental matters appertaining to the tea-trade," and amongst other things he says a few words on the subject of home adulteration. Considering that Mr. Jones' article must have been in type when Mr. James Barringer gave his evidence before the Committee of the House of Commons, to which we alluded in a leading article of our last issue, it is somewhat curious to notice a coincidence between his remarks and that gentleman's revelations. Mr. Jones further tells us that a friend of his once saw a notable lot of "green tea from Canton without any tea-leaves in it at all, the precious importation being entirely made of some other leaf. This tea is said to have been made in Macao, and was sold in London and shipped to the Continent."

Sir Samuel Baker contributes a valuable paper on "Slavery and the Slave Trade" to the July number of Macmillan's. There is also a notice of Mr. Holman Hunt's "Shadow of Death," and a paper on Jules Michelet in the current number, in addition to the Irish story "Castle Daly." Dean Stanley's addresses on Bunyan, and on Arnold and Rugby are likewise reproduced.

Besides the article on "Chinese Railways," on which we have commented at some length, the last number of the China Review contains several papers and notes of interest and value, the most noticeable of which are a painstaking dissertation on the "Tablet of Yü," by Mr. C. T. Gardner, of the Canton Consulate, and a paper on the "Geographical Distribution of Commercial Products in Kwang-tung," by Mr. F. Hirth, Ph.D. Mr. C. F. R. Allan's translation of the "Young Prodigy" and Mr. Oxenham's "History of Hankow and Hanyang" are concluded in this number. We notice, with pleasure, the industry of Consular officers in supporting this magazine with valuable contributions; they cannot turn their spare time to better account.

The July number of the Cornhill contains a paper entitled "Leih-tsze," by the Rev. F. S. Turner, which we fear will not prove so attractive as it deserves, to the general run of magazine readers. The commencement of his article is written in a style which is, to use an Americanism, rather "played out," and we are much surprised to find him speaking of the Yellow River as the Hoang-ho. We fancy that few Sinologues nowadays would think of writing the name thus. Leih-tsze, we find, lived in the feudal age of China, when the area drained by the Yellow River was divided into a hundred petty kingdoms, dukedoms and baronies, practically independent. Some 200 years after his death a conqueror from the west of this agglomeration of petty States welded them all into a despotic Empire. Wishing to obliterate the memory of everything that could dim his own glory, "he resolved to commit to the flames every memorial of the past, in order that the history of humanity might begin with his reign." This book of Leih-tsze, of which Mr. Turner writes, was one of those which escaped. We fear that no great gain has resulted to the human race from this fact, for not much can be said in favour of "the naturalistic philosophy of which Leih-tsze is a representative," though it is quite true that "it can do us no harm to learn whither it led them and what it ended in."

Naval and Military.

The following appointments to the China station have been made:—Lieut. E. P. Hocker and Surgeon S. F. Hamilton to the Avon; Lieut. C. H. Herring, Engineers W. H. Croxall, J. Bolas, and W. Hair, Surgeon C. W. Magrane, and Assistant-Paymaster C. W. Penny, to the Curlew; Commander the Hon. E. S. Dawson and Lieut. A. E. M'Murdo, to the Dwarf; Commander R. H. Harris to the Elk; Assistant-Engineer R. G. Wilby (for disposal), and Surgeons M. Greavy (for service at sick-quarters at Yokohama), and N. F. Fitzmaurice (for disposal) to the Iron Duke; Lieut. A. H. O. P. Lowe, Engineers C. M. Johnson and M. G. Moore, Assistant-Engineer J. Fraser, Surgeon A. W. Flood, and Assistant-Paymaster T. S. Harrison to the Thistle; and Dr. W. J. Rankin to the Naval Hospital, Hong Kong.

Captain C. W. Lloyd, of the 16th Regiment, brigade-major in the Straits Settlements, will probably be shortly relieved.

The Victor Emmanuel, which is to take the place of the Princess Charlotte as depôt ship at Hong Kong, Captain George H. Parkin, steamed out of Portsmouth harbour to Spithead on the 5th inst., and, after being swung under steam to ascertain the deviation of her compass, sailed for Hong Kong with orders to call in at Plymouth Sound on her way down Channel. The following naval and military officers and troops embarked at Portsmouth:—

Commander Hon. E. S. Dawson, to join Her Majesty's ship Thistle; Commander Robert H. Harris, the Elk; Lieut. E. P. Hocker, the Avon; Lieut. A. H. O. P. Lowe, the Thistle; Lieut. C. H. Herring, the Curlew; Lieut. Aston E. H. M'Murdo, the Dwarf; Assistant-Paymaster Harrison, the Thistle; Assistant-Paymaster Penney, the Curlew; Navigating Sub-Lieut. Barnard, the Curlew; Surg. W. Magrane, the Curlew; Surg. S. F. Hamilton, the Avon; Surg. W. F. Rankin, Hong Kong Naval Hospital; Surg. M. U. Greany, Yokohama Hospital; Engineers W. H. Coxall and W. Hair, the Iron Duke; Engineer C. Johnson, the Thistle; Engineers J. Bolas and E. Norrington, the Curlew; Engineer M. G. Moore, the Thistle; Engineer Hughes, the Iron Duke; Engineer Welby, the Curlew; Engineer Fraser, the Thistle; Gunner Wingate, the Curlew; Gunner Kilby, the Dwarf; Boatswain Allen, the Iron Duke. For passage to Singapore.—1st Battalion, 10th Infantry, Capt. W. Whitla, Lieuts. Lang and Elliott, eighty-nine non-commissioned officers and men, with six women and fourteen children. For passage to Hong Kong.—Capt. Ellaby, Royal Artillery; Lieutenant Johnson, 80th Regiment, ninety-two non-commissioned officers and men, two women, and two children; Army Hospital Corps, Surgeon Alexander and Mrs. Alexander, ten men, with one woman and one child. For passage to Singaapore.—Army Hospital Corps, nine men, one woman, and one child. Supernumeraries, seamen, Marine Artillery, and Marine Light Infantry, to join Her Majesty's ships on the station, about 600.

The manufacture of the 80-ton gun which is now going on at the Royal Gun Factories, Woolwich, excites considerable interest, the gun being more than twice the size of any one at present in existence. The steel block from which the inner tube or lining is to be made is believed to be the largest piece of steel ever produced. It is twenty-five feet in length and twenty-five inches in diameter at the thickest end, but is tapered off towards the muzzle, where the strain of the explosion becomes less. It weighs about twelve tons. The trunnion-piece, which weighs eighteen tons, has also been manufactured and is the largest largest forging ever produced at the Arsenal.

The following officers, whose last period of service was in China, have received appointments as under:—Captain J. H. E. Baird, (in the Juno from 1870 to 1873) to the Swiftsure, 14 guns, 800-horse power, Mediterranean; Sub-Lieutenant H. J. Jeffreys (in the Iron Duke from 1872 to 1873) to the Sultan, 12 guns, 1,200-horse power, Channel Squadron; Navigating-Lieutenant J. A. Jones (in the Ringdove from 1867 to 1873) to the Donegal, 30 guns, 800-horse power, Portsmouth; and Mr. G. Davenport, second-class boatswain (in the Juno from 1871 to 1873) to the Royal Adelaide, flagship, Devonport.

During the year ending 31st December, 1872, there were held, at home and abroad, 14,290 courts-martial; viz., 99 general, 7,532 garrison and district, and 6,659 regimental and detachment, being in the proportion of 78 courts-martial per 1,000 effectives. The actual proportion per 1,000 of men tried was less, as some were arraigned twice to four times each. The number of men tried was only 12,024. Two courts-martial were quashed, and the sentences of six others were not confirmed.

An order has been received at the Government dockyards from the Admiralty stating that at the election of members of Parliament for dockyard boroughs all the registered electors employed in the dockyards are to be granted a half-holiday on the day of polling without their pay being deducted. Electors belonging to the dockyard who have county votes are also to be granted a half-holiday on the day of polling without loss of pay.

The Imperial German screw corvette Gazelle, 8, Baron Von Schleinis commander, from Kiel, arrived in Plymouth Sound on the 28th ult. She is bound for Madeira and the Indian Ocean, to observe the transit of Venus. She will take in a supply of coal, and leave in a few days for her destination.

Captain John K. E. Baird, late in command of H.M.S. Juno, on the China station, has been appointed to H.M.S. Swiftsure in the Mediterranean, vice the Hon. William J. Ward.

The command of the 9th Lancers has become vacant by the retirement, on half-pay, of Colonel Fiennes.

THE HEALTH OF THE CHINA FLEET.

The annual report on the health of the navy—a massive Blue-book—has just been published. We give a summary of the report relating to the China station:—

The squadron comprised 22 vessels, and there was a marine detachment in Japan. The returns are incomplete, but the force reported on is estimated at 2,950. The total number of cases entered on the sick-list was 4,743. Seventeen proved fatal, and 126 were invalided—a reduction in both. In the febrile group of general diseases 368 cases appear. On the whole, however, the squadron was very healthy, its death-rate being the lowest on record. A single case of small-poxoccurred in the person of an officer of the Iron Duke, flagship, at Hong Kong. Five cases of dengue occurred in the Elk, three among officers, and two among men. The disease appeared in the form of an epidemic at Amoy, and three out of the five cases were contracted there. The fourth case was contracted in Takow, Formosa, and a large number of the Chinese were affected by it. The fifth patient was also believed to have taken the disease in Formosa. There was a single case of enteric fever in the marine detachment in Japan. The cases of simple continued fever numbered 217, of which one proved fatal, that of a marine on board the Zebra. The ships in which the largest number of cases occurred were the Barrosa (88), the Princess Charlotte (22), and the Ringdove (19). The outbreak on board the Barrosa was while the ship was in dock at Aberdeen; and the surgeon (Mr. W. Anderson) says, "I have no doubt whatever that this outbreak was mainly attributable to exposure to the intense heat of the sun, whether on shore or under the awning on board, and to the heat and insufficient ventilation caused by the overcrowding of the crew on board during the time the ship was in dock in a vitiated atmosphere; and I would strongly urge that in future when it may become necessary to dock a ship at Aberdeen during the summer months, the crew should be transferred to a hulk, and that only those whose presence is absolutely necessary for the safety of the ship should be left on board." The cases in the Ringdove occurred at Shanghai and Hong Kong, and were due in different cases to exposure, fatigue, errors in diet, atmospheric vicissitudes, and similar common causes. There were sixty-six cases of ague and seventy-seven of remittent fever under treatment in the squadron during the year. The ships in which they prevailed most were the Barrosa, the Cadmus, the Juno, and the Zebra. Many of the cases on board the latter were contracted on the coast of Borneo, where the men were exposed to malarious influences while away on duty in boats. In the constitutional group of general diseases there were 659 cases. Those of rheumatism numbered 197. There were 145 cases of various forms of diseases of the nervous system, one of which proved fatal. Eighteen cases of sunstroke were under treatment, and two (from the Thistle contracted at Hankow) were invalided. A case of heat apoplexy—that of a boy of the Cadmus at Shanghai—proved fatal. In connection with this case, the surgeon (Mr. J. E. Dyas) remarks:—"With hardly an exception the deaths from heat apoplexy in Shanghai might with more correctness be classified as deaths from drink poison. I here use the term 'drink poisoning' instead of alcoholism, for the simple reason that alcohol is the least hurtful ingredient in the liquor sold in the grog-shops which crowd the disreputable quarters of these settlements. Gin can be bought at various places in Hongkew for $2 per dozen, bottles included. In the deadly mixture of sulphuric acid, kerosene oil, and bang, which can be sold for this price, alcohol must count for very little. I am told that Hongkew gin is an excellent blister for horses." Of diseases of the circulatory system there were 36 cases, and 1 of organic disease of the heart proved fatal. It occurred in the person of a seaman of the Zebra. The cases of disease of the respiratory system numbered 410, and of the digestive system 945, 4 proving fatal. Three cases of dysentery, and 18 of diarrhœa occurred on board the Hornet while at Saigon. The assistant-surgeon (Dr. W. H. Colahan) attributed them to chills. "Water," he says, "very frequently gets credit for being the vehicle by which the dysenteric poison gains admission to the system. In our case, however, it cannot be set down to this cause, for nothing but condensed water was used whilst at Saigon, and for some considerable time previously, and our men had not been on leave, so that it seems reasonable to infer that its channel of introduction to the system was the respiratory surface." There were 102 cases of diarrhœa in the Iron Duke, most of them occurring in Japan, and especially at Yokohama. The staff-surgeon does not think the disease was attributable to the water. "I have examined (he says) that of Hong Kong, Nagasaki, and Yokohama; there is not a shade of impurity in any of them, at least nothing that permanganate of potash will show. Nagasaki and Yokohama showed rather an unusual quantity of the chlorides, ten grains at least to the gallon, which might be owing to carelessness in bringing it off, or soakage through the floating tank. The inhabitants of Nagasaki speak very highly of the water there. At Yokohama I was told, on shore, that the water is slightly brackish. Diarrhœa is not very prevalent at either place. All the waters are beautifully clear and transparent." Of diseases of the urinary, &c., system there were 321 cases; of the organs of locomotion, 10; of the cellular tissue and cutaneous system, 1,032; of unclassed diseases 72. Six cases of delirium tremens occurred in the squadron, viz., two in the persons of officers, two in petty officers, one in a non-commissioned officer of marines, and one in a seaman. A case of lead poisoning occurred in the person of the painter of the Juno. In the Salamis, six men of a mess partook of some small fruit received on board at Tasman Bay. They were all attacked by symptoms of poisoning, and, without applying to the medical officer, each took a mustard emetic, which relieved them all immediately, with the exception of one man, a stoker, who took a large dose of mustard without taking a sufficient quantity of warm water. He ultimately recovered. There were 650 cases of wounds and injuries of various kinds, twenty-eight of burns and scalds, and four of submersion and drowning; and of these, five of wounds and injuries were invalided, and four of wounds and injuries, and all the cases of submersion and drowning, proved fatal. Of the fatal injuries, one was a wound of the abdomen, caused by the bursting of a gun-barrel; two men sustained fatal fractures and internal injuries by falling from aloft; and one man from a similar cause sustained fatal fracture of the skull. One man was drowned by falling off a pontoon, one by falling over a brow, one by falling through ice, while employed at Tientsin breaking the ice clear of the ship, and one man was found drowned.

In the course of the report, the surgeons point out the disastrous effect which the temporary suppression of surveillance and the closing of the Lock Hospital at Yokohama have had on the crews of the ships on the station. During the twelve months no less than 337 cases of contagious disease were under treatment; and the vessels which suffered the most were the Barrosa, the Iron Duke, and the Juno. The Marine detachment also suffered severely. The surgeon of the Barrosa says:—"The increase in the number of cases contracted at Yokohama is mainly attributable to the fact that the prostitutes of the Yoshiwara (the place where the registered prostitutes were domesticated), 'who had hitherto been the slaves of the brothel keepers,' were granted their freedom by the Japanese Government; and being free, they one and all left the place. Even those who were under treatment in the hospital were allowed to go, while still suffering from disease. Many of these have since voluntarily returned, and a new establishment is being erected for their reception, where it is expected that all the arrangements will be on a more satisfactory footing than hitherto. It was during the break-up of the Yoshiwara, however, that our men were granted general leave; and all the cases which occurred at that time were contracted in public-houses kept by Europeans and Americans in the foreign settlement, where diseased women were allowed to resort for the purpose of prostitution. These irregularities were represented to our Consul, but as the owners of the houses were not British subjects, little could be done to put a stop to them."

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

The departures to note are the steamers Sirius and Crocus from Foochow on the 26th and 28th June. The Glenartney, Agamemnon, and Glenfalloch, from Hankow, passed through the Suez Canal on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th inst. The following is a list of the cargoes afloat.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE SIAMESE-INDIAN TREATY.

(June 30th.) Sir G. BALFOUR asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the Treaty lately concluded between the Government of India and the King of Siam had been communicated to the Foreign-office; and if so, then whether any and what Consular officers were to be appointed to carry out the Treaty. The hon. member also asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Treaty, as published in the London and China Telegraph, of the 23rd of June, was authentic, and if so, whether any modifications could still be made in the Treaty before its final ratification; and when a copy of the Treaty would be laid before Parliament.—Lord G. HAMILTON informed Sir G. Balfour that the Treaty, as published in the London and China Telegraph, was authentic; that the Treaty had been ratified, and, therefore, it was impossible to modify it. He would produce the Treaty if it were moved for.—Mr. BOURKE said the duty of seeing the provisions of the Treaty carried out would be performed by Mr. Knox, our Consul at Bangkok.

THE WOOSUNG BAR.

(July 2nd.) Mr. R. REID asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if his attention had been called to a telegram which appeared last week, stating that the Chinese Foreign-office had finally declined to undertake the operation of dredging the Woosung Bar; and if he would inform the House what was the latest intelligence received at the Foreign-office on the subject, and what further steps Mr. Wade had taken to induce the Chinese Government to attend to the matter.—Mr. BOURKE stated that the latest intelligence received at the Foreign-office on this subject was dated June 11, and it was not satisfactory. At the same time the Government had no reason to believe that the Chinese Government had refused to improve the bar of the Woosung River. Under these circumstances, and as the correspondence was still going on, it had not been necessary for the Government to decide on the future steps they should take.

In the House of Commons to-night the following questions will be asked:—

Mr. B. Denison.—To ask questions relative to the war between the Dutch and the Sultan of Atchin.

Address for Copy of Report as to capture of the German vessels Marie Louise and Gazelle, &c.

Address for Copy of the Correspondence as to Chinese cruisers who intercept trading vessels to and from Hong Kong.

Mr. Bates.—To ask Mr. Reed a question relative to a statement made by him with regard to a vessel about to sail for China.

Lord Stanley of Alderley will to-night bring forward the subject of the government of the Straits Settlements.

DEPARTURE OF THE REV. C. P. SCOTT FOR CHINA.

On the evening of St. Peter's Day a special character was given to the Second Evensong at St. Peter's, Eaton-square, to adapt it to the occasion of the departure of the Rev. C. P. Scott, who has been working in the parish as curate for more than three years, as a Missionary to China. At the commencement of the service a procession, consisting of the full choir and seven or eight clergymen, with Mr. Scott and the Vicar, entered the church singing the well-known hymn, "From Greenland's icy mountains." All of the large congregation present felt the beauty and fitness of the service throughout, from the General Confession to the "Lighten our darkness" before the address. The feeling was perhaps strongest in the "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace," and in the Creed. The address was given by the Rev. G. H. Wilkinson, the Vicar, from the text 2 Tim. ii. 1, "Thou, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus."

After a few warm, cheering words, spoken in the name of the congregation, to Mr. Scott, the Vicar added, "No words of mine can possibly tell him how much we love him, rather let us show that love by silent united intercession on his behalf that God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, our eternal God, would pour on him the blessings that he so much needs, and for this purpose there will now be five quiet silent minutes' prayer."

After silent prayer the large congregation joined most heartily in the Missionary Hymn "Speed thy servants, Saviour speed them, &c." A few collects followed, and the final blessing was pronounced by the Vicar. The hymn "Crown Him with many Crowns," was then sung as a recessional, at the close of which a large number of the congregapassed through the vestry to take leave of Mr. Scott, the appreciation of whose ministry has been abundantly testified during the last few weeks by the number of gifts which have been made to him, including a purse of £210, presented on Monday morning.

BUDDHISM AND CHRISTIANITY.

On the 21st ult. the Bishop of Victoria in the course of a sermon preached at St. Mary's, Newington, on behalf of the Church Missionary Society, gave an interesting account of the practical effects of Bhuddism as the religion of China. His lordship said that not long ago Buddhism was spoken of in Westminster Abbey as a living religion almost on a level with Christianity. Without entering into a controversy on the subject, he said this was an entire mistake. He had paid hundreds of visits to Buddhist temples, and all he could say was that if the venerable abbey were filled with disgusting images for worship; if the dean and his clergy were to chant night and day a lot of unmeaning jargon; if all those engaged in the service of the abbey, in fact, were lazy, illiterate, sensual, opium-eating priests; if the nave and aisles and cloisters were filled twice a year with a gay throng of people to keep high holiday and make prostrations before the idols; if on such occasions there were mountebanks and so on outside the building, while the smoke of incense within was mixed with the smoke of tobacco and loud babbling was heard on every side; if such formed part of our worship, then, and not otherwise, might Bhuddism be fairly compared to Christianity. Alluding to the subject of missions, the right rev. preacher said that the missionary labourers in China were Roman Catholics, who had priests everywhere, and next Americans, Congregationalists, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, whilst, he was sorry to say it, the Church of England came last of all, and was far behind in missionary enterprise in that country. The results of the united labours of all the Protestant missionaries during the last quarter of a century was about 10,000 converts. The first great obstacle to missionary enterprise in China was the intense unwillingness of the upper and governing classes to receive the teaching of foreigners or to have anything to do with them, and this applied not only to the Gospel but to things secular, such as railways, telegraphs, and anything they could introduce into their country, and they would remain for ever, if they could, shut out from all the rest of the world.

ST. ANDREW'S WATERSIDE MISSION.—The annual festival of St Andrew's Waterside Mission was held on the 29th June, the anniversary of the foundation of the Mission Church at Gravesend. A large number of clergy from the county were present, with many friends and supporters of this ever-increasing mission. The afternoon sermon was preached by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Brisbane, that in the morning by the Rev. W. T. du Bonlay, vicar of St. Mary's, West Brompton. The Very Reverend the Dean of Rochester, and the Rev. R. P. Coates, also took part in the services. The Rev. John Scarth, hon. secretary of the Mission, the Rev. Wilmot Buxton, the Rev. H. G. Lee, and the Rev. J. Matthews, who assist in the Mission work, were also present. The services were very hearty, and the great good done by this branch of the Church's work was spoken of by both preachers with thankfulness. The St. Andrew's Waterside Mission is getting a world-wide reputation, and stations are ever opening up, as the means and opportunities for helping sailors abroad occur. Within the last month upwards of 1,900 volumes of books have been received at the Mission, and the library boxes sent out nearly equal one a day, besides large quantities of books forwarded to other stations, and many Bibles, prayer-books, and magazines distributed every day. The Mission has lately received its first legacy in the shape of a library of books left to it by a lady in Yorkshire, the executors being the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Master of the Temple, and the Rev. F. Pigou, vicar of Doncaster. The Bishop of Rochester, speaking of the Mission in his visitation charge last year, said:—While I am on the subject of Home needs and Home Missions, I am bound to mention to the promoters of such good works, as an instance of a special need, the St. Andrew's Waterside Mission. This was a mission (the word has now become a familiar word) set on foot to afford spiritual aid to emigrant and other ships leaving these shores while they yet lay in the Thames; in which are often to be found persons setting forth with little thought for any other provision than that of things needful for the body. Ten years ago the Rev. Canon Robinson, then Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Gravesend, started it. It is now carried on by one who shared his labours and has since succeeded him as Vicar of Holy Trinity—the Rev. John Scarth. Last year he distributed about one thousand pounds worth of books; more than twelve hundred volumes were, in one month, sent to him for the purpose, besides thousands of magazines and tracts. He bears witness to a great change for the better in the religious feelings of both officers and men; and has many of the former acting as lay missionaries on board ship, the Mission supplying them with books for service and for distribution." The Mission should be helped by all friends of sailors, and by all who wish to have the influence of the Church for good carried over the sea into all parts of the world.

ORDINATION OF MISSIONARIES TO CHINA.—The Free Church Presbytery of Glasgow met in Free St. Matthew's Church, for the purpose of ordaining Messrs. Gibson and Barclay as missionaries to China for the English Presbyterian Church. The ordination service in Glasgow was a deeply interesting one. Principal Fairbairn preached an able discourse from the text "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy," and after putting the usual questions, he proceeded to ordain the two young men in one act, laying a hand on the head of each. Dr. Andrew Bonar then addressed the missionaries in a singularly powerful and happy strain. He congratulated them upon the stimulus which they would have in China from the thought that if they did not preach to those with whom they came in contact no one else would. China was represented on the occasion by the Rev. George Smith, of Swatow, and the Rev. W. Macgregor, of Amoy, who made interesting statements regarding the field of the mission. The occasion was an unusually interesting one, and notwithstanding the absence at this season of many who would have been there, the large church was nearly filled, and there was a large attendance of the Presbytery. The destination of Mr. Gibson is Swatow, and that of Mr. Barclay Formosa.

DR. LEGGE AT NEW COLLEGE.—At the annual assembly in connection with the close of the session at New College, the Rev. Dr. Legge, of China, in seconding the adoption of the report, said his thoughts had been carried back thirty-seven years to the close of the session in Highbury College, one of the largest affluents which flowed into New College. Great changes had taken place all over the world since that time. It was a change—and one which, he believed, was for the better—when various colleges about London merged into this institution. He felt sure that the course of study was, on the whole, a great improvement as compared with that of thirty or forty years ago; and it would be the fault of the students if they did not go forth from New College in the future better furnished in some respects than the majority of their predecessors could possibly be.

WE hear that the Secretary of State for India in Council has at last granted the money required for building a new museum and Library upon the vacant ground opposite the India Office. The sum is said to be somewhere about £75,000. There seems to be little doubt that the Museum will be lodged at South Kensington during the erection of the new buildings.

WE understand that Colonel Gordon has sent home an application from Gondokoro, to the effect that two officers of the Royal Engineers may be sent out to join him forthwith. It is believed that Colonel Gordon hopes to be on the Great Lake about November next.

THE Secretary of the Eastern and Australian Mail Steam Company, Limited, has written to The Times, contradicting the telegram which had been published about the steamship Flintshire having been wrecked.

MR. HOARE, son of the Rev. E. Hoare, of Tunbridge Wells, has offered himself to the Church Missionary Society for missionary work, and has been accepted. Mr. Hoare will join the China Mission.

CONSULAR COURTS IN THE FAR EAST.

THE question of Consular Courts in Egypt brought forward in the House of Commons by Mr. BAILLIE COCHRANE, leads us to look into the jurisdiction and practice of the Consular Courts in the Far East, where the same principles prevail, though not, we are glad to say, leading to the same disgraceful results, as in Egypt. Still it does occur that the Administration of the law in some of the Consular Courts in China and Japan—if not of our own nationality—is anything but impartial or just. On the conclusion of the Treaties with China in 1841 and the opening of the ports the Consular Court was an indispensable institution. No machinery for a mixed Court then existed; but the case is very different now, after a lapse of thirty-three years. The establishment of the Supreme Court of China and Japan, and the mixed Court at Shanghai, is one step in the direction of relieving the Consuls of the responsibility of trying cases. It appears to us that the time has arrived for a reorganisation of the modes now in practice of administering law amongst the foreign communities in China and Japan. To attempt joint action with all the powers having Treaty relations with those countries would be to relegate the scheme to the official "pigeon-holes" possessed by all Consuls for shelved subjects. Opposition, especially from the smaller Consuls and powers, would be without end. We are of opinion, therefore, that Great Britain, which has been foremost in opening China and Japan to the trade of the West, should be foremost in inaugurating a scheme for the adjudication of all disputes, which would include the presence of a Chinese or Japanese colleague on the bench. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that the communities of China and Japan now contain very different elements to those of a quarter of a century ago, and consequently the measures required for their government are of a different nature. When we view the other side of the question, viz., the trial of cases where British subjects have claims on Chinese or Japanese, we find an ample compensation for the adoption of joint-judges. The wrongs which British merchants have suffered from natives is too well known to need recounting here. In proposing that Great Britain should take the lead in the matter it is with the full conviction that the German and American Governments would be willing to give their adhesion to the scheme, and that once in operation other powers would be constrained to join. We believe that the adoption of this proposal would, to a great extent, remove the obstacles which now prevent the settlement of foreigners in other but the defined Treaty ports. It would in this way be fraught with many advantages to ourselves.

THE VIENNA EXHIBITION.

A SERIES of reports upon the principal features and exhibits of the Vienna Exhibition is now being prepared under the authority of the Royal British Commission, and will shortly be laid before Parliament. These reports are confided to eminent and well-qualified writers, and we look to them for a considerable amount of information and enlightenment. Professor ARCHER, President of the Scottish Society of Arts, reports upon pottery and porcelain, also upon glass and enamels; Sir DIGBY WYATT reports upon the building; Mr. BEVAN, on food products; Dr. W. H RUSSELL, on firearms; Mr. ANDERSON, on machinery; Colonel MICHAEL, on agricultural machinery, &c. A special feature of the reports will be found among those drawn up by foreign Commissioners. The Chinese Commission furnish a report upon the objects of Chinese manufacture suited to English markets, and the Japanese are also expected to supply some interesting and instructive facts respecting the arts which flourish in their native land. We hear that the Museum in Vienna, to which the majority of the objects exhibited in the Chinese department of the Great Exhibition were presented, cannot maintain an independent existence, and is to be broken up. It relied at starting upon the new and valuable contributions it expected, and received, from the various countries represented in the Exhibition, but either from want of funds, want of location, mismanagement or indifference, it has now failed to establish itself, and the many valuable objects consigned to its care will now be dispersed. Having been, in most cases, presents from foreign Governments, notably from the Chinese, we presume that these collections cannot be sold, but will be transferred to other museums. At the time that the announcement of the disposal of the collection was made we regretted that some more appreciative home than the Austrian capital had not been found for the collection which had been brought together with so much taste and judgment by Mr. HART and his subordinates, and we now lament more than ever that London, Paris, or Berlin was not selected as the resting place of a collection so unique and interesting.

THE EMPEROR OF CHINA'S PILGRIMAGE.

FROM time to time we have heard much about the projected journey of the Emperor of CHINA to visit the tombs of his ancestors, and the preparations that were being made in order that it might be carried out in a befitting manner. What with raising funds from the impoverished province of Chihli for the repair of the tombs, and what with inspecting roads, inns, &c., the Governor-General, LI HUNG-CHANG (better known to foreigners as LI FUTAI, the vanquisher of the Taiping rebels), must have had an anxious time of it, although these Western Tombs, of which we have lately heard so much, and which are situate in the district of I-chow, are only some eighty miles distant from Peking, in a south-westerly direction. This long-talked-of journey is now an accomplished fact, and from the details which we have received, it appears to us to be hopeful for a more enlightened régime under the present youthful occupant of the Dragon Throne. "There can be no doubt," says a Peking correspondent, "that the EMPEROR appeared on the occasion under the most favourable circumstances before his people. They saw him returning to his capital from the good work of praying at the tombs of his ancestors; appearing on horseback in a manly way, his face bronzed from exposure to the sun, and from time to time en route noticing the aged men, who were present among his numerous subjects, in a way most gratifying to them. Knowing the reverential feelings which the Chinese people entertain for their EMPEROR, we may surmise that the spectators on this occasion, when they return to their homes, many of these situated in the most distant parts of China, will not fail to recount what they saw on the 17th April, 1874, of his MAJESTY and of his acts." Looking at the matter from a purely utilitarian point of view, the EMPEROR, acting, doubtless, on the advice of prudent counsellors, has done two very wise things; he has shown himself strictly observant of those most ancient and dearly cherished traditions of the Empire—reverence for the dead and the aged—which are the best traits in the Chinese character; and further, which we hold to be a great point, he has shown himself publicly to his people, for his journey, we gather, was performed in broad daylight, and not in the usual hole-and-corner fashion, in which during the past winter he paid his nocturnal visits to the Temple of Heaven. There is one point, however, in connection with this pilgrimage of the EMPEROR'S which, in our opinion, is deeply to be regretted, and that is its enormous cost, which we cannot but regard as, to a very great extent, simple waste. The sums required to meet the prodigal expenditure on the occasion have been wrung from a population which at the best of times is not over rich, and which at this particular juncture must, owing to various circumstances, be more than usually poor. Unfortunately, too, we cannot hope that the expenditure of these large sums has done the good to the labouring classes of the district that would have accrued to them from similar causes in most other countries, for there can be little doubt that the greater part of the money, nominally expended on the repairs of the tombs and the making of roads, has really found its way into the pockets of corrupt and dishonest officials.

THE philosophers of Laputa, in SWIFT'S inimitable satire' amused themselves, we are told, by devising all sorts of imaginary projects for meeting and supplying the plain and practical requirements of everyday life. Statesmen and officials in China, English and Chinese, appear to employ themselves in occupations not very widely dissimilar. The British Minister desires a most elaborate, complicated, and intricate system for teaching the Chinese alphabet to the ingenuous youth of the Legations, and the head of the Customs Service is constantly engaged, if report speak truly, in considering and preparing, issuing and recalling, orders and instructions relative to the organisation and arrangement of the staff over which he presides; the British Minister shifts his men from port to port like pawns on a chessboard, though without any pretext of an ultimate design; and, not to be outdone, Mr. HART shuffles his pack of tide-waiters and clerks as if he were anxious to perform the well-known trick, which consists in bringing the knaves together in a conspicuous position. It is really time that the annual shifting of men in public offices should cease, for it is inconvenient to the public, irritating to the subjects of the experiment, and most expensive to the Governments concerned.

A TELEGRAM which we gave in our last announces that the Chinese Government positively refuse to make any attempts to deepen the Woosung Bar. We have already pointed out in previous articles the obligations which should induce our Government to take up the matter, but so long as negotiations were pending it was desirable to await their conclusion. It will now be desirable for the various steamship owners and others interested to furnish the Foreign-office with a detailed statement of the losses they suffer on entering and leaving the port of Shanghai. We are glad to see that Mr. REID, M.P., is moving in the matter, and that the telegram is not confirmed by our Government.

IN our Parliamentary reports it will be seen that Sir GEORGE BALFOUR has called attention to the treaty concluded with Siam by the GOVERNOR-GENERAL of India, and we regret to see from the reply of the Under-Secretary that no amendment can now be introduced, as the treaty is already ratified. We must here call in question the wisdom of ratifying such treaties without first publishing a draft, which would elicit the suggestions of those who are practically acquainted with the country and nature of the contract entered into. We believe it is the intention of our Foreign-office to appoint a Vice-Counsel at Chengmai, subject to the Consul Bangkok.

THE Augsburg Gazette publishes a communication from St. Petersburg, based on what is described as authentic intelligence, brought by caravans, stating that YAKOOB BEY is arming against Russia. The writer considers a collision between Russia and China as possible, and concludes that in any case important events may be expected in Eastern Asia.

AT the Oriental Congress to be held in London next September the following, among other German scholars, are to be present:—Professors LEPSIUS, A. WEBER, and DILLMANN, sent by Prussia; HAUG, and SPIEGEL, sent by Bavaria; ROTH, and Dr. TRUMPP, sent by Würtemberg.

Tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on the 1st inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £395,000, and to Madras £5,000. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 10¼d. will receive about 21 per cent., above in full. There appears to be a rather better demand for the means of remittance to the East, the total for which tenders were invited being double the amount of the previous occasion.

M. de Lesseps has published a letter in reply to the assertions with regard to the Suez Canal which Mr. Baillie Cochrane made in his speech in the House of Commons on bringing forward his motion in favour of the adhesion of the British Government to the proposed judicial reforms in Egypt. M. de Lesseps shows that the capital employed in the construction of the Suez Canal was almost exclusively French; and, he says that as a consequence of the loan subsequently contracted in France only, the capital engaged in the enterprise of the Canal is now absolutely French.

The P. and O. Company's steamers Nizam and Zambesi, which are bringing new teas, left Shanghai on May 31 and June 14 respectively, with the ordinary mails. They are not extra steamers, but will come through the Suez Canal to Southampton.

The Japanese Loans close at rather reduced prices—viz., the Nine per Cent. Loan at 108 to 110; and the Seven per Cents. at 96 to 97.

The Globe Telegraph and Trust Company (Limited) announce that the accounts show a balance which enables the directors to recommend the declaration of a final dividend of 3s. per share on the preference shares, making, with previous quarterly payments, six per cent. for the year ending the 18th inst., and 3s. per share on the ordinary shares, making, with previous distributions, 5½ per cent. for the year ending the same date.

At a liquidation meeting of the shareholders of the French Atlantic Telegraph Company the balance of assets remaining, after distributing 4s. a share to the members, and the satisfying by the liquidators of all outstanding liabilities, was voted as remuneration to the liquidators. As far, therefore, as the shareholders are concerned, the liquidation of the old French Cable Company is virtually completed.

The Anglo-American Telegraph Company (Limited) have resolved to pay an interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. for the three months ending the 30th ult.

The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company (Limited) announce the payment of an ad interim dividend of 12s. per share.

The traffic receipts of the Eastern Extension, Australasia, and China Telegraph Company, for the month of June, 1874, amounted to £19,026, and to £18,640 for the corresponding period of 1873. The Eastern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month amounted to £29,819, and to £27,398 in the corresponding period of 1873.

Messrs. Schröder and Co. announce the payment of the half-yearly interest on the issue of £210,000 Six per Cent. Bonds of the Amoor River Navigation Company, St. Petersburg.

Advices from New York report the suspension of Messrs. Turner and Co., bankers, a firm established in 1844. The difficulties of the house appear to be due to the advancement of money to Western railroad companies on securities that proved inadequate.

The suspension is announced of Messrs. Adam and Co., iron-plate workers, Birmingham. The liabilities are £20,000, but a satisfactory dividend is expected.

The suspension is announced of Messrs. John Sharples and Sons, cotton spinners, of Prospect Mills, Bolton, with liabilities estimated at £197,000.

Mr. A. Crawford, timber merchant, of Greenock, has suspended payment. The liabilities amount to about £50,000, against assets representing about 12s. 6d. in the pound.

In the last list of bankrupts Edward H Pollard, Q.C., of Hong Kong, London, and lately of St. Petersburg, is put down for July 17.

Telegrams report the difficulties of Messrs. R. S. Walker and Co., Hong Kong, and Coutts and Co., Shanghai. A German firm at Hong Kong is also spoken of.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of June have been this year, f.391,913; last year, f.265,753. The total traffic receipts from January 1 to June 30 have been this year, f.2,089,408; last year, f.1,450,239.

Mr. Samuel Botham Harrison having left the firm of Shepard, Harrison, and Rehden, tea brokers, to carry out separate business arrangements, Mr. John Shepard, junior, has been admitted as a partner, and in future the business will be carried on at the London and Liverpool offices of the late partnership, under the firm of Shepard, Rehden, and Shepard.

Messrs. David Sassoon and Co., of Leadenhall-street, announce hat they have authorised Mr. S. Ezekiel to sign their firm.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Bokhara, which left Southampton July 2, was, in gold, to Galle, £250; in silver, to Hong Kong, £23,958; to Shanghai, £6,205. Total in gold, £250; in silver, £30,163.

Applications are invited for an issue of 6,500 shares of £10 each of the Malayan Peninsular Tin Mining Cympany (Limited). The undertaking, the capital of which is £200,000, in £10 shares, is formed with the object of working the tin mines in Salangore, near Banca, Billiton, and Malacca, on the Malayan Peninsula, under a concession from the reigning Viceroy for 109 years. One-half of the total nominal capital is taken by the vendors as the price of the concession. The prospectus will be found in full in our advertisement columns.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The market has continued very quiet, the demand from the trade and exporters has been very limited, and although the arrivals have been confined to Canton District, and Green Teas, prices for Congous generally have ruled in favour of buyers, owing to the desire of importers to close invoices prior to the arrival of new teas. The arrivals of Canton Teas have been large, and with a pressure to sell, prices have given way fully 2d. per lb. in Congous and 3d. to 4d. per lb. in common olive coloured Scented Capers, 1d. to 2d. per lb. in good kinds. Green Teas have also sold at very low prices for the common to medium kinds, their position being adversely affected by the working of the Adulteration Act. New Season's Canton Capers: Common olive coloured have sold from 9½d. to 1s. per lb., being fully 3d. to 4d. per lb. below previous prices. Orange Pekoes: Canton kinds have been steady with a fair demand. Foo Chow kinds: Common to fair have sold ½d. to 1d. per lb. lower, good to fine have been wanted, but there are none in importers' hands. The stock in the United Kingdom on the 30th ultimo was estimated at 62,102,000 lbs., against 73,359,000 lbs., last year, and the quantity afloat (advices by letter) at 650,000 lbs., against 75,100 lbs. of China Tea, and 231,503 lbs., against 348,466 lbs. of India Tea.

SILK.

The general tone has been rather better these last few days, but thus far this has not produced much business. Buyers seem all prepared to admit that prices are very low, but at present do not seem to care to anticipate their wants. As in 1873, we commence the second half of the year with a range of prices very different from those of January, and still more widely different from those of July, 1873—a difference one would expect that cannot fail to stimulate consumption. For the moment the long period of depression, fully two years, seems to have exhausted the courage of manufacturers, and thus far they show no symptoms of setting to work as in olden times to commence operations on a more extended scale, but we shall see; it may be that a little consideration of the extremely low prices of the raw material may induce them to make a beginning. Our stocks, although large, show some diminution upon those of last year in all descriptions except China Silk, while prices are 20 to 25 per cent. lower. Arrivals in June:—China, 1,443 bales; Japan, 389 bales; and Canton, 160 bales.

Messrs. Kilburn, Kershaw and Co.'s Circular says:— It is to be hoped that present low prices will really stimulate consumption. The market is now steady at the full rates of the Sale week, and although quiet, there is still some business doing daily, with a generally better feeling in the market than for some weeks past. Canton Silk appears to have been affected by the prices of common Tsatlees, the trade giving preference to the latter at the present range of prices. Deliveries of Silk last month were again small, although better than in the previous month, and stocks show but little decrease as compared with this time last year.

COFFEE.—The parcels offered have been extensive, and with a less active demand the prices of plantation Ceylon are 1s. 6d. to 2s., and of foreign and pale kinds 2s. to 2s. 6d per cwt. lower. Plantation Ceylon has sold: Triage, 92s. 6d. to 102s.; small to low middling grey, 107s. to 116s. 6d.; middling to bold, 117s. to 126s.; peaberry, 126s. to 129s. Little or no business has been done in Native Ceylon. Of 2,200 bags Java offered 100 bags sold, good ordinary at 100s. 6d. per cwt. Yesterday prices further declined 1s. per cwt. for pale and grey, and 1s. 6d. to 2s. per cwt. for coloury, Plantation Ceylon selling—triage and ordinary at 86s. 6d. to 104s.; small to low middling grey, 105s. to 115s. 6d.; middling to bold coloury, 116s. to 123s. 6d.; peabery, 124s. to 128s. A small lot of Native Ceylon, fine ordinary, sold at 97s.

CAMPHOR.—An offer of 600 cases China has been quitted at 68s. 9d. per cwt, and business has been done in Japan at 72s. 6d.

GAMBIER.—Three hundred bales fine pale cubes have been sold at 40s. per cwt.

HEMP.—No business has been done in Manila.

HIDES.—Messrs. Dyster, Nalder, and Co.'s Monthly Report says:—The market continues very inactive for Kips in the hair, and the business done both for home use and export has been of a very limited character; prices of Kips 9 lbs. and under show no marked change, though the tendency has been decidedly in buyers' favour; extra weights are most difficult of sale, and may be quoted ½d. per lb. lower, with hardly any demand at the reduction. The sales by public and private reach 152,491 Kips in the hair and tanned. Singapore, Penang, and Rangoon Ox and Cow Hides: Light averages have sold fairly, whilst the heavy weights sold in public sale, in sympathy with other sorts, are decidedly lower. The bulk of the Rangoons have been sold in original bales on private terms. Sales 1,991 Singapore and Penang—light, 12d. to 13½d.; heavy, 7½d. to 10d.; thirds, 7½d. per lb. 15,301 Rangoon, light, 13d.; heavy, 7½d. to 10⅞d.; thirds, 8d. to 8½d.; fourths, 6d. per lb. Singapore, Penang, &c., Buffalo Hides: The demand has been very limited, and only a trifling business has been done at and slightly under previous rates. Sales 2,148 Singapore and Penang; fair, light average 18½ to 19 lbs., 5½d. to 5⅝d.; seconds, 4½d. to 4⅝d.; thirds, 3d. per lb. Java Hides—Buffalo: A fair business has been done chiefly in indirect imports, but at prices which show an average decline of about ¼d. per lb. In Ox and Cow, from want of supplies, there are no sales to report. Sales, 5,596 Buffalo Hides: Shaved, first heavy, average 18⅞d. to 20 lbs., 8d. to 8¼d.; first light, average 12⅜ lbs., 8⅝d.; seconds, 6⅜d.; thirds, 5d.; unshaved, first heavy, average 23½ lbs., 6⅝d.; first heavy and light, average 10⅞ to 17⅛ lbs., 7⅜d.; seconds, &c., 5d. per lb.

PEPPER.—Black has been in improved request, and prices are higher; Penang has sold on the spot at 5⅞d., and afloat at 6d.; Singapore on the spot at 6½d., and afloat (50 tons) at 6½d. to 6¼d. There has been but little doing in White on the spot, but afloat 20 tons Singapore have been sold at 8⅜d. per lb.

RICE.—The market has been more active at previous prices. On the spot 8,000 bags Rangoon sold at 8s. 3d. to 8s. 6d., 8,000 bags Bassein at 8s. 8d., s.p., 3,400 bags damaged Rangoon at 7s. 6d. to 8s., and 100 ton Askoolie at 9s. 6d. ex quay. Also several cargoes afloat, two of Bassein—3,000 tons at 9s. 3d., one of 700 tons of Moulmein at 9s. 6d.; all Continental terms. 1,700 tons new Rangoon at 9s. 6d., for the Continent; 1,900 tons Bassein at 9s. 3d., 1,900 tons Necranzie at 9s. 3d., the last two Continental terms; and three cargoes of Rangoon, 3,400 tons, at 9s. 6d., one open charter and two Continental towns; also one of Saigon for Hamburg, 740 tons, at 8s. 9d.

SUGAR.—A quiet tone has continued to characterise the market, prices showing no alteration from last week's quotations. No business was done in East India kinds until yesterday, when 7,000 bags sundried Ilo Ilo were sold at 17s. 3d. per cwt.

SAGO.—500 bags pearl sold at full prices; good medium, 18s.; good large, 18s. 6d. Of 100 bags Flour the damaged sold, 90 bags at 15s. for first class.

TAPIOCA.—1,100 bags flake chiefly sold at full prices; fine Penang, 2⅜d to 2½d.; old grey Singapore, 1⅝d; 230 bags flour bought in at 2d. to 2½d.

TIN.—Straits is coming forward very freely, and prices are in consequence slightly easier. Current quotations are—Straits on the spot, £100 to £101, afloat, £98; Banca, £105; Billiton, £98 10s. to £99 per ton.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

The same quiet feeling as noted last week has since prevailed in the market, and the demand for both Yarns and Goods has been almost of a retail character. Quotations have as a rule remained unaltered, but where transactions have taken place, buyers have been able to operate on better terms than previously obtainable. At the close the absence of animation is just as marked, the business doing being quite of a limited character, and the tendency of prices towards greater ease.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.—JUNE 17.

TEA.

Messrs. Beebe's Circular says:—During the interval the demand for most descriptions of Tea has been limited to current requirements for consumption, and quotations at the close show a decline of 2c. to 3c. for Japan and Oolongs, with but little change in the value of Greens. Greens: The demand has been quite moderate for all grades since the 20th ult., the trade buying only for immediate distribution. Holders, however, have been less inclined to press sales, and prices, except for first Hysons and Young Hysons, are substantially unchanged. Japans have met with fair inquiry at the decline noted, and sales reported include most of the remaining supply from the past season's import. Oolongs continue out of favour, though a fair aggregate business has been done in them, within the limits of our quotations. Congou and Souchong remain unchanged.

SILK.

Messrs. Richardson and Son's Circular says:—We are without any improvement in the market. The dull, unsatisfactory feeling we have so often reported continues. Prices, in their downward course, have in many cases reached a point which has not been touched since 1860; yet, with the prospects of good crops in Europe and Asia, both as to quantity and quality, and with the present slack demand here, buyers are very cautious, and only take just what they want for immediate needs. Stocks are full, but there is a large proportion of ordinary quality only. Really good R. R. Hainings and R. R. Tsatlees are not abundant. During the month a little business has been done in Cantons, but at prices which were not very satisfactory, especially for Cotngons. As there is this season no need to hurry the Chinese Silk to market, it is to be hoped that there will be more care taken in the re-reeling of Canton and Shanghai Silk. Consumption is restricted; some of the factories being only partially running. Prices are weaker, and sellers are in some cases anxious to do business which can only be done by making concessions. Quotations :—Tsatlee, 1 and 2, $7\frac{1}{4}$ to $7; 3, $6\frac{3}{4}$; Taysaam, 1 and 2, $5\frac{3}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{4}$; R. R. Haining, 1, $6\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{4}$; R. R. Tsatlee, $6 to $5\frac{1}{2}$; R. R. Canton, extra fine, $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $6; R. R. Canton, Chumchuck, $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$; R. R. Canton, Luclnow, extra fine, $5.

COFFEE.—The Brazil Coffee market is quiet, the telegram from Rio Janeiro assisting to depress the market. Mild Coffees are firm, Java being especially strong. We quote as follows :—Java (Government bags) 22c. to 25c.; Java (mats) 24c. to 26c.; Singapore, 18c. to 20c.; Ceylon, Native, 18c. to 21c.

CORDAGE.—The following are the current prices :—Manila Cordage, sizes above 12-thread, 16½c.; do. 6-thread and 9-thread, ¼ in. and 5-16 in. diam., 17½c.; do. 12-thread, ⅜ in. diam., 17c.; do. Hay Rope, 17c.; do. Cordage, Bolt Rope Yarns, 18½c.; do. 6-thread and 9-thread, 19½c.; Tarred Manila, 16c.; Fine Tarred Manila Lath Yarn, 17½c.

HEMP.—The market is dull, and there are no sales of importance to report.

INDIGO.—There is no change in Indigo. Sales have been made of 14 to 15 cases Manila at 70c. to 85c., and 5 chests of Madras at 85c. to 88c., currency.

RICE.—There is a moderate inquiry without much activity, prices favouring buyers.

SUGAR.—There being but little demand from refiners, Raw Sugar is dull, while little is doing in the Refined article.

SPICES.—Cloves are dull, but Nutmegs are in fair demand. For whole parcels the market is stagnant. We quote as follows :—Mace, $1.16c. to 1.25; Nutmegs $1.15; China Cassia, 24c. to 24½c.; Batavia ditto 20c. to 25c.

TIN.—Straits Tin is quoted at 23½c., and Banca 26½c. (gold).

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Mineral wealth of the Malayan Peninsula has long been known, but up to the present time no well-organised plan for developing it has been brought before the public. This Company is formed with the object of working the extremely valuable Tin Mines in Salangore, under a Concession from the reigning Viceroy of that territory, dated the 8th March, 1873, for a term of 109 years.

Salangore is situated in the Malayan Peninsula, in a line with Banca and Billiton. It adjoins the British settlement of Malacca, and is bounded on the north by the kingdom of Perak. It has an area of about 4,800 square miles. The seaboard is 120 miles in length, the depth inland 40 miles. It averages 180 miles from Singapore and 100 miles from Penang. Steamers ply twice a week between those places. The country abounds in Tin Ore, which is so situated that it can be brought to the surface without the necessity of shafts or other underground works. Deposits are found at depths varying from 15 to 60 feet, and it has already been proved to be Tin-bearing for a breadth of five miles along the entire length. A small settlement of Chinese have been engaged in mining operations to a limited though profitable extent, working manually and entirely without the assistance of machinery and modern appliances.

The Dutch Government has for about 200 years past worked the Tin Mines of the neighbouring Island of Banca with immense success; the Mines of the adjacent Island of Billiton have also been worked by private interprise with like results. These Islands are situated on the Coast of Sumatra, and in a direct line with the seaboard of Salangore; and there can be no doubt that the district secured by the Concession forms part of the great deposit which constitutes the mineral wealth of Banca and Billiton. The Dutch Government returns state that the exports from Banca during the last fifty-two years amount to 2,914,692 piculs, the average yearly profit being about £315,000. The exports from Billiton during the last twenty years were 345,297 piculs, the average yearly profit being about £180,000. The Shares of the Billiton Company are divided into "Red" and "Black" Shares of 1,000 florins (£83 6s. 8d.) each, fully paid up. They are now worth about £300 and £350 respectively.

Salangore has been carefully inspected during a period of twelve months by Mr. Richard Barker, the Engineer of the Company, whose experience in England, Australia, and the Malayan Peninsula has fully qualified him for the undertaking.

The Mines have also been visited by two of the Directors, Mr. W. H. Read and Mr. J. Guthrie Davidson, who have been resident in Singapore for many years, and are well acquainted with the territory of Salangore.

The Viceroy has shown his interest and confidence in the success of the undertaking by requesting that $20,000 in Shares be reserved for subscription by himself and his brothers.

The facility with which Coolie labour is procurable (the cheapness of which is well known), is an important feature in connection with the working of the Mines, as it can be obtained at a cost of about a shilling a day.

The cost of raising and smelting the Ore and shipping it to Singapore, inclusive of all charges, is estimated at £3 16s. 6d. per picul (133 1-3rd lbs. English), as shown by the Report of Mr. Barker. An estimate of the minimum Revenue to be derived from the Mines is also given. Samples of Ores from the Mines have been submitted for Analysis to Dr. Percy, the Government Analytical Chemist, whose Certificate, annexed to the Report, shows an average of 71 per cent. of Tin.

The nominal capital of the Company is £200,000, one half of which is retained by the Vendors as the price of the Concession, who have shown their confidence in the undertaking by consenting to receive all but £15 000 in paid-up Shares.

All expenses up to the allotment of Shares will be borne by the Concessionaires.

The ultimate working Capital required is estimated at £100,000, but the work will be advantageously commenced with a portion only of that amount.

The Dividend will, of course, depend on the price of Tin in London and the other markets. At £95 per ton (the present quotations being about $100), the profits would be upwards of 30 per cent. The expenses will not increase with the advance of the value of Tin; therefore all the benefit will go to the Shareholders.

The great demand for the best description of Tin in the English, American, Chinese, and Indian markets is well known.

A copy of the Concession may be inspected at the Offices of the Company, together with the Memorandum and Articles of Association.

The only Agreement which has been entered into is one between the Count de Geloes and James Guthrie Davidson and A. Coghill, on behalf of the Company, for acquiring the Concession, dated the 3rd July, 1874.

In case no Allotment is made, the application money will be returned without deduction.

The Allotment will be made five days after the closing of the Lists.

Full Prospectuses, Forms of Application, Mr. Barker's Report, and all other information, to be had at the Offices of the Company, 32, St. Swithin's lane, E.C.

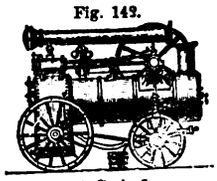
GWYNNE & Co.'s PATENT PORTABLE PUMPING ENGINE AND FLOATING IRRIGATOR.

In which the Pumps are furnished with hose for distributing the water over the adjoining plantations. Made in all sizes.

Fig. 142.

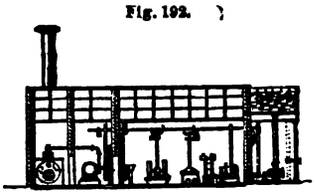


GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PORTABLE STEAM ENGINE.

Light, simple in construction, durable, and economical, and very superior to "Agricultural" Engines.

From 2½ to 30-horse power.

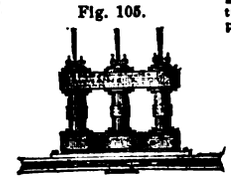
Fig. 192.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED MACHINERY FOR PRESSING OIL FROM SEED, OLIVES, FAT, &c., &c.

The above shows an arrangement for a seed oil mill, and comprises, besides the requisite motive power, a crushing mill, pair of runners, heating apparatus, hydraulic press, and pumps. A Centrifugal Pump is added to lift water or any purpose required.

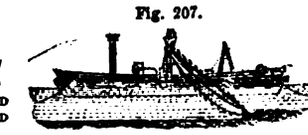
Fig. 105.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED TREBLE BARREL LIFT AND FORCE PUMP.

These are made with gun metal barrels, copper piston rods, and brass valves. The workmanship and materials throughout are of the very best class, and comparison with those of other makers is challenged Gwynne & Co. make single and double-barrelled pumps upon the same principles.

Fig. 207.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED DREDGING MACHINERY.

The boat can be constructed so as to draw only 18 inches of water, if required. The machinery is extremely simple, yet thoroughly effective, the workmanship and materials are of the first class, and the amount of work it will do, compared with the cost, most favourable.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

IMPORTANT FOR THE DELICATE.—It is difficult to determine which is the more trying to the human constitution—the damp, cold days of autumn and winter, or the keen, dry, easterly winds of spring. Throughout the seasons good health may be maintained by occasional doses of Holloway's Pills, which purify the blood and act as wholesome stimulants to the skin, stomach, liver, bowels, and kidneys. This celebrated medicine needs but a fair trial to convince the ailing and despondent that it will restore and cheer them without danger, pain, or inconvenience. No family should be without a supply of Holloway's Pills and Ointment, as by a timely recourse to them the first erring function may be reclaimed, suffering may be spared, and life saved.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all descriptions of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

Our advices from the Japan Ports by the present mail are of no later date than those received by Pacific mail on the 6th inst., and published in our last issue.

NAGASAKI.

Our advices extend to the 16th May; the P. and O. mail from London March 20 arrived out on the 14th May.

The Nagasaki Express of the 16th of May gives the following further particulars of the Japanese expedition to Formosa. The P. and O. steamer Delta, which arrived here from Shanghai on the 10th, has been sold during the week to the Japanese Government, and will be employed in the Formosa expedition. The price paid for her is one hundred thousand dollars, and she changed her flag on Tuesday last, on which occasion two guns were fired. The crew, which has been quartered in the building next door to the Sailors' Club, left to day for Shanghai by the British steamer Lap Tek. The steamer Shaftesbury, which was sold last week for sixty thousand dollars, and also the Delta, are being laden with stores, &c., for the expedition, and will convey the remainder of the soldiers to their destination. The total number will be about two thousand soldiers and workmen. Saigo, chief in command, who proceeds with the troops, will leave to-morrow morning by the Delta, and the Shaftesbury left this afternoon, direct for Formosa, at which place, we learn, several of the vessels forming the expeditionary squadron have arrived. Okuma, Minister of Finance, left yesterday morning by the P.M. steamer Golden Age for Yokohama, and from thence he proceeds to Tokio. Negotiations for the purchase of the British steamer Lap Tek were also pending during the week, but these have been suspended.

The Japanese iron-clad ram Azuma-kan, returned again to this port from Kagosima. She brought hither some five hundred more Satsuma soldiers who are to join the Formosa expedition; she left this morning for Amoy. The soldiers were landed at the Ohato, and were quartered in different parts of the town of Nagasaki, but they were re-embarked on board the steamers Delta and Shaftesbury during the week.

The steamer Argus left for the wreck of the Russian steamer Nicolai, which vessel it will be remembered ran upon a reef on the east side of Oki Island on the 6th October last. The endeavours to save her were, in consequence of her exposed position, suspended until the change of the monsoon, and the Argus has gone down to see whether any of the material of the wreck can be saved.

Ex-Samurai Oba Kagetatsu, of the Saga ken, has also been deprived of his rank, as he came to Nagasaki as a spy in the service of the rebels. Several Samurai of the Nagasaki ken, named Takama Taro, Watanabe Bunro and Fukahori Baigo, have been sentenced to the same degradation. The former as a rebel spy went to Fukahori to hasten the despatch of troops, and the two latter have been awarded their punishment for conniving at his action. Miyatomi Tetsuhe and Matsuzono Tadatsura, Samurai of the Nagasaki ken, have been deprived of their rank, they having been found guilty of sending communications to Saga, giving information of the events that happened at Nagasaki during the insurrection, and intending to join the rebels in the event of the latter attacking this place.

The captain of the Japanese steamer Shaftesbury appears to be bent upon distinguishing himself. The vessel, which is entirely in charge of natives, left this harbour for a trial trip, previous to starting on her voyage to Formosa. On returning to the anchorage she ran into the British barque Mistletoe, and did considerable damage to the port-side of that vessel. Previous to the collision the steamer had run against the P.M.S.S. Co.'s barge Shamrock, but fortunately did very little damage to her.

Several rumours have been current to the effect that the British steamer Crocus had been sold, through Messrs. Alt and Co., to the Japanese Government. We believe they had their origin in the fact that Messrs. Alt and Co. received an offer of two hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars for her, but on behalf of the owners they declined to sell at this figure. [This vessel is now on her way from Foochow with new teas.—ED. L. and C. T.]

Under the title of "The Tokio Guide," a guide book of Yedo has just been published by Messrs. F. R. Wetmore and Co., of Yokohama. This little book is precisely what the author intended it to be, viz., "a few pages to show how the tourist may expen- his limited time to the best advantage." There is a host of useful information for the traveller in Japan, including a translation of words likely to be used in conversation with the coolies.

PEKING AND TIENTSIN.

The Peruvian Minister and suite returned to Tientsin during the morning of the 30th April. On the following day Captain Garcia, accompanied by Mr. Secretary Elmore, called on the Governor-General. Two days later the latter, accompanied by several subordinate officials, returned the call. Mr. Mayers, Chinese Secretary to Her Majesty's Legation at Peking, arrived here a few hours before the Peruvian Minister, and I have since learnt that he had been rendering considerable aid to the latter in the negotiation of a treaty; and as numerous interchanges of visits are now occurring between Chinese officials and the Peruvian Legation officers, we presume that the relations of the two Governments have been placed in such a position that nothing exists to prevent the object of the Peruvian Minister being amicably and speedily concluded.

The Tientsin Spring races come off on the 14th, 15th, and 16th May. Some of the sporting members of the Peking community have been here already some days, and as the entries have been numerous we look for much sport. The small river steamer Feiyuen will be prepared, on the three days of the races, to take the public to the course, situated some four miles below the British settlement.

ABSTRACTS OF PEKING GAZETTES.

May 1st. (1) In addition to the usual list of presentations, applications for leave from duty, &c., it is recorded that Ngên-ling having committed a breach of etiquette in introducing to audience, requests that a penalty be adjudged against himself.

(2). Jui-lien, Military Governor of Jêh-ho, applies for the deprivation of office of a District Magistrate who has obtained his preferment by false personation. It appears that an individual named Chao-Yung-chên, otherwise called Chao K'ihung, is the son of a former incumbent of a Magistracy in Kiang-si, where he purchased a grade of nominal literary rank, after which, in return for certain contributions to military funds, he was permitted to become a Prefect's Assistant in Shantung. In 1868, after living for some years in retirement, he took the new name of Chao K'ihung, and got himself employed as a clerk in a Government office. Obtaining successive recommendations, he managed to rise through various minor titular grades to the rank of expectant Magistrate, but all in his old name of Chao Yung-chên. In 1871 he resigned his clerkship under the alias he bore, and in 1873 he gained his substantive advancement to the Magistrate's list. Having been detected in these subterfuges, he is not a man to be entrusted with a position of authority, and the Military Governor consequently lays the matter before the Throne.—Rescript: Let Chao Yung-chên, alias Chao K'i-hung, be forthwith deprived of his rank. Let the Board of Civil Office take note.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 24th May; the French mail from London April 10 arrived out on the 22nd May. The Courier has the following:—

Some interesting notes have been obligingly sent us about tea clippers shortly expected in Shanghai. Most of these come, as usual, via the Colonies. The Sir Lancelot, about which apprehensions were felt by some, because said to have left London for Shanghai on the 28th of December last, was loading at Sydney for Shanghai when the Cutty Sark left. The Ascalon, a new clipper, belonging to George Thompson, Jun., and Co., and the Crested Wave were to leave shortly after the Sir Lancelot, so that all three must be close at hand, as well as as our old beauty the Thermopylae. The Lammermuir and Red Riding Hood were chartered to load coal at Newcastle for Shanghai; while in Sydney were the Forward Ho, Norman Court, and Kaisow. It was not known whether the Titania would come to the North of China or not. Of the above the Lammermuir and Thermopylae have arrived.

We have been kindly supplied with the following items from Hankow:—The Tea Market opened on the 19th. The Settlements are small; Russian houses the only buyers as yet. Through rate of freight asked for mail steamers, £6 10s.; for other steamers, £5 10s.; no rate named for sailing vessels. The keenest discussion goes on as to the respective merits of the rival companies. The "Glen," "Castle," and "Blue Funnel" lines are represented respectively by the Glendarroch, the Gordon Castle, and the Cawdor Castle and Agamemnon. The Hong Kong is, of course, backed by our German friends. A sweepstakes of some $1,300 has been subscribed to for the winners of the race, i.e., all steamers included.

The annual meeting of Ratepayers has been held. The Report and Accounts for 1873-4 and the Estimates for 1874-5 were passed. An amendment to the latter, proposed by Mr. Kidner and seconded by Mr. Wainewright, desiring an increase of taxation from 8 to 10 per cent. on rentals of Chinese houses east of Honan-road, was negatived by 210 votes against 79.—A proposal for a slight deflection of the Yangtzepoo-road near Mr. Hayes' house was adjourned.—A proposal allowing Messrs. Fogg and Co. to enclose a strip of the Bund, in consideration of their surrendering the foreshore for the use of the public, was approved.—The construction of a bridge over the Soochow Creek, at the end of Honan-road, and bunding the Hongkew shore, was approved. Power was given to raise a loan of Tls. 10,000 for widening the streets. The purchase of Messrs. George Barnet and Co.'s property for Municipal offices for Tls. 40,000 was sanctioned. The whole business was concluded by noon, Mr. Carter withdrawing the resolutions of which he had given notice, and which would otherwise have occupied the afternoon. These were adverse to the admission of proxies for ratepayers present in Shanghai, and in favour of the amalgamation of the French Settlement. A special meeting has, however, been called for the 8th June, to consider these and other pending matters.

The new Municipal Council have taken office; Mr. Purdon was elected chairman, and Mr. Wood vice-chairman. The Council resolved itself into the following committees:—Finance, Lemarchand, Carmichael, Cowie; Works, Purdon, Webb, Mackenzie; Watch, Wood, Kidner, Heyden.

The Chinese soldiers have been withdrawn for some days from the Ningpo Joss-house, and are now encamped outside the south gate, not far from Overweg's bungalow. They appear to be contemplating some stay there, as they are surrounding the camp with earthworks.

We hear that the French Consul-General has asked certain Consuls to prosecute individuals claiming their protection, for shooting Chinese during the night of the riot. We presume the reply will be that, if specific charges are brought against any one they will be investigated before the Courts in the usual form. It is well that the matter should be investigated; for though some shots fired during the heat of the riot were no doubt justifiable, there seems equally little doubt that others were fired recklessly after danger was over, and were blamable. Of course Mr. Gordeaux will institute in his own Court similar proceedings in the case of his own nationals, to those which he has asked his colleagues to take.

Judgment has been given in the case of the Assignee of the estate of L. H. Stoddard in Bankruptcy v. Olyphant and Company—in favour of the plaintiff.

The U.S.N. Company does not appear to have got to the end of its troubles yet, though the latest is one that curiously enough arises out of a success. We understand that a suit is being instituted by the North-China Insurance Company for the recovery of the amount they had paid in respect of the insurance effected on the Rona, in view of the U. S. N. Company having succeeded in their appeal against the decision of the Court at Hong Kong in the Ava-Rona collision case.

At H. B. M. Supreme Court, before Sir. E. Hornby, Chief Judge, Mr. Drummond applied, on behalf of the North-China Insurance Company (plaintiffs in the above suit), for an injunction to restrain the directors of the Union Steam Navigation Company from dealing with or distributing, before the decision of that suit, any sum they may receive from the Messageries Maritimes Company in pursuance of the judgment given in their favour by the Privy Council, and of an enquiry as to the amount of damage now proceeding at Hong Kong. After some argument, his lordship reserved decision.

Our readers will not have forgotten the Yang-yeh-lew case, which attracted so much interest a few months ago. The man was transmitted from hence to the Prefect of Soonkiong (the Shanghai Hsien's immediate superior), and there withdrew the inculpatory confession he had been constrained to make under the frightful torture inflicted on him in Shanghai. A further torture of 200 blows, however, persuaded him to go back to his original statement, and he was passed on to the Provincial Judge at Soochow, where he again recanted. Chinese law is that, if a culprit recants in a higher Court, he has to be sent back to the lower one. The necessity of reference to Shanghai was obviated by torture at Soonkiong. We do not learn whether the same process is being resorted to at Soochow, or whether Yang will be sent back to Sookiong; but if he is, no doubt the same process will be repeated; and it appears to be simply a question for him of admitting what he is desired to say, or being beaten to death.

A proclamation from the Taoutai to the producers of Silk is as follows:—On the 20th, 3rd Moon, I received a letter from Mr. Seward, U.S. Consul-General, on behalf of the whole number of Consuls, stating that the Chamber of Commerce had received letters from Europe and America, complaining that the silk of last season was no improvement, but rather worse, than that of the previous few years, of which complaint has heretofore been made. He also forwarded to me two copies of a notice prepared by the Chamber of Commerce for circulation among silk dealers. In China silk is a very important article of commerce, and all those engaged in the preparation of and dealing in silk should be faithful and honest, and on no account allow the least counterfeit in its preparation. I have before issued proclamations in regard to this matter. Having received this letter from the senior Consul, I have written to the officials in the silk district, and now issue this proclamation with the notice of the Chamber of Commerce. Let all engaged in the preparation of silk be careful to obey these instructions, and select the good from the bad, and constantly study how to improve the quality of the silk until it is perfect, and on no account allow the least infraction on what is necessary to make it perfect.

Among the passengers by the steamer from Japan is Judge Goodwin, from Yokohama, who pays a brief visit to Shanghai. Mr. N. J. Hannen, lately acting judge of H.B.M. Court at Yokohama, has also arrived by the Oregonian.

HONG KONG.

The inaugural address at Concordia Hall, Canton, was delivered by Mr. Gideon Nye. In the course of his speech Mr. Nye made the following remarks:—"The gentlemen of the committee of the Concordia Hall Association had assiduously, though quietly, pursued their duties for many months, until on the 8th ult. they simply issued cards with an intimation of dancing. There had been no imposing laying of a corner stone, no Masonic rite, nor any ceremony of Good Templars or Odd Fellows; in short, none of the 'pomp and circumstance' of beginning, prosecution or ending.

"This seems to me very much like 'hiding of their light under a bushel;' and, desiring myself to do homage to the ability and taste evinced in the erection of this elegant and substancial edifice, I crave your sympathy, Ladies and Gentlemen, in this expression of it. Our hosts may say that the modesty I impute to them is in consonance with the simple and unambitious purpose of the Concordia Hall Association, and say so very truly. For, as I understand the purpose of its founders, it means sociability and friendly intercourse; healthful recreation and mental renovation; in one compound word it means the utile-dulci—the source, at once, of modern culture and material progress—which constitute what I may call our muscular and progressive civilisation, as contrasted with the emasculated civilisation that we see around us.

"This edifice itself, while it attests, in design and execution, the greater vitality and harmony of ideas of our Western civilisation, marks also an advance in the style of architecture here since the days of the old factories, whose façades alone were little distinguishable from the hongs of the native merchants. I have spoken of the Chinese civilisation as emasculated, in contra-distinction to our own; but I intend no derisive disparagement of this more ancient civilisation, nor, indeed, do I doubt that in some essential particulars it is practically superior to our own. I allude rather to the absence in it of the progressive elements which characterise our own; and I attribute that defect not to 'the black-haired race' as a people, but to the system of government in respect to education; which, admirable as it is within its prescribed limits, is of a too circumscribed scope for the development of genius in individual character. To reluctant, conservative China we are fain to address the wondrously wise words of Shakespeare:—

> 'What custom wills, in all things should we do it,
> The dust on antique time would lie unswept,
> And mountainous error be too highly heap'd
> For Truth to overpeer.'

But we see the dawn of a better day for the 'Sons of Han,' for, although political preferment still rests upon this old system, the Peking Government has authorised the establishment of the College there and the educational Missions to Foreign countries. Such are among the significant results of the establishment of the Legations at Peking for but a dozen years, so that if we consider the state of antecedent relations we may take heart for the future."

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siam Weekly Advertiser has the following remarks apropos of a letter which appears from Captain Hopkins, of the s.s. Danube, asking for information about the Lighthouse and why it is not lighted:—The Siamese Government is in possession of a lighthouse and it has been to considerable expense in constructing a place for it at the entrance to the river. It seems a great pity after going to so much expense, and having made so much preparation, the light should not flash its rays to guide the mariner to cross the bar and enter the river in safety. If there ever is a time when a beacon light is needed it is during the stormy nights of the S.W. monsoon. During this season of the year the highest water is during the night, and if vessels cross the bar, they must do so mainly at night, why not then give them the benefit of a beacon light? The paltry expense of supplying the oil, and supporting a man to attend it, can be but a trifle, and will be more than covered by the increased facilities to the commerce of the port which will ensue. This would seem to be a legitimate expense that ought to be provided for from the revenue derived from the exports and imports. Judicious investments in needed lighthouses, canals, roads and telegraphs are investments that return a handsome income from the increased production and commerce which they create, and which yields reliable revenue to the country.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 8th June The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

The changes in the Courts, which took effect on the 1st inst. have, we understand, been materially delayed through the absence of the Chief Justice, who will now have his hands full of business to get the new arrangements in working order. Meantime, the public are inconvenienced by the unsettled condition of affairs, and one does not know where to go, or who to apply to, in order to get processes issued and served. We trust the new Court buildings will be hastened to completion with all possible speed, in order that our legal tribunals may be held with becoming dignity.

We have before us a pamphlet issued here by Mr. J. W. Floury,—formerly a light-keeper at the Horsburgh and Raffles Light-houses,—containing monthly tables of the tides at those points of observation throughout the year, with explanations on the set of the tides during the N.E. and S.W. monsoons. The title-page informs us that the book is printed under the authority of the Colonial Secretary, and the preface states that the tables have been examined by the Master Attendant, Naval surveying officers, and commanders of the French and English mail steamers, whose favourable opinion should be sufficient guarantee of the correctness of the figures. Some palpable errors in orthography appear in the explanatory remarks, but as the author's meaning nevertheless seems sufficiently clear, doubtless the book will be found very useful to shipmasters navigating the Straits.

The British steamer Mecca, Capt. Laws, from Batavia 31st May, has arrived. She reports having spoken, off Lucipara Island, the British barque Crest of the Wave, from London, Danish barque Thor, and Dutch barque Jacoba Helena, all bound to Singapore.

On the subject of fires the Straits Times has the following:—The other morning we had an opportunity of seeing, au grand soleil, the manner in which fire-engines in Singapore are transported from place to place. One of them had been pulled out of the central police station, and was being dragged about in the region of old Singapore. The pace the engine and its team, composed of a small army of peons superintended by some European police, was proceeding at was a fair average pace for such a cumbrous contrivance, and was a little faster than that of a decorous funeral. We made enquiries as to the destination of the engine, fearing that a fire had broken out somewhere. At least, thought we, the engine is being taken out to give itt pullers and haulers an opportunity of exercising themselves and their charge. But no; they were not on business of so much importance. A Chinaman who had only recently arrived in Singapore on his way to or from China had taken up his abode with a compatriot in old Singapore, where he appears to have become a trifle deranged. He locked himself in an upstairs room, and refused to be reasoned with, fed, or comforted. The window of his room looked out into a yard, and was in a line with a well about ten feet distant from the wall of the house. The well was some thirty feet deep, and the window was ten feet above the ground level. The landlord becoming importunate, the tenant became alarmed, and taking a flying leap through his window, fell into the well, and reached the bottom sound and scatheless, without even a scratch on his person. Some compatriots came, and trying to persuade him to come out, offered to find means to extricate him, but he sternly refused assistance. Accordingly the police fire-engine was sent for to pump the water out of the well. This service it performed, the police were able to descend into the well, and the man was with difficulty extricated; so that the fire-engine has not been altogether useless in its heretofore existence. It was on its errand of salvage when we saw it, and its pace was such as we have described, quite as rapid as could be expected, when its weight and the means at hand to draw it are taken into consideration, but not such as it should have been under the circumstances. We maintain that when the rescue of life from danger, or the salvage of property from the devastation of fire, are at stake, some less cumbrous system of transport for the engine should be adopted. Horses ought to be kept always at hand for the draft to the engines to places where they may be required. What with the carelessness of Malays, and the indifference of Chinese, in the matter of fire, they may be required at any spot at any moment. "Ever ready and ever effective" should be their motto. The matter of a complete arterial system of water supply throughout the town will no doubt form a matter for the prompt consideration of the municipality ere long.

PENANG.

We extract the following paragraphs from the Penang Gazette of the 30th May :—

It becomes our painful duty to have to record the death of the late Mr. Forbes Scott Brown, M. L. C., on Thursday night. We have only time to remark here that his loss is an irreparable one. Penang at the present moment has literally to mourn for the loss of her social as well as her political head. All the merchants' offices in Beach-street were closed yesterday, and the Consulate flags, as well as those on board the different ships in the harbour, were hoisted half-mast high out of respect to the memory of the deceased gentleman. The funeral, which took place last evening was attended by an immense concourse of all classes of the community.

On the 28th the Dutch steamer Semiroe arrived here from Dellie, and the Dutch steamers Holland, Ariadne, and Ardjoeno from Atchin anchored in this harbour. The Holland proceeds to Batavia, and the other three steamers are taking in cattle and provisions for Atchin. The war party at Atchin still sustain the struggle, notwithstanding the repeated defeats they encounter.

The inhabitants of Perlak (a state near Edie) have assumed a hostile attitude towards Edie, but measures have been taken by the naval commander on the East Coast to resist any attacks from that quarter. The latest accounts report all quiet at Edie, and the probability of a garrison of Dutch troops being quartered at the chief place. The blockade of Tamiang (south east coast) has been raised, that State having hoisted the Dutch flag.

His Excellency Sir Andrew Clarke arrived in s.s. Pluto, accompanied by Major McNair, Dr. Little, and Mr. Braddell. At half-past eleven in the forenoon the vessel steamed in and anchored in the harbour, and after a delay of about an hour the whole party came ashore. A guard of honour from Her Majesty's 10th Regiment was stationed at the jetty, and a salute from Fort Cornwallis announced the landing. A large number of the inhabitants, including Europeans, Mahomedan and Chinese, were congregated to do honour to the occasion of his Excellency's first official visit to this Settlement ; all the ships in the harbour were dressed up with flags. On Monday, at noon, a levee was held at Suffolk House, which was largely attended by the different classes of the community. Lady Clarke held a reception at the same time and place.

His Honour the Chief Justice has closed the Criminal Sessions ; the prisoners in the riot cases were all found guilty, two of them were sentenced to eighteen, and the others to nine months' rigorous imprisonment each. The Civil Sittings commenced on Wednesday last.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—But little improvement had taken place in the state of the market. A moderate business had been done in 16 to 24 Yarn, at easier rates for the common qualities ; other counts having been almost entirely neglected. In Grey Shirtings there had been very little doing, although at the close some inquiry was shown for 9 lbs., 45 in. goods. A fair business had been done in Turkey Reds, and the better qualities of Plain Orleans, and Italian Cloths had been fairly saleable. The market for Metals was further depressed.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—Another month of dulness and inactivity is recorded, though towards the close a better tone had become manifest.—Cottons. —Yarns : Deliveries had been next to nothing, and prices were nominal. Grey Shirtings had been moved off to a very moderate extent only. The demand for Turkey Red Cambrics continued at about former rates. For Victoria Lawns there had been a fair enquiry. Worsteds and Woollens.—Black Orleans had commanded a fair sale ; prices were unchanged. Mousselines had met with good enquiry, and prices were firmer.—Nail Rods.—A further decline was noted.

SHANGHAI.—The principal Plain Cotton staples had been in fairly continuous request throughout the week, Drills and Mexican T-Cloths being the favourites. The destination of most of the purchases was still rather doubtful. Tientsin excepted, the advices from the outports were against operating largely on this market, and even from the North there had been little better news. The late rains in Chihli had considerably quieted the apprehensions as to the safety of the growing crops, and to this circumstance the Shirting market was greatly indebted for the business and slight improvement. In Woollens there had been rather more doing.

MANILA.—The market for Plain Staples had exhibited a slightly better feeling, and dealers seemed more inclined to operate, but in most cases would not offer any advance upon previous quotations, There was no change to report upon uncoloured goods, values of which remained unaltered.

EXPORTS.

—o—

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had shown great activity, settlements from the 11th May having rather exceeded 3,000 piculs. Arrivals had been heavy, and in consequence prices had suffered a decline, closing rates ranging from $45 to 65 per picul, for qualities classing from fine to choice. Export from 1st June to date, 12,438,613, against 11,756,272 lbs. in corresponding period last season.

HIOGO-OSAKA.—The first arrivals of new leaf were offered about the 7th May, and a few small lots were bought up at prices ranging from $51 to 53 for choice, but owing to heavy rains, and supplies in consequence coming forward very slowly, coupled with advices of high opening rates at Yokohama, the market rapidly advanced, and at the close $57 to 62 was the range of prices. Settlements (to the 15th May, inclusive) of new leaf had been about 850 piculs, and of old leaf 750 piculs. Shipments to other ports in Japan were 469 boxes for the month. There was scarcely any stock, as arrivals were eagerly taken at ruling rates, viz., choice $57 finest, $62.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Evans, Pugh, and Co.'s Report says :—Our report for the season 1873-4 was issued on Jan. 23, since which date no business in Tea has been transacted at this port. The total export for that season was, according to Custom-house returns, 61,842,532 lbs., against 60,993,577 lbs., in the season 1872-1873, and 62,322,446 lbs. in 1871-1872. Fifteen musters of the new crop, consisting of 8 chops from Chon-sow-ki, 2 from Pin-kong, 2 from Yong-low-tong, 2 from Ningchow, and 1 from Neb-ka-see, were put on the market yesterday. Before the day was over 2 chops of fine Chonsowkis were bought at about Tls. 37, being three taels higher than the opening rates last season for this class. We have not as yet seen enough of the crop to be able to express an opinion as to the quality of it, and would at present merely remark that we consider the Chonsowkis nice Teas. The steamers Agamemnon, Glenfalloch, Glenartney, Hong Kong, Cawdor Castle, and Gordon Castle are here waiting to load for London ; £5 10s. per ton of 40 feet is the rate of freight named for them. The sailing vessels Cutty Sark, Lammermuir, and Ada are expected to load for London. The steamer Russia is on the berth for Odessa, and the Tchihatchoff is also to load for the same port.

SHANGHAI.—There had been nothing done, with the exception of th shipment of a small parcel of Green to London. News had arrive e from Hankow to the effect that the new season for Black Tea wad opened on the 19th May, by the purchase of a few parcels at exceed-s ingly high rates. There was great secrecy preserved so far as to what has actually been done, but it was clear that two chops of "Chonglow-kai" had been bought to cost laid down 2s. 5d. per lb., and a chop of "Ping-kong" of fair quality to cost about 1s. 11d. There were doubtless several other settlements, but they were not at the moment accurately known. It was, however, evident that opening prices had been extreme.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Natives were willing to make some small concessions, but buyers had been little disposed to operate at quotations. The stock, as before, offered little opportunity for selection. Some parcels of coarse silk had been returned to the country for native consumption. The silk-worms are reported as progressing well. Settlements 150 bales, stock 800 bales.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

The general characteristics of the Produce Markets have been a continuation of the previous inactivity and absence of speculative inquiry, and as supplies of most articles exceed even the increased consumption, the movements in prices have again been unfavourable to the importer—the exceptions being few and not of first importance.

TEA.

During the past week there has been a fair business doing, considering the time of year, dealers as a rule holding very light stocks, the 60,000,000 lbs. in stock on 30th ult. being distributed over a wide circle. Heavy supplies of Tayshan leaf have come to hand, which are selling at reasonable prices, ranging from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d. ; this class of Tea has been of great service as a substitute for country Congous, the stock of which is much reduced. At the public sales odds and ends of parcels of fine Teas have sold at low prices. The Glenartney, Agamemnon, and Glenfalloch are due the latter end of next week. The report of the Committee on the Adulteration Act has been printed, and, as regards Tea, is viewed as highly satisfactory, and will doubtless cause a favourable reaction ; in fact, several parcels of "clean" Caper have already changed hands, while the feeling is that a substantial advance will take place in all good Green Tea.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—There has been little alteration in our Tea Market during the past week, the trade only operating for their immedediate requirements. Further arrivals of new season's Canton Congous have been difficult of sale, at slightly easier rates. For Scented Teas there is no demand, and lower prices must be taken to effect sales. The deliveries for the week, as compared with last year, are as follows :—

Coastwise	497,000	...	528,000
Exports	720,000	...	972,000
	3,127,000	...	3,261,000

Digitized by Google

Messrs. Percival and Co.'s Circular says :—The past month has been one of continued and unusual quietude, and although deliveries have been large, say close on 14,000,000 lbs., dealers (in consequence of the limited demand from the country) have simply bought sufficient to meet their insignificant requirements. The amount of business has therefore been small, beyond precedent, and confined chiefly to public sale, at which about 65,000 packages have been disposed of "without reserve."

SILK.

The market continues steady, and a very fair daily business is doing in Chinas at unchanged rates; manufacturers seeming willing to buy at present quotations. Cantons are in little more demand, but there is no improvement in prices. Japan firm but quieter. Deliveries from 1st inst. are satisfactory—say from the 1st to the 8th inst. : China, 1,021 ; Canton, 236 ; Japan, 235 ; Bengal, 200. Total, 1,692 bales.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour, and Co.'s Circular, dated Lyons, July 4th, says :—For another week after our advices of the 6th June all reports concerning the Silk crop remained extremely favourable ; quotations of Cocoons to arrive fell again materially, and the depression of our market was becoming daily greater. Since a reaction has gradually taken place. On all markets of production arrivals of Cocoons proved far less important than expected ; reelers, unable to complete their intended supply, were compelled to pay everywhere a considerable advance. In France prices of Japanese rose from f.3.90/4.50 to f.4.50/5.25 ; Piedmont, f.3.60/4 to f.5.25/6 ; Lombardy, f.3.25/4 to f.3.70/4.50. This unexpected reduction in the estimates of the crop, and the enhanced cost of new Silk, induced manufacturers to make important contracts to arrive, especially in classical French and Italian filatures. The activity became more general when complaints were heard about the inferior yield of Cocoons, and a rise of f.3 to f.6 from the lowest point, was established on all European Silks. Asiatic throwns, and raws more particularly, have led also to very important transactions, but arrivals had so much accumulated that, in spite of higher rates telegraphed from China, importers, showing themselves desirous to clear the rather important old stock, have only obtained so far an insignificant rise.

THE MAILS.

PRESENT INWARD MAIL.—MARSEILLES, JULY 8.—The Messageries Maritimes steamer Amazone, with the inward French mails from China and Japan, arrived here to-day at 5 P.M. She brings eighty-eight passengers and a general cargo, including 197 bales of silk, 30,292 packages of tea, and 1,831 packages of sundries for London, which part of her cargo, will be forwarded to its destination per Company's steamer Euphrate, due in London on or about the 21st inst.

INWARD MAIL DUE JULY 27.—GALLE, JUNE 28.—The Messageries Maritimes steamer Ava, with the inward French mails from China and Japan, Shanghai on the 7th, and Batavia on the 18th June, left here to-day for Aden.—ADEN, JULY 8.—The Ava left here to-day for Suez and Marseilles.

INWARD MAIL DUE AUGUST 3.—GALLE, JULY 8.—The P. and O. Company's steamer Zambesi leaves for Suez with the Australian and China mails to-day. Specie £670,000.

OUTWARD MAIL OF JUNE 5.—GALLE, JULY 30.—The Messageries Maritimes steamer Meikong, from Marseilles 7th ult., left here to-day for Singapore.

Literature.

From Trübner's Monthly Record we learn that Mr. N. B. Dennys has in the press a handbook of the Canton Vernacular of the Chinese Language, which will be of great use for domestic and business purposes. The lessons are printed in three columns. 1, the English text ; 2, the Chinese version in Chinese characters ; and 3, the pronunciation of the Chinese, phonetically printed in Roman characters.

The same periodical also gives a rather interesting "account of the steps that have been taken in China, on the part of the representatives of Government, to make good the literary losses entailed through the ravages of the Taiping rebels." The writer observes that "at more than half the great literary centres, formerly renowned for their printing establishments and their bibliopolic treasures, the most wanton destruction was perpetrated by the insurgents, into whose hands such cities as Loochow, Hangchow, Nanking, and Wuchang fell. With that laudable reverence for their own literature which shines as a redeeming feature amidst the corruption of Chinese officials, solicitude was very early displayed by the high provincial functionaries, among the cares of reorganising the local Governments, for the restoration of supplies of the standard literature of the country. Kwan Wên, Governor-General of Hupeh and Hunan, was the first to take action in this respect. An official printing and publishing committee was established at the provincial capital, Wuchang-fu, under the title Tsung Wên Shu Kiih, . . . to which the task was committed of reproducing the classical or canonical works, the national histories, the treatises of the schoolmen and critics, whose writings have been stamped with Imperial approbation, and also sundry modern works of a miscellaneous character." This establishment, we learn, "occupies a spacious official building, in one part of which is the department where the works already printed are offered for sale. Outside the door is suspended a list of the works obtainable within, with the prices of each set forth according to the quality of paper upon which the purchaser may choose to have his impression. There are three grades of fineness in this respect. . . . . It appears that the whole of the canonical works and the recognised commentaries have been printed, together with about one-third of the dynastic histories, a great number of poetical collections and many works of a miscellaneous character. Amongst these may be mentioned one of the earliest productions of the committee, viz., an atlas of the Chinese Empire, in thirty thin volumes, drawn up under the patronage of the Governor-General, Kwan-Wen, and embodying all the geographical details derivable from the Jesuit surveys of the last century in combination with the particulars yielded by purely native sources. Although arranged on a cumbrous plan, the sheets, several thousand in number, being devised in such a manner as to form one vast map if unbound and pasted together, but not running continuously through the work, this atlas is undoubtedly far in advance of any previous native undertaking of the kind. . . . . A similar enterprise, although on a smaller scale, has been instituted at Nanking, and the productions of these printing establishments are gradually finding their way all over the Empire."

It is announced that the alterations and repairs to the Audacious, so as to fit her for a flag-ship on the China station, are to be completed by the 30th proximo. The alterations ordered were very extensive, as accommodation will have to be provided for a larger number of officers and men than has hitherto formed her crew, besides having to provide suitable quarters for the admiral in charge of the station and those attached to his staff.

The Adventure, screw troopship, Capt. John D'Arcy, sailed from Portsmouth on the 5th inst., on a round of foreign troop service, the particulars of which were detailed in our issue of the 26th ult.

In the annual report from the Trafalgar, training-ship, just published, an outbreak of measles is reported. It appeared first in the person of an officer (a Japanese), who was sent on shore to sick quarters at Portland. The medical officer of the Shearwater, surveying vessel, reports a fatal case of meningitis. It was that of an officer, who, prior to joining the ship, had served five years in a gunboat in China. The report from the Royal Marine Artillery at Eastney mentions a somewhat remarkable case of the loss of an eye. The patient received the injury while shooting at wild fowls in China ; the gun he was using exploded, and a portion of the metal was blown across the left eye, carrying away the wall of the eye and portions of the orbit and palpapræ. After being under treatment for some time on board his ship, and once subsequently in hospital on that station, he was invalided, and sent home. Being a man of good character, it was thought proper to see if he could be made available for land duty ; this, however, was found to be impossible. The parts around the original wound again inflamed, and the patient complained of constant pain near the orbit and across the frontal bone ; and as already several small portions of bone had been removed, it was not improbable that more might have to come away. After keeping the patient under observation for some time he was brought forward for survey, and invalided from the service. The surgeon to the Royal Marines at Forton mentions a case of disease of the bones, resulting from an old compound fracture of both legs ; the man had been invalided from China. A case of phthsis (in which the patient had been invalided from China), and a case of insanity (invalided from the Midge, in China), are reported from the Marine Division at Plymouth. The case of a marine, invalided from China with more than thirteen years' service, and a history of attacks extending over four years, is mentioned in the cases of epilepsy in the Marine Division at Chatham ; and a case of orchitis, following an injury received on the China station two years before, and a case of varicocele (that of a man invalided from China for dysentery) appear in the same report. Four cases of dysentery are reported from Melville Hospital, Chatham. They were all from the China station—two from the Zebra, one from the Juno, and one from the North German frigate Herth. One man returned to duty, one was invalided, and two died.

Colonel G. F. S. Call, half-pay, late 18th Foot, has been selected for the distinguished service pension, vacant by the appointment of Lieutenant-General Lord H. Percy to the colonelcy of the 89th Foot. Colonel Call served with the 18th Royal Irish throughout the first China expedition (medal), and was present at the first capture of Chusan, attack of the forts of the Bocca Tigris, storming of the heights and forts at Canton, and destruction of the forts and capture of Amoy ; and employed on the staff in 1841-42 as sub-assistant commissary-general. He also served throughout the Burmese war of 1852-53, and in the Crimea from December, 1854, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol.

The distinguished service pension lately vacated by Lieut.-General Haly, C.B., on his appointment to the colonelcy of the 106th Regiment, has been conferred on Brevet-Colonel J. W. Thomas, C.B., the 40th Brigade Depot. Colonel Thomas served with the 67th Regiment throughout the campaign of 1860 in North China, and was wounded while in command of a wing as part of the covering and storming party at the capture of the North Taku Fort (mentioned in despatches, C.B., medal with two clasps). He commanded the 67th Regiment at the second capture of Kading from the Taeping rebels in 1862.

FLOGGING THE DEAD HORSES OF THE STRAITS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—It is to be regretted that Lord Stanley of Alderley should have made another onslaught on Sir Harry Ord and his administration of the Straits Settlements. He could not have expected any practical result from the motion in the absence of any petition or formal complaint. Had the attack been made during the Ordian rule it might have been productive of much good, and might have spared the Straits some years of evil government, and it might have saved the public some considerable sums of money uselessly and therefore wickedly squandered. Now that Sir Harry Ord is almost forgotten, and therefore forgiven, it is a sad waste of time to rake up the scandals of the quasi-regal palace or the steamers and presents. The Straits people, having got rid of their nightmare, are endeavouring to improve the passing hour under a better and more enlightened administration. What care they now if, when money runs short to carry out his great projects, Sir Harry Ord threatened to interfere with the freedom of their ports? What is it to them now that he endeavoured to create sinecures or accumulate offices for the sole benefit of his protégés? What if he were greedy of presents, regardless of the natural consequences to British prestige with the natives? He was defeated by the Colonial Office and the Straits Association on the two first points, and the fire at the Pantechnicon has avenged the latter. Sir Harry Ord is, in so far as the Straits are concerned, dead and buried, and has left the Government House at Singapore as a stupendous monument of his vanity and folly. It strikes us that Lord Stanley might employ his undoubted talents and valuable local knowledge to more purpose if he would devote them to the development of the more enlightened policy initiated by Sir Andrew Clarke, and assisted in the great and good work of opening up the Malay Peninsula to British influence and commerce. Sooner or later this must be done, and it were better if it were done with a good grace now, rather than have it forced upon us by uncontrollable circumstances. Here would be a large field for his lordship's philanthropy to work in, with results more gratifying to his friends and to himself than can be obtained from flogging a dead horse.—Yours obediently,

A

THE ADULTERATION OF FOOD.—REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

The report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons appointed to inquire into the Adulteration of Food Act has been issued. With regard to the adulteration of Tea the Report runs as follows:—It appears that since the report of 1856 certain grossly-prepared teas have been imported from China, some being largely mixed with exhausted leaves and ferruginous sand, and others much too highly faced or coloured; the ingredients used for colouring being chiefly Prussian-blue or indigo, powdered gypsum, and turmeric; but the total amount of such teas has been small, and is kept in check mainly by the low price of pure teas. The import of green teas has recently fallen considerably, in consequence, it is stated, of the operations of the Act Facing tea after the duty is paid was, prior to the Act of 1872, practised to a small extent in this country; but whether in China or at home, the evidence is conclusive that in colouring tea no deleterious matter is used to such an extent as to be absolutely injurious to health; at the same time facing may be employed to conceal tea of a bad quality. Your Committee have reason to believe that very little adulteration of tea is practised in this country. They would further observe that de facing tea, or removing artificial colour, seems now much more common, but this process does not appear to extract the ingredients which form the base of the colouring matter; it simply removes the colour, leaving all the other materials on the tea. It is proved that the bright green teas of China are always faced, and that the natural green teas of Japan, India, &c., are frequently of a colour hardly distinguishable from some qualities of black tea. While condemning the practice of highly facing tea, your Committee cannot recommend that fairly faced green tea should be condemned as an adulterated article. Suggestions have been made that a certain per-centage should be allowed for colouring matters and other impurities in tea. But your Committee consider that the limitation to a very small per-centage of foreign matter would exclude from the country some wholesome low-priced teas, which are largely consumed by the poor, and if a less stringent limit were adopted, it might have the effect of increasing the amount of facing laid upon the better descriptions of green teas. It has been repeatedly suggested to your Committee that an examination of tea, for the purpose of detecting impurities, should be undertaken on landing by the Customs, and that all tea found to be seriously adulterated should not be admitted for home consumption. The Chairman of the Customs admitted that such an inspection of tea in bond could be undertaken by the Custom-house officers, and that the great bulk of the tea would require but a brief examination by good practical officials, whilst suspected samples could be analysed at the laboratory at Somerset House. Your Committee recommend that this examination should be made, as they believe it would practically stop the sale in this country of tea adulterated abroad, and relieve the retail dealer from the hardship which now arises from his being held answerable for certain manipulations of which he may be wholly ignorant.

THE RIOT AT SHANGHAI.—A writer in The Times, referring to the riots at Shanghai, says:—The riot which your Shanghai Correspondent describes in The Times of the 7th of July occurred at Shanghai, at the old strangers' burying-ground, surrounding the Ningpo-wei-Koong, better known to foreigners as "the Ningpo Joss." This large building, which stands in the centre of an immense cemetery, is situated in the south-western extremity of the French Concession, and close to the walls of the city of Shanghai. I remember it when it was a hospice, or place of refuge, supported by the Ningpo Guild, for distressed strangers—i.e., for Chinamen (mostly sailors) from Ningpo and other provinces—and the vast chambers, enclosed within the western quadrangular court, were piled to the roof with innumerable coffins, which were cleared out when the building was taken and used as a barrack by our troops in the war of 1860. I have heard, from a most reliable source, that the Japanese expedition to chastise certain aborigines of Formosa for plundering wrecked vessels has been countermanded, in consequence of the firm and decided attitude of the Chinese Government. Formosa is an integral portion of the Chinese Empire, and with the powerful forces at the disposal of the War Minister at Peking, it was hardly reasonable to suppose that an invasion of Chinese territory would have been tolerated.

THE SINGAPORE AND AUSTRALIA ROUTE.—A passenger on board the Flintshire sends an interesting letter to the Sydney Morning Herald, in which he gives an account of the voyage, and adds "No delicate stomached lotus eater bound to Camelot or nowhere but to float on for ever, could desire a more pleasant journey." But while every allowance should be made both for the agents of the company and the Queensland Government for deficiencies in arrangement when starting a new line, there was one thing which struck all the passengers, and that was the apparent indifference or ignorance of Government officials.

THE JAPANESE AT FORMOSA.—The following telegram referring to the Japanese war against Formosa were received last night at the London office of the New York Herald:—"Amoy, July 9. The Japanese operations are virtually ended. Important conferences held at Formosa. China pays expenses of the expedition, and guarantees safety to foreigners. Japan will accept and retire."

MR. EDWARD B. DREW, having been intrusted by the Inspector-General of Chinese Customs, Mr. Hart, with the duty of appointing three young gentlemen for service in the Chinese Customs, has selected Messrs. Charles C. Clarke, of East Cambridge; Hosea B. Morse, of Medford; and William F. Spinney, of Salem; all graduates of Harvard University of the class of 1874.

MR. C. R. HARFORD, underwriter to the Thetis Marine Insurance Company, has resigned, and Mr. John D. Aspland, the secretary, is appointed interim underwriter.

THE Netherlands Royal Mail Company's steamer Princess Amalia, from Southampton, arrived at Suez on the 6th inst., and proceeded for Java.

HAMBURG, JULY 7.

The proverbial uncertainty of the law has just received another striking exemplification by the judgment of the Tribunal of Commerce having been reversed by the Ober-Gericht or Superior Court of this city under the following circumstances. It appears that in the year 1868 Herr ——, a merchant at Tientsin, where he was also the Hamburg Consul, to the great surprise of his creditors, suspended payment, stating that if his offer of a composition were rejected he should declare himself insolvent. He offered them 40 per cent., proceeding, as he alleged, out of the dowry of his wife, but it turned out subsequently that the money was not forthcoming, and a commission of bankruptcy was ordered to be opened against him. But to the execution of this the unforeseen difficulty occurred, that being himself the Consul there was no other official in the place to work the bankruptcy in the name of the Hamburg authorities, there being at that time no consular convention in existence between Hamburg and China to allow another Hamburg citizen to proceed should the Consul be incapacited. According to the Hamburg Bankruptcy Law it is provided that in such a case the person authorised to conduct the affair is the nearest Hamburg Consul. This was Mr. Consul Heinssen, of Shanghai, who wound up the concern, the creditors receiving a dividend of fifteen per cent., the wife having withdrawn the amount of her dowry and deposited it in the hands of a relation of her husband in this city. This having come to the knowledge of one of the creditors—Herr W. E. Webendorff, of Krimitschau, in Saxony—he instituted proceedings against him before the Tribunal of Commerce, claiming payment of 20,000 thalers which the late Consul at Tientsin still owed him. The defendant pleaded that the bankruptcy had been wound up in the usual and legal manner, that the plaintiff had received his 15 per cent. dividend out of the estate, as the other creditors had done, and that he had, therefore, no further claim to make. The Commercial Tribunal took the same view of the case, decreed the plaintiff nonsuited, condemned him in the costs, and ordered the money, which had been placed under sequestration, to be returned to the defendant. In the reasons they give for their decision they state that the bankruptcy case was conducted in a perfectly legal manner; that from the moment the Consul was declared bankrupt he lost his official appointment and social status as Hamburg Consul at Tientsin, or at all events his functions as such were suspended till the termination of the proceedings against him, and were by law performed by the nearest Consular officer; and that the documents go to show that Herr Heinssen did his duty in the most impartial and satisfactory manner.

On appeal being made to the Ober-Gericht, that tribunal took a very different view of the case, and have just delivered judgment, quashing the decision of the inferior Court, and deciding the case in favour of the appellant. In the reasons they assign for this divergence of opinion they maintain that the appellate's objections to the bankruptcy proceedings are not valid, because the case was conducted in an irregular manner. In the first place, there was no appointment of a Massen-Gericht, or court of adjudication, as required by the Hamburg laws; secondly, there was no proof that the bankrupt had taken the manifestation oath; thirdly, that the estate had not been administered by impartial persons, as no assignees were appointed; and lastly, it was not to be found in the papers and official documents produced whether the wife of the bankrupt had made out a clear case of her legal right to claim her dowry. The appellant has therefore gained his cause, and he is to receive his 20,000 thalers, the appellate having, moreover, to pay the costs.

In the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung is a communication from Peking, stating that Lu-tien-yu, the murderer of Herr D. W. Brinckmann, has been executed at Fu-shan, near Chefoo, and his accomplices, Sung-hung-te and Wang-urh, are transported to a penal station on the frontiers. The search for You-yan-hui, the instigator of the murder, had as yet not been attended with success, but was being prosecuted with energy by the Chinese authorities, whose conduct in the whole affair is described as worthy of praise, especially in supporting the endeavours of Messrs. Crasemann, Hagen, and Vasmer, merchants of Chefoo, who, in the absence of the German Vice-Consul, are empowered to act as his substitute.

Dr. Erwin Stammann, a native of this city, who till the end of last year was German Consul at Helsingfors, in Finland—and has since been promoted to be Chargé d'Affaires accredited with the United Republics of Venesuela, where he now is—has received from the Czar of Russia the Order of St. Stanislaus of the Second Class, surmounted by the Imperial Crown, as a special distinction, in recognition of his conduct while Consul in Finland. Dr. Stammann, who for some time was charged also with the Consular representation of Belgium, and did good service in settling some difficulties with regard to the Borga and Kervo Railway, has been also recently appointed by the King of the Belgians to be Officer or Knight Commander of the Order of Leopold.

By a letter of the 22nd May from Saigon we learn that the official Courier de Saigon of that date contains a decree of the Governor ordering that in future all steamers entering the ports of Cochin China will be liable to pay tonnage dues every time they arrive. Formerly these dues were levied every four months, and more recently every two months.

Arrivals from the Far East.—Herr H. J. Ankersmit and lady, from Batavia; Capt. Borndorff, from Taschkent; Herr H. Nacher, from Dehli (Sumatra); H. Miesegaes, from Batavia.

COMMERCIAL.

A better feeling prevails for Rice, notwithstanding the large supplies that have come to hand since my last, and extensive dealings were entered into. Japan Rice is a new article of trade here, but appears to give satisfaction to the dealers, and both cargoes mentioned below were sold immediately, as was the Saigon—altogether 57,000 bags—and 850 tons to arrive per Alma. The market closes firm. A fair amount of business has been done in Teas at former rates, the sales by importers comprising 530/4 chests, 1,546/8 do., and 180/16 do. Congou, and about 600 packages Souchong.

ROTTERDAM, JULY 8.

We may fairly say les extremes se touchent when we compare the First with the Second Chamber. The last-named is, and not without reason, accused of extreme prolixity, whilst the Lords, who constitute the bulwark of the Throne, appear to constitute themselves an office for the registration of Bills. Within a few hours some twenty Bills were voted unanimously. The last of these Bills asked a credit for the East India service, and upon this a warm debate took place, which was concluded by a vote which is applauded by the Conservatives and deeply regretted by the Liberals. You will remember that the Minister of the Colonial Department some time ago laid several documents regarding the Atchin war before the members. The Second Chamber discussed them in Committee, and the opinion prevailed that the Lords would do the same. The Senate had nearly finished its task when some of the Ministerial members endeavoured to provoke a debate, or at least to obtain a vote of confidence. Having this in view the following clause was inserted in the section report: "In two sections several members were of opinion that, now that the Minister of the Colonial Department has tendered his resignation, it is the duty of the House to give their opinion upon the documents regarding the Atchin war. These members thank the Minister for having furnished these documents, and, without entering into further particulars, they, having examined them, are convinced that the war with Atchin was just and obligatory, and that the promptitude with which all the measures were taken deserves to be applauded." In the Second Chamber no one had dared to make such a proposal, which, of course, would most certainly have been rejected, because opinion is still divided as to whether the war was a necessity or no. Mr. Hartsen, a pur sang Conservative, did not agree with this proposal, and he at once endeavoured to neutralise it by another motion, viz., that "The First Chamber being of opinion that in the present political situation it is not in the interest of the country to say what the members think about the Atchin documents, they thank the Minister of the Colonial Department and pass to the order of the day." Mr. Duymaer van Twist, a Liberal, backed the motion, and this ought to be a warning sign. But most unhappily Mr. Pincoffs, who is more Ministerial than the Minister, answered that he had obtained what he wished to obtain, because the report, in which the favourable opinion was stated, was a printed official document. This was still more imprudent. Several members now rose and protested, because they did not wish that their silence should be regarded as an approbation. At this juncture the Minister took part in the debate. He said it is most probably the last time that I shall speak from this place, and I must say that I do not share the opinion either of Mr. Hartsen or Mr. Twist. Do the existing political circumstances prevent the House from giving an opinion upon the question if the declaration of war with the Sultan of Atchin was just? I don't think so. On the contrary, I think that occasion most favourable. The House asked that the documents should be laid before the members, and why are they reluctant to discuss them? The judgment would have still more value because the members did not meddle with the political struggles, by which the Cabinet was overthrown. If they don't enter into discussion, then I must come to the conclusion that they think the documents satisfactory. Even if the Chamber should pass a vote of confidence the Minister said he would maintain his determination to resign. Notwithstanding these positive declarations, however, the motion of Mr. Hartsen was carried by a very large majority.

This, of course, has entirely altered the position of affairs. The King, I hear, wished that the Minister should remain in office till he returns from his trip to Switzerland, next month. There would also be no more question of a dissolution, which by most of the Liberal papers is regarded as a necessity. But on the other hand we must not forget that in the course of this month the Budget for 1875 must be prepared, and it would be inconsistent that a new Ministry should be called upon to defend a Budget of the old one. I fear that it will be very difficult to make a Ministerial combination which would be backed by a majority, and I am informed that the present Ministry will most positively decline to remain in office and to dissolve the Second Chamber. This measure they will leave to the new Cabinet to apply if needful.

Some time ago I mentioned that Mr. Pompe Van Meerdervoort, a doctor of medicine at the Hague, had been appointed a member of our Embassy in Japan. Most probably this appointment is due to Enamotto, who is well-known here, because he was educated in this country and he lived for a long time at the Hague. He returned to Japan with some vessels which were constructed in Dutch yards for the Japanese Government. On his arrival in Japan he was appointed ambassador at St. Petersburg. Our department of Foreign Affairs received some time ago a sum of f.330,000 on account of the Simonoseki indemnity, and this sum was now followed by another instalment of the same amount. The Minister intends to expend a part of this money upon a new hotel for the successive Ministers of the department for Foreign Affairs. This plan, however, meets with much opposition, both in the Press and in Parliament.

ROTTERDAM, JULY 9.

There is a great lack of soldiers for our East India army. The Minister has re-issued the decree by which f.200 is promised to any young soldier who will enrol himself for four years' service, whilst a bonus of f.300 is given for six years. The Minister has also addressed to the officers of the General Staff a request that they shall engage themselves for three years in Java, in order to re-organise the General Staff. It is said that Captains J. C. C. de Beer Poortugael and A. Kool have volunteered.

It is now officially stated that the gift of the nation, which was presented to the King on the 12th of May, amounted to f.196.891. A cadeau has yet to arrive from the Dutch residents in Japan, and another from the children in Java.

The election for the vacant seat at Amersfoort has not been favourable to the anti-revolutionists, Mr. Van Asch Van Wyk having been beaten by a small majority by the Conservative candidate, Mr. Van Goltstein.

General Verspyck will arrive in a few days at the Hague. The Conservative Dagblad suggests that he should receive an ovation.

Mr. J. H. Schröder is appointed secretary to the Steam Ship Company "Java," in place of Mr. H. Heybroek, jun.

I regret to record the death of Mr. W. Verschnur, the animal painter. His pictures are much celebrated.

Two sons of the Crown Prince of Prussia have arrived at the watering place of Scheveningen.

Her Majesty the Queen will return from Marienbad on the 30th inst.

THE RIOT AT SHANGHAI.

THE mail from China has put us in possession of the full particulars of the recent riot on the French concession at Shanghai. It seems that, a short time since, a dispute arose between the Ningpo guild and the French Municipal Council concerning a project of the latter to make certain roads through the Ningpo burial grounds. The undertaking was one which deeply affected the religious instincts of the Chinamen, and public feeling ran high on the subject. However, to the credit of the Ningpo men, be it said, that up to the moment when the riot actually broke out they left their case entirely in the hands of the guild; no overt demonstration of hostility occurred, and in all probability the question in dispute would have been peaceably arranged had not an untoward collision between the French police and a party of Ningpo men set the smouldering fire in a blaze. How or by whom the first blow was struck is a disputed point, but the fact remains that a policeman was subjected to a good deal of illusage; that the houses of the Inspector of Roads and of other Frenchmen were attacked, and that one other foreigner, a Miss MACLEAN, a missionary lady, escaped violence only by satisfying the mob that she was not a Frenchwoman. Later in the afternoon the appearance of landing parties from the American and French men-of-war in harbour, and of the Shanghai volunteers, restored order.

Such, briefly stated, are the circumstances connected with this outbreak of popular feeling, and there is no disguising the fact that they add another instance of the want of consideration that Frenchmen as a nation so often show to the beliefs and prejudices of Orientals. It cannot be denied that in too many instances the French missionaries who have suffered death in the interior of China have brought martyrdom upon themselves by their disregard for so much that Chinamen hold sacred; to the same cause must be attributed the late assassinations and massacres in Tongkin, and in the instance before us it was by ignoring the faith most deeply rooted in the minds of the people that the French Municipal Councillors aroused passions which ended in riot and bloodshed. The belief in the intimate connection which exists between the living and the dead, and the consequent necessity that the graves of those who have departed to the land of spirits, having once been placed in the most favourable positions, should be left in undisturbed repose, is as firmly as it is generally held throughout the land. It is a cardinal point in the "Feng-Shui superstition," and one which has hitherto acted as the most formidable opponent to the introduction of Christianity and railroads. Any attempt, therefore, to overcome so strong a prejudice should have been made with great circumspection, and with due consideration for the feelings of those interested; but, with every respect for the French Municipal Council of Shanghai, we must take leave to doubt whether they are a body in whose hands it would be safe to leave such a delicate negotiation. As is too often the case with the French, the moment when calmness and firmness was most needed they surrendered. It is only right to add that it was the Consul, M. GODEAUX, who committed this very weak act. As soon as the affair reached a riot the whole course of things was altered, and the rioters should have been made to understand that order must be first established, and negotiations could then ensue. To post a proclamation, such as it seems M. GODEAUX did, in the thick of the row, was very distinctly to prove that fear took possession of the foreigners. For the rioters to have practically gained their ends is the most disastrous precedent, and cannot be too severely condemned. The fact that the interests of all Europeans in China are inseparably bound up together, gives us a right thus freely to comment on the conduct of our neighbours. That the outbreak was directed against the French only is proved by the fact that the instant the mob became aware that Miss MACLEAN was not of that nationality they helped her to a place of security. But it must be remembered that this was also the case at Tientsin, and that yet others besides Frenchmen were stricken down by the blow which was aimed exclusively at them.

LORD STANLEY ON THE STRAITS.

THE subject of the Administration of the Straits Settlements under the late Governor was introduced in the House of Lords on the 6th inst. by Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY. In bringing the subject before the Secretary of State for the Colonies, Lord STANLEY alluded to a former motion he had made respecting the Straits, and his utter failure to elicit anything but contradictions. Lord STANLEY felt bound to ask for an inquiry into the administration of the Straits up to November, 1873, as a matter of justice to the new Governor, who ought to be permitted to start fair. His Lordship then touched upon the subject of the charges made against the late Governor in the Straits Times, and stated his opinion that it was the duty of the Government to ascertain clearly the truth of those statements, and either clear the late Governor or prosecute the Straits Times for calumny. His Lordship then alluded to various other matters, including the steamers, the opium farming, and the flogging of the Chinese rioters, and he considered that these matters were sufficient justification for an inquiry, as in his opinion those who would screen the late Administration of the Straits from a thorough investigation, or who would refuse to produce the correspondence and papers which could throw light upon it, merely pleaded guilty to it. The Earl of KIMBERLEY, the late Colonial Secretary, in reply, said that Lord STANLEY had evidently misunderstood him if he had believed him to have said that Sir HARRY ORD had never made any mistakes. While considering that Sir HARRY had been attacked rather unfairly, he had admitted that he had failed on some occasions, though, on the whole, he had done good service. He should be glad of the production of the correspondence, but if it were produced he should doubt if Lord STANLEY would be able to find grounds for an inquiry. The Earl of CARNARVON then rose, and after dealing with several of the charges brought against Sir HARRY ORD in detail, said the inquiry which Lord STANLEY asked for would be almost without precedent, and could only be justified by a conviction on the part of the Secretary of State that serious abuses had occurred. He could not hold out any promise that an inquiry would be instituted. Lord STANLEY having expressed himself satisfied, the matter was allowed to drop. It is to be regretted that the subject of this debate was not brought forward at an earlier period, but we think it is one of those cases to which the old adage applies of "better late than never." We certainly think that Colonial Governors who have committed gross faults should be overhauled. The excuses made by Lord CARNARVON for Sir HARRY ORD will be seen by our readers to be opposed to the facts, but it is hardly necessary or useful to criticise them now.

Mr. BOURKE, the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in reply to Mr. DENISON, stated that no correspondence had been received from the Governor of Singapore in reference to the Atchin War which could be usefully produced. This can only mean in official parlance that it was not convenient to produce it. If any sort of reason had been given "why," it would have been more satisfactory. The reply in regard to mediation is equally equivocal, as it is on record that the Sultan of ATCHIN applied for our good offices, and a letter from Her MAJESTY was despatched to him by H.M.S. Thalia.

taken an interest in the opening of trade with Western China and Rangoon, which we shall refer to in our next.

THE report of Mr. RUSSELL ROBERTSON on the trade of Yokohama for 1873 has attracted much attention, and it is to be hoped that those engaged in the trade will profit by it.

THE TRADE OF YOKOHAMA.

The following is a summary of Mr. Russell Robertson's Trade Report for Kanagawa for 1873 :—

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The figures for 1873 show as follows :—

Imports	$19,535,758
Exports	15,095,218
Total	$34,630,976

being $523,040 in excess of 1872.

The following are comparative tables for the two years :—

	1873.	1872.
Exports	15,095,218	14,044,811
	$34,630,976	$34,107,936

Or to particularise—

IMPORTS.

	1873.	1872.
Cotton Manufactures	$6,913,961	$8,374,703
Woollen Manufactures	2,725,917	4,654,191
Mixed Cotton and Woollen ..	2,425,867	1,237,166
Arms and Ammunition	210,408	83,617
Metals	570,145	318,974
Miscellaneous, foreign	4,514,698	3,293,213
Miscellaneous, local	2,174,762	2,101,261
	$19,535,758	$20,063,125

	1873.	1872.
Silk, Raw	$7,050,656	$7,178,500
Silkworm Egg Cards	3,032,360	1,920,787
Tea	3,339,941	3,061,625
Copper	206,955	443,378
Miscellaneous	1,465,306	1,440,521
	$15,095,218	$14,044,811

IN IMPORTS

Cotton Manufactures exhibit a decrease of	$1,460,742
Woollens a decrease of	1,928,274
Mixed Cottons and Woollens an increase of	1,188,701
Arms and Ammunition ,, ...	126,791
Metals ,, ...	251,171
Miscellaneous, foreign ,, ...	1,221,485
Miscellaneous, local ,, ...	73,501

IN EXPORTS

Silk shows a decrease of	$127,844
Silkworm Egg Cards an increase of	1,111,573
Tea an increase of	278,316
Copper an increase of	236,423
Miscellaneous an increase of	24,785

It will thus be seen that the value of the import trade for 1873 falls short of that of 1872 by $527,367, while the export trade for 1873 is in excess of that of 1872 by $1,050,407, showing, as before stated, a total increase of $523,040 in the value of the trade for 1873 over that of 1872.

Under the heading Cotton Manufactures it appears that the trade in Grey Shirtings has kept very steady.

The figures of 1873 are rather in excess of those of 1872, but this is probably only owing to the fact that T-Cloths formed a separate item in the returns for 1872 and do not so appear in the tables for 1873.

There has been a considerably increased importation in Chintzes, Velvets, Turkey Reds, Muslins, and Cambrics. This, however, may be accounted for by the stocks of most of these goods having been light at the end of 1872. Shipments to this during the past year have been considerably in excess of requirements, and consequently business has been of an unprofitable character.

COTTON YARN.—The large importation in 1872, which led to an accumulation of stock, has certainly not been without its effects upon this staple, and the past year has been characterized by the supply being far in excess of the demand, leading to prices ruinous to importers.

In spite of the importation having fallen from 121,950 piculs in 1872 to 83,128 piculs in 1873, the stock is still more than ample for the requirements of the Japanese.

In WOOLLENS there is a considerable falling off, and Camlets, once quite an important article under this heading, have now dwindled down to comparative insignificance.

FLANNEL shows an import value of $180,130 in 1873 as compared with $1,284,160 in 1872. The excessive importation both of this article and of cloth in 1872 were initiated by too sanguine merchants both here and at home, who conceived the idea that Japan would generally adopt European-made garments. This, however, has proved to be a mistake, for except at prices far below cost the natives do not seem to be sufficiently wealthy to purchase. On such goods as these, with the one exception of French Mousselines, the losses incurred have been exceedingly heavy.

Blankets show a diminution, for although this class of goods is much used by Japanese, competition amongst foreign merchants has rendered the trade in them unprofitable.

As regards METALS, Lead figures for a limited amount, but the trade in Manufactured Iron has increased considerably, namely, from 58,891 piculs, valued at $285,982, imported in 1872, to 88,058 piculs and some odd cases, valued at $400,313, imported in 1873.

Pig Iron and Kentledge on the other hand show a decline, the importation in 1873 only reaching 1,048 piculs, valued at $1,351, against 10,381 piculs, valued at $23,357, imported in 1872. The difference in these figures is due more to the requirements of the railways, lighthouse, and docks at Yokoska than to any positive expansion of the trade.

The imports of Arms, Ammunition, and Accoutrements, other than for purely departmental purposes is still on a reduced scale.

Large importations of Kerosene oil have at times been made from America, and the trade, though apparently unprofitable, has largely increased.

On the whole the past year has been a most unprofitable one for all merchants engaged in the import business.

The close of 1872 showed a considerable increase in the consumption of many kinds of goods, especially Cotton and Wollen Mixtures, which, for the most part, were readibly saleable at a fair profit. On the supposition that this demand would not only continue, but probably increase, orders for more goods were sent home, which proved, however, to be far in excess of the requirements of the country.

The increase in the stock of French Mousselines consequent upon the excessive importation has been latterly a serious loss to importers.

SILK.—The export for 1873 shows 11,869 piculs 48 catties, valued at $7,050,656, against 10,252 piculs, valued at $7,158,500, exported in 1872. The year opened unfavourably for exporters, and prices gave way towards the end of February, the lowest point being reached in September, after which they rapidly advanced until in December the highest point was reached. Upon the whole, the year must be considered as highly unsatisfactory to silk importers. The alleged superiority of hand-reeled silk to that turned out by machinery is combated by the fact that the latter commands a far higher price in the Yokohama market than the former, and the large outlay that has been made on the establishment at Tomioka, where silk is reeled by machinery under foreign supervision, not to mention other establishments at Yedo and elsewhere, tends to confirm the success achieved over hand-reeling.

SILK-WORM EGG CARDS.—There were exported in 1873 1,409,537 cards valued at $3,032,360, against 1,280,525 cards valued at $1,920,787, exported in 1872. The valuation placed on the export for 1872 was too low, namely, $1.50 per card, and $2.40 would have been a fairer valuation, thus giving $3,073,260 as the value of the export for that year. The market opened later than in any previous year, the first purchases being made in the beginning of October. Although at first buyers were by no means prepared to pay the high prices asked by Japanese, still as it became known that the export would be restricted (owing to Government legislation in that direction) to about 1,250,000 to 1,300,000 cards, and as the season was very far advanced without any purchases having been effected, buyers were obliged to give in, and sellers obtained almost the prices asked.

One of the most notable features of the market was the great demand for cards from the district of Shimamura in Joshiu. This seed, it seems, is not so much affected by the changes of temperature, and hatches well even in unfavourable seasons when the more delicate kinds from Shinshiu and Oshiu have given poor results. The quantity of Shimamura cards available for export was only 30,000, and these were immediately bought up on arrival at $3.80 to $4.15 per card. Cards from Yonezawa were also much in request at $3.30 to $3.50.

TEA.—In 1873 there were 11,339,466 lbs. of tea, valued at $3,339,941, exported, against 11,663,333 lbs., valued at $3,061,625, in 1872. The prices for common Tea were $23 to $24 per picul, and for choice $42 to $45. The highest prices paid for new Teas in May 1873 at the commencement of the Tea season were $50 to $60 and $65 to $75 per picul respectively.

TOBACCO.—In 1873 807,157 piculs Tobacco, valued at $60,840, were imported, against 2,821 piculs, valued at $22,568, exported in 1872. Tobacco is now very generally grown throughout the country.

VEGETABLE AND BEES WAX.—The export of this from Kanagawa has never attained to any very high figure. The returns for 1873 show only—Vegetable Wax 150 piculs, valued at $1,820, Bees Wax 8 piculs and 25 catties, valued at $101.

HEMP.—Japan is known to produce hemp of the finest quality, but it has as yet found no market out of the country. It can only be laid down in England at so high a price as to effectually shut it out from competition with Manila hemp, the latter well answering all the purposes to which coarser hemp is applied—namely, cordage and sail cloth. Hempen cloths are freely used by the Japanese, and it is not improbable that before long machinery may be brought to bear upon this industry.

RICE.—The prohibition on the export of Rice has ceased to exist, its free export having been declared by Government order dated July 15, 1873. The Custom House Returns for the year give the export of rice as almost nil, one hundred and seventy-one piculs, but probably no notice has been taken of the export on Government account, and further, although the prohibition against the export has been withdrawn, there has been no inducement to ship. The Chamber of Commerce Returns place the export of 1873 at 215,984 piculs, valued at $347,832, and this export was confined entirely to the first six months of the year, and consisted probably of coast shipments. The returns for Hiogo and Osaka show an export of 154,432 piculs, valued at $520,678.74, shipped during the year 1873. Rice is largely grown within this Consulate district.

SHIPPING.—In 1873 87 vessels, with a tonnage of 75,176 tons, all with cargoes, entered the port, against 80 vessels, with a tonnage of 59,811 tons, in 1872. The increase in entries with cargo tonnage for the past year is 16,879 tons over 1872, but with numerically one ship less. The clearances in 1873 amounted to 36 vessels, with a tonnage of 31,419 tons, against 57 vessels, with a tonnage of 39,893 tons, in 1872. The total entries of British ships from and to other countries is, for 1873, 20 vessels, with a tonnage of 11,002 tons, and the total clearances 34 vessels, with a tonnage of 25,767 tons.

Yokohama still labours under all the disadvantages attended on a comparatively open roadstead, and with few or no facilities for landing or shipping cargo, though the improvements recently made by the Japanese Government at the principal landing place should not be allowed to pass unnoticed. With regard to the purchasing power of money it may be mentioned that the cost of the daily necessaries of life in Yokohama is so high that Japanese find it cheaper to incur the expense of a journey by rail to Kanagawa and back buying their supplies in that town, than to purchase them in Yokohama. Looking to the position of the artizan and labourer in this district both may be considered as well to do. Little or no distress exists amongst the agricultural classes. Their wants are few and they are content to live on without seeking materially to improve their circumstances. There is no doubt that the rate of living in and about Yokohama for all classes of Japanese has increased to an unprecedented extent of late years. Ten years ago a Japanese officer of standing attached to any of the local Government offices here could live comfortably as a married man on twenty-two dollars a month. This would admit of his keeping a good table, dressing well, keep of servants, and a horse. The same mode of living cannot be indulged in now under seventy-five or eighty dollars a month. In 1860 a Japanese servant would cost his master, keep and wages included, about eighteen dollars per annum. The estimated cost now is twenty-five dollars.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

(July 6th.) Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, on rising to put a question to the Secretary for the Colonies on the subject of these Settlements, said the object of the motion he before made respecting the Malay Peninsula was to point out the risk of this country being insensibly led on to the conquest of the Malay Peninsula, and to elicit from Her Majesty's Government a declaration in opposition to such a course. He failed entirely, and, in consequence of having made some accessory matters too prominent, only succeeded in eliciting contradictions from the two Secretaries of State, repeated on a subsequent occasion, and sufficient to have silenced him till next Session, had he not been sure of the facts of which he had spoken. He had referred to the bad administration of the Straits Settlements incidentally only and to support his main argument, and not expecting that it would be denied. He made a mistake in twitting the noble earl (the Earl of Carnarvon) with the appointment of the late Governor, for it was unnecessary, as he mentioned at the same time to their lordships that the noble earl was not responsible for that Governor's acts, having quitted office shortly after his appointment. It was also unnecessary since he was as well aware as the noble earl (Carnarvon) that no motives of private friendship or favouritism had anything to do with that appointment. (Hear, hear.) The noble earl would perhaps, however, admit, if not to their lordships, at least within his own mind, that he had some provocation in consequence of his laudation of the affairs of the Straits when speaking of the Gold Coast; and subsequently the noble earl told their lordships he had never heard of any dissatisfaction with the Colonial-Office in the Straits. He thought the noble earl had shown by that statement that from the time he left the Colonial-Office until he returned to it this year he had not read any of the Straits newspapers. He must protest against the doctrine held by his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) that three years was too long ago to refer back; what political action or circumstances could he mention the origin of which did not date from a longer period than three years? He must also protest against the doctrine that, if the conduct of a Colonial Governor was called in question, it was the duty of all the Ministers under whom he had served to defend him per fas aut nefas, whether he was right or wrong. Such a doctrine would make public interest go to the wall, and a Governor who might have been reproved by the Minister in private would find himself upheld and approved by the Minister in public. If he was told that it was too late, only six months after an administration had ceased, to call it in question, he urged that had he done so while the Governor was in office he should have been told he was weakening his hands. Though he was prepared for a sharp reply from his noble friend opposite (the Earl of Carnarvon), since he had, perhaps, brought it on himself, he was not prepared for what fell from his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley), against whom he had said nothing, and from whose despatches in the Salangore Blue-book he had read passages in support of his views; and it was only after the discussion was over he understood that his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) might have felt that he had been implying that he was in the case of "Judex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur." After what his noble friend had said he felt bound to ask for an inquiry into the administration of the Straits up to November, 1873, and in justice to the new Governor, Sir Andrew Clarke, there should be an inquiry into the system, so that the new Governor might start fair. But, perhaps he was wrong in asking for an inquiry as to the whole of the matters that might be thought to be fit subjects for one, since the Colonial-office might have and probably had already inquired into many of these matters; but what was wanted was that the Colonial-office should publish its own judgment on these matters, either by laying the correspondence before their lordships or by ordering the Straits Government to publish them, that the colonial public might know that the Colonial-office had been watchful over its interests. With regard to the question of presents, he would only observe that the defence offered by the noble earl (the Earl of Carnarvon) merely stated that which was stated in the letter to the Straits Times, which he himself had read to the House; and he did say that if the Government believed that letter to be a calumny they were bound to prosecute the Straits Times and to clear the late Governor completely, in which case he should be anxious to express to him his regret at having brought that letter before their lordships. He would go further, and say that if the late Governor would tell him in black and white that neither directly nor indirectly had he taken any other presents than those arms referred to by the Secretary of State, he should be willing to express to Sir Harry Ord his regret for having given him a moment's pain. He could not help feeling that Sir Harry was indebted to him for having given him the opportunity of meeting a charge made in the Singapore papers months before he left the colony, and which it did not appear he had ever denied or noticed. He now came to another matter. In a letter signed "Economist," which appeared in the Straits Times in 1870, this statement was made:—

"Was not the office of Assistant Colonial Secretary created by the recommendation of Sir H. Ord? Did not Sir H. Ord put into it his own private secretary, Mr. Plow, already the holder of two offices, to keep the place warm for the gentleman appointed by the Secretary of State? Did he not authorise Mr. Plow to draw the full pay of the new office (£600 to £800 a year, I believe) in addition to his own two full pays? Did he not even authorise him to receive it after Mr. Irving had been appointed to the office at home and was entitled to half the salary? Lastly, was not the office a perfect sinecure all last year, and did not Mr. Plow resign it because the present Colonial Secretary, Captain Shaw, insisted on his doing some work, or at least attending for some time at the office? If these questions cannot be answered in the negative, one or more has still to be asked. Is it to the 'Colonial system,' or to Lord Granville, or to Sir H. Ord, that this happy disposal of the Colonial funds is to be attributed?"

The Colonial-office did take action in this matter by redressing this financial irregularity, and it might be fairly assumed that it blamed the Governor and conveyed its approval to the treasurer, who had been upright and had upheld the rules and regulations of the service. He challenged the Colonial-office to produce this correspondence, and he challenged his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) to ask for its production, that their lordships might judge whether he was justified in stating that the Governor had always acted with perfect fidelity. He must remind their lordships that the Straits Settlements under the India-office had been perfectly peaceful, but that shortly after the transfer to the Colonial-office every portion of the community was in arms against the Governor, the London merchants connected with the Straits were driven to found an association to oppose a course of what was described as reckless and selfish expenditure, for a colony that had a revenue of less than £300,000 saw in three years some £50,000 spent in building a palace for the Governor, and some £60,000 more for buying and keeping up steamers. The complaint also was generally made that these steamers were not used for public purposes, but that they served too much the purposes of pleasure yachts, and the item of "travelling expenses" in the Colonial Budget was one which required the attention of the Colonial-office. But it was not merely the large sums thus taken from the public purse for private purposes which attracted attention and excited universal reprobation, there was the manner in which it was done. The Legislative Council was first told that the amount for the Government-house was not to exceed £22,000. This was soon exceeded by some £5,000 or £6,000. Then a further sum of £9,000 was obtained on a misrepresentation of what was already voted. He believed that not only the colony, but the Colonial-office was misled on this point. Then the French system of virements, invented by M. Janvier de la Motte was resorted to, so that money voted for a different purpose was applied to the Government-house. So as regards steamers—representing to the Legislative Council that the cost of a steamer and steam launch would not exceed £16,000 or £17,000, Sir H. Ord got a vote passed authorising him to buy those vessels. The vote made no mention of the limit; a copy of it was sent home to the Colonial-office, and they ordered a vessel which was to cost £23,000 at home, and perhaps £2,000 more to send her to the colony. Fortunately the Straits Association interfered, and the Colonial-office prevented the construction of the vessel and sent out a cheaper one. But what was his noble friend's (the Earl of Kimberley) opinion of the pecuniary administration of this public servant, whom he proclaimed the other day as faithful. In a despatch of August 15, 1871, he said:—

"The expenditure of the Colony does not appear to me so satisfactory. I have noticed in the two last quarterly returns, as well as in the details of the Supplementary Estimates of previous years, that the Estimates are not drawn with as much care as is desirable; and that while in ordinary services there has been a constant and considerable increase, no great work of public importance, with the exception of the Government-house at Singapore, has been yet undertaken. It should be borne in mind by the officers of your Government that a prosperous revenue furnishes no reason for lax or injudicious expenditure, and that those Colonial Governments which have presumed on a temporary surplus have in many cases been severely inconvenienced when unexpected circumstances called for summary retrenchment. In such cases, the first to suffer and to complain have been the officers of the Civil Administration, through the laxity of which disorder has arisen."

There is another matter which should become the subject of inquiry, and that was the opium farming. The late Governor renewed the opium farm for three years, though the lease had not expired, instead of leaving this to be done by his successor. He desired also to request the noble earl the Secretary for the Colonies to turn his attention generally to the subject of opium farming by the British Government, as opium in the Straits and in Hong Kong required restriction and regulation still more than liquor in England; and the conduct of the British Government in this respect had been very severely commented upon by French writers. Now, in all that he had said he had merely repeated what had been matter of public fame for a long time in the colony and among colonial men at home, and he trusted that he should not be met again by remonstrances against making charges and raking up old stories. In his opinion, those who would screen the late administration of the Straits from a thorough investigation, or who would refuse to produce the correspondence and papers which could throw light upon it, merely pleaded guilty for it. To say they would have no inquiry meant that the late Straits Administration was unable to face one. It was too late now meant that after six months' retirement a Governor might plead the Statute of Limitations. If that was the answer he was to receive it would be a significant one, and he should be quite satisfied that the complaints as to the state of things which exasperated the Straits Settlements for the last six years were not imaginary, but only too well founded. He now came to a complaint which was one which specially required inquiry into, and the result of the inquiry should be laid before their lordships. He referred to the flogging of Chinese rioters. This flogging was quite unnecessary; it was contrary to public policy to establish severer punishments for one class of Her Majesty's subjects than for another. While we objected to certain Chinese punishments as barbarous, we ought not to set such a bad example to the Chinese. If the Government set the example of flogging, it was no wonder that the planters should follow it, and that recently two planters should have received three months' and four months' imprisonment only, for flogging a coolie to death. The Straits Times also had urged against flogging rioters that often the wrong man would be flogged. The Chinese guilds were not, as was stated the other evening by the Secretary of State (the Earl of Carnarvon), secret societies; but no accusation of secrecy ought to have weight against these Chinese guilds in this country, where so many Englishmen belonged to a secret society—that of the Freemasons—without that fact being thought blamable by those who belonged to that body. Colonel Cavanagh did him the honour to ask his opinion, many years ago, about these, and he recommended him to give an official position to their head men and make them responsible for keeping the peace. He learnt later that this had long been the practice in the Philippine Islands and in Java, where it had met with complete success. The flogging in the Straits Settlements had consisted of legal and illegal flogging. A law was passed in the Straits to sanction flogging of Chinese rioters, and it was a pleasure to him to be able to state that his noble friend (Earl Granville) refused his sanction to it. After that, flogging took place, he believed, illegally. Later, a law for flogging was again passed, and he did not know whether it received the sanction of his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) or not. If he did not sanction it, then all the flogging which undoubtedly occurred was illegal and required inquiring into. If he did sanction it it would be for him to explain the grounds on which he sanctioned it after his predecessor had refused to do so, and it must be remembered that no change had occurred in the circumstances of Singapore. Their lordships would probably be inclined to prefer the course taken by the late Secretary for Foreign Affairs to that taken by the late Secretary for the Colonies. It would be necessary for the Colonial-office now to inquire into this matter, and consider whether it could continue to give its sanction to such a law, and could justify it. Another law, authorising the summary expulsion of Chinese from the Straits, was also passed, and gave rise to much dissatisfaction at the time, and required inquiry in order that the Government might decide whether it should continue to sanction or should abrogate it. The noble lord concluded by asking the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he was instituting, or was about to institute, an inquiry into the state of the administration of the Straits Settlements previous to November, 1873.

The Earl of KIMBERLEY said that as his noble friend had referred to several matters which occurred when he was at the Colonial-office, he thought it would be well if he made a few observations before his noble friend the Secretary for the Colonies rose to reply. His noble friend who had just addressed the House somewhat misunderstood him the other evening when he understood him to say that they could not go into the transactions to which his noble friend had called attention because they occurred three years ago. What he said on the occasion was that the correspondence relating to those transactions was presented three years ago, and that he thought, therefore, his noble friend might have challenged the conduct of the Straits Government at an earlier period than the present. Again, his noble friend seemed to have understood him as holding that Sir Harry Ord had never made any mistakes. He had not taken up any such position. He thought his noble friend had attacked Sir Harry Ord rather unfairly, but so far from saying that he had made no mistakes, he said he had failed on some occasions, though, on the whole, he had done good service. It was of but few governors of colonies it could be said they had made no mistakes. His noble friend had referred to the case of the double appointment in which Mr. Plow was drawing the pay of Colonial Secretary when he ought not to have been doing so. When the matter came under his own notice as Secretary for the Colonies it at once appeared to him that there was not the least doubt about the matter, and, believing that Mr. Plow was not entitled to draw that pay, he ordered an inquiry into the matter, and, as the result of that inquiry, he directed that the money so drawn should be refunded. Then, as regarded the finances, in a despatch which he sent out to Singapore he called attention to the fact that the management of the finances was not satisfactory. The matter was considered and discussed at Singapore and in the Colonial-office, and in certain respects improvements were effected at Singapore. Then came the question of flogging. In a Peace Preservation Act sent over here for approval it was proposed that the punishment of flogging might be inflicted for illegally carrying arms. Lord Granville objected to that, but subsequently another code was prepared, and in it that punishment was proposed for certain offences. He was not enamoured of the punishment of flogging. He thought we should be very cautious in giving it our sanction, and that it should be inflicted only in cases of great brutality. It was inflicted only in such cases under the general code to which he had just alluded, but it was proposed that it should also be inflicted in the case of rioting, but only under peculiar circumstances. The Peace Preservation Act of the Settlement provided that in certain cases of rioting the magistrates might by proclamation acquire larger powers of dealing with the rioters. When at the Colonial-office he came to the conclusion that in these very serious cases, and after the place had been put under proclamation, flogging might be inflicted on the rioters. The Chinese guilds were a source of considerable embarrassment to the Government. Those societies did not quarrel with the Government, but they quarrelled with one another, and in these conflicts lives had sometimes been sacrificed in Singapore. The Governor had informed him that in these serious cases flogging was approved by the whole of the European population, and he thought he had informed him that it was approved by the Chinese residents also. If his noble friend the Secretary for the Colonies saw no objection to producing the correspondence referring to those several matters, he for his own part should be glad of its production, but if it were produced he should not think his noble friend would be able to lay grounds for an inquiry, now that Sir Harry Ord no longer held office, and that the Governor was Sir Andrew Clarke, than whom there was no abler servant of the Crown. (Hear, hear.)

The Earl of CARNARVON must demur to the remarks made by the noble lord at the outset of his speech as to his not having made a sufficient study of the Colonial newspapers. Having regard to the number of our Colonies and the number of newspapers published in them, it would be impossible for anyone to find time to read them all. The noble lord had spoken of the expenditure under Sir Harry Ord, and had referred to the Government House. It was true that Sir Harry Ord did lay his plans for that House on a larger scale than the circumstances of the colony warranted, but he was blamed for that by his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley), and also for allowing the building of that house to take precedence of every other work of building. It must, however, be borne in mind that the expenditure for Government-house was sanctioned by the unofficial members of the Governor's Council, and it must also be remembered that he left the colony with a surplus. The case of the steamers was this:—When the Straits Settlements were handed over, the steamers previously in use were worn out. Sir Harry Ord, with the consent of his Council, made a requisition for a steamer to cost £16,000; but by additional fittings the price was brought up to £23,000. He was directed to strike that sum out of the Estimates, and a steamer which cost less than £16,000 was sent out. The noble lord spoke of the transfer of unexpended balances from one head of expenditure to another. It was true that the practice was not restricted as much as it ought to have been at Singapore. He did not like the system, but it was not peculiar to the Straits Settlements. It prevailed in this country till within a few years ago, and, subject to a Minute in Council, it still existed in Australia. As to the case of Mr. Plow, had Sir H. Ord attended to the Colonial rules he would have known that such appointments, if not actually prohibited, were discountenanced by those rules; but as his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) had explained, the disapprobation of the Colonial-office was expressed in that case. With respect to flogging, the offences for which the Penal Code of the Straits Settlements provided flogging were analogous in their character to those for which flogging was inflicted in this country. The question of that penalty in those cases had been very fully considered in the colony, and certainly he was not prepared to advise any alteration in the law. The Peace Preservation Act provided flogging for rioting with deadly weapons. It could only be inflicted in cases of rioting after proclamation, and the number of lashes was specified. Although flogging might be repugnant to our notions, it might be said to be almost indigenous to Eastern nations, and he would not undertake to recommend its immediate abolition in those rioting cases. There had been no petition or remonstrance on the subject, and he had not heard any abuse alleged until the noble lord stated that two coolies had been flogged to death, and that the person who inflicted the flogging had received only four months' imprisonment. He should like to have further particulars, if the noble lord could furnish them, for there was no account of the case at the Colonial-office. The inquiry which the noble lord now asked for would be almost without precedent. It could be justified only by a conviction on the part of the Colonial Secretary that serious abuses had occurred. (Hear, hear.) He did not think such abuses had occurred, and, therefore, he could not hold out to the noble lord the slightest expectation that an inquiry be instituted. (Hear, hear.) The case was one of a Crown Colony. There had been mistakes; his noble friend the late Secretary for the Colonies had expressed his opinion on those mistakes, and that in a very unsparing manner; but it would be very unjust to Sir Harry Ord if the Government gave any grounds for the belief that they thought an inquiry into his conduct was necessary. No petition or memorial asking for such an inquiry had been addressed to the Crown, and in his opinion not the slightest case had been made out for it. During Sir Harry Ord's Governorship the expenditure of the colony never reached its income; no new tax was imposed; the value of land increased largely; the trade of the settlement increased 27 per cent.; the increase of shipping entered was to the extent of 40 per cent., and that of shipping cleared to the extent of forty-five, and when revenue and expenditure were taken—though it was difficult to make an exact comparison in consequence of the transfer of various items—the result was that a colony which commenced its career without a balance had a credit at the commencement of the present year of nearly $700,000. (Hear, hear.) Before producing the despatches referred to by his noble friend (the Earl of Kimberley) it would be necessary to look through them; but, as far as the Colonial-office was concerned, there was no objection to their production.

Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY having expressed himself satisfied with the result of the discussion, the subject dropped.

AN UNSEAWORTHY SHIP.

(6th.) Mr. BATES asked the hon. member for Pembroke whether he could now give the name of the ship, with her net register tonnage, that was about to sail for China, whose uppermost deck was several inches amidships below the water.—Mr. REED said he had taken pains to trace the name of the vessel, and having ascertained it he had communicated it to his hon. friend the member for Hull some days ago. He had no personal information as to her tonnage, but he had learnt from his hon. friend that she was only about 100 tons gross register, and loaded with fuel. That she was about to proceed for China, and was in the condition that he had described, he had no doubt.—Mr. BATES asked for the name and the net register of the vessel.—Mr. REED explained that it was only his desire to avoid embroiling himself with the owners that had made him hesitate to give the steamer's name.

THE ATCHIN WAR.

(6th.) Mr. B. DENISON asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether he would lay upon the table of the House a copy of the correspondence received from the Governor of Singapore as to the war between the Dutch and the Sultan of Atchin, and of correspondence with the Government of the Hague relative thereto; and if it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government to offer their mediation, with a view to terminate the war.

Mr. BOURKE: I learn from the Colonial-office that there has been no correspondence received from the Governor of Singapore which could usefully be communicated to the House. No correspondence has passed with the Government of the Hague. No application for good offices having been received from either side, the question of mediation has not been entertained.

NOTICES BY MR. DENISON.

Monetary and Commercial.

The continuance of a fair amount of activity in the Liverpool Cotton Market has steadied the tone of the Manchester market, but buyers have shown little inclination to follow the full, and in some cases higher prices asked by producers, and the business transacted has therefore been of a restricted character. At the close a steady feeling prevails, and the full prices of last week are held for, though the enquiry is only of a moderate nature. Private telegrams show the stock of Shirtings in Shanghai to have increased by 300,000 pieces during the past month, bringing it again to almost a million and a half of pieces.

A company has been formed, styled the Burma Agricultural, to acquire and cultivate land in British Burma. The directors include Messrs. Robert and Murray Gladstone, of Liverpool, merchants, Mr. Ogilvy, of London, merchant. We are glad to see that the labour of Captain Sprye to keep Burma to the front during the past fifteen years is beginning to tell.

The list of applications for shares in the Malayan Peninsula (East India) Tin Mining Company, Limited, was closed on Saturday last for London, and will close on Wednesday the 15th inst. for the country, and on Saturday the 18th inst. for the Continent.

The report of the Eastern Telegraph Company for the six months ending the 31st March last has been issued. The available balance amounts to £164,192 16s. 3d. Interim dividends of 4 per cent. have already been distributed to the quarter ending 31st December last, and the directors now recommend a division of 4s. per share, making, with the three previous payments, a total dividend for the year at the rate of 6 per cent. The sum of £38,993 12s. 3d. is carried forward to the reserve fund, which is now raised to £121,838 8s. 4d. Further important additions to the traffic of the company have been secured by the successful laying of the cables of the Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Company; and by the opening of the Black Sea Telegraph Company's line, which connects Odessa and Constantinople with Egypt and India by the company's system. A considerable amount of traffic is already passing over the new lines.

The directors of the London and Westminster Bank announce a dividend of 10 per cent. for the half-year ending 30th June on the paid up-capital of £2,000,000. The rest or surplus fund will then amount to about £1,045,000. The distribution at the corresponding period of last year was at the same rate.

The directors of the City Bank declare a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, carrying forward as undivided profit £3,500. The distribution at the corresponding period of 1873 was at the same rate.

In the report of the Central Bank of London a dividend is recommended at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum. The sum of £1,500 is to be added to the reserve fund, and £3,797 carried forward.

The dividend declared at the meeting of the Union Bank of London on the 8th inst. was at the usual rate of 15 per cent. per annum, with a bonus of 2½ per cent. upon the paid up capital, making together 10 per cent. for the past half-year, and, with the dividend and bonus paid in January last, 20 per cent. for the financial year. The amount to be carried forward to profit and loss new account is £218,800. At the corresponding period of last year the distribution was at the same rate, with £16,563 carried forward.

The directors of the London Joint-Stock Bank have resolved to declare, at the half-yearly general meeting, to be held on the 16th inst., a dividend of 15 per cent. per annum, and, in addition, a bonus of 7s. 6d. per share, together £1 10s. per share, or 20 per cent. per annum, carrying forward the sum of £19,000. The sum carried forward at the corresponding period of last year was £19,800, and the same rate of dividend was then paid.

At the meeting of the Consolidated Bank the directors will recommend a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, that £3,500 be added to reserve fund, and that the balance of £5,792 6s. 10d. be carried forward to next account.

The directors of the Alliance Bank (Limited) recommend a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of £8 per cent. per annum, and that £7,500 be added to the reserve fund, carrying forward about £13,500. At the corresponding period of last year the distribution was at the rate of 7 per cent.

The half-yearly report of the Metropolitan Bank recommends a dividend for the half-year ending 30th of June at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

It is announced by the United Discount Corporation that the accounts for the past half-year leave an available balance of £11,800 13s. 2d., and the directors propose a dividend of 4s. 2d. per share, being at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, carrying forward £1,383.

The directors of the National Discount Company, propose a dividend at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum. At the corresponding period of last year the distribution was at the rate of 14 per cent.

The report of the Standard Discount Company (Limited) recommends the payment of a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent per annum, leaving £5,637 to be carried forward.

The Jorehaut Tea Company (Limited) have declared a further dividend, from the profits of 1873, of 13 per cent., making, with the interim dividend, 20 per cent., and leaving about 7 per cent. to be hereafter appropriated. At the corresponding period of 1873 the distribution was 12½ per cent., making 19 per cent. for the year.

The report of the Ouvah Coffee Company for the year ending the 30th May last shows a total profit of £26,491. A dividend is recommended of £1 per share, making, with the interim distribution in January of 10s. per share, 15 per cent. for the year.

The balance-sheet and statement of accounts presented at the meeting of the Netherlands-India Trading Bank will be found in our advertising columns.

A first return of 10s. per share is announced by the liquidators of the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, payable on the 8th inst., or on any Monday, Wednesday, or Friday, in any subsequent week during July and August.

Messrs. Ker, Bolton, and Co., of Castle-street, Liverpool, give notice that they have closed their office, and that their business will henceforth be carried on at East India Avenue, London. Their Liverpool business will be attended to by Mr. William Laidlaw, at India Buildings, Water-street.

Mr. William Christian, formerly partner of Messrs. Peel, Cassels, and Co., of Bombay, has joined the Board of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China.

The market for Bar Silver has been very inactive, and the nearest quotation is 58½d. There is no demand for the East. A large amount of Mexican Dollars has been disposed of at 57¼d. per ounce. The market has since given way, and the recent arrival from New Orleans has only realised 57 1-16d. per oz., with a very limited inquiry.

A limited amount of Mexican dollars, brought by the State of Louisiana, has since been sold at 57 1-16d. per ounce, showing a decline of 3-16d. from the price realised last week. Bar Silver is steady, at 58¼d. per ounce.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for June exhibit rather more favourable features than those of the previous five or six months The declared value of our exportations in the month has been £19,367,613, against £19,460,083 in June, 1873—a diminution of only ½ per cent. Compared, however, with the corresponding month in 1872, the decline is 4¼ per cent. In textile fabrics, cotton manufactures figure for an advance of 12 per cent.; linen piece-goods of 7¼ per cent.; jute manufactures of 12½ per cent.; and silk manufactures of 40 per cent.; while woollen and worsted manufactures have decreased 3 per cent. The total value of our exportations for the six months ended the 30th June has been £117,831,214, against £125,786,557 in the corresponding period in 1873, a reduction of 6¼ per cent. The total value of foreign and colonial produce imported into the United Kingdom for the month was £34,124,424, against £30,242,119 in the corresponding month of 1873, and £29,824,663 in 1872. For the six months the receipts were—in 1872, £175,537,851; 1873, £181,922,824; and 1874, £186,585,813.

The following is an extract from these Returns of the figures which refer to our Export trade with China and the Far East:—

CASUALTIES.

Advices from Cape Town, June 10, received at Amsterdam July 7, state that the cargo of the Tromp, Hockstra, from Amsterdam to Batavia, which put into Simon's Bay leaky, had been discharged from the 'tween deck, and the leak had taken up; the repairs were being proceeded with; the cargo was not so much damaged as was at first supposed.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

Japan—Nipon, South Coast.—Revolving Light on Omae Saki.—The Japanese Government has given notice, that from the 1st May, 1874, a light would be exhibited from a lighthouse recently erected on Cape Omae Saki, west point of the entrance of Suruga Gulf. The light is a revolving white light, attaining its greatest brilliancy every thirty seconds, visible when bearing from E. by S. ½ S., through east, north, and west to S.W., elevated 172 feet above the level of the sea, and in clear weather should be seen from a distance of 19 miles. The illuminating apparatus is dioptric, or by lenses of the first order. The lighthouse, 57 feet high, is situated on the sand hill at the south part of the Cape, and is painted white. Position, by chart, lat. 34 deg. 36 min. N., long. 138 deg. 14 min. 20 sec. E. From the lighthouse Lady Inglis rocks bear E. ⅝ S. distant 4 miles. [All bearings are magnetic. Variation 3¾ deg. Westerly in 1874.]—Hydrographic Office, Admiralty, June, 1874.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

AND OINTMENT.—There existed for many years a great and unfair prejudice against these remedies, but such has been their success in expelling internal impurities, and healing bodies scarred with sores, that their worst opponents have now become their warmest supporters. At the present day no difference of opinion exists with reference to the purifying and healing powers of these world-esteemed medicaments, which cure diseases and remove disfigurements over which medical skill hitherto had exercised little control. Holloway's remedies may be used by either sex, and in the worst cases will most conspicuously display their curative powers. They extract order from disorder, rectify irregularity, check disease, and preserve the comfort, privileges, and pleasures of health.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 27th May; and by the Pacific mail we have nine days later news, viz., to the 5th June; the French mail from London April 10 arrived out on the 28th May, and the following P. and O. mail of April 17 was received on the 2nd June. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of intelligence:—

But little news has transpired relative to the Formosan expedition since our last. By return to Nagasaki of the Japanese steamer Yukomaru, which vessel arrived from Formosa on the 4th June, a few particulars have been received from the expedition. After the arrival of the first four vessels the soldiers disembarked. Soon after landing one scout was attacked by Formosans, who cut off his head and stripped him. Soon after the Japanese began fighting, but the Formosans retreated. On the Japanese side one man only was killed and one wounded; but on the other side about fifty were found dead and wounded. The Japanese are progressing fast with buildings on the island. Before the above affair occurred two steam launches which had been surveying the bay received some shots from bushes, which were quickly returned, and the natives dispersed from the place. We hear that the plan of the campaign in Formosa is upon a novel basis. The troops are to do nothing for the next six months, unless they should be attacked, but are to await instructions from Tokio. Meantime, negotiations are to be set on foot to crave permission from the Chinese Government to allow hostilities to be gone into against the Formosan savages. This is to be done to save the national honour, which has been tarnished by making the ridiculous faux pas that has occurred. The Japanese Government's late policy has converted into such zealous friends the foreign Ministers here that we may be quite sure that their colleagues at Peking will be thoroughly advised on the business, and the Chinese Government will learn from them, as it has already from the press, the ends the Japanese sought to compass by the expedition. We should think that the troops will receive peremptory orders to quit, and that they will conclude, as discretion is the better part of valour, that it will be to their interest to do so with as little delay as practicable, without attempting either to thrash the savages, or to annex any part of the Island.—It appears by advices just received from Peking that an official intimation has been given to the Doyen of the Diplomatic corps, Mr. Wade, that the Chinese Government never gave any authority whatever to the Japanese Government to arry on war on Chinese soil, and that they claim the whole of Formosa as being so.

Okuma, the Minister of Finance, returned to Tokio on the 20th May. A statement of the estimated receipts and expenditure for this year has been published under his signature in the native papers. After deducting the balance alleged to be brought forward from last year, there appears to be a surplus, but that is without counting the cost of the Formosan expedition. The revenue is estimated at 88,867,636 yen, and the expenditure at 62,169,344 yen. The estimated surplus is therefore 26,698,292 yen.

The question of the circulation of foreigners in the interior, after being months under the consideration of the Government, is still unsettled; the joint note of the Ministers is still unanswered.

Shimadzu Saburo is reported to have resigned the post of Sa-daijin, to which he was recently appointed; and Kido, one of the ministers, who resigned some weeks ago, is rumoured to have been assassinated whilst returning to his own country. Neither of these rumours have been confirmed.

Our annual regatta was held on the 23rd May, with average success. The cricket season has been opened by a match, Garrison v. the Settlement, and the Royal Marine semi-annual athletic sports have also taken place, and the annual meeting of the Swiss Rifle Club is announced for the 12th and 13th June.

Admiral Pennock, the new American commander-in-chief, arrived on the 28th May, and hoisted his flag the following day. The U. S. S. Hartford, Lackawanna, Tuscarora, and Kearsage still remain here. The Saco sailed on the 22nd May for Cheyfoo.

The railway authorities are about to reduce the fares for passengers and goods, and will also alter the time of departure for the trains to more convenient hours for the travelling public than those in force at present.

All notices relative to the prohibition of the export of silkworms' eggs are said to have been recalled, and the trade is supposed to be left unfettered.

The Government has announced further sales of land to foreigners in the concessions of Yokohama and Tokio.

The Government has issued a proclamation forbidding the export of rice from the 1st August.

Okubo, the Home Minister, will leave, it is said, in a few days for Formosa.

The proprietor of the Sailors' Home absconded from here in the steamer Vancouver, heavily in debt.

A flower show has been held at the Public Gardens.

A third electric cable has been laid across the Straits of Simonoseki.

NAGASAKI.

Our advices extend to the 23rd May; the P. and O. mail from London April 3 arrived out on the 21st May. The Nagasaki Express gives the following items of intelligence:—

The opening of the Shinto Temple "Chin-kioin," situated in "Fogiya-machi," in the town of Nagasaki, was celebrated on the 16th, 17th, and 18th May, in a manner very satisfactory to the native townspeople. The procession, consisting of two sacred cars, was escorted by a large number of priests in double lines, the Shinto priests on one side, and the Buddhists on the other, excepting two who were in "norimons," and two others who were on horseback, and these latter we presume were the chiefs connected with the recent proceedings. All the houses in the streets through which the procession passed were decorated. A grand ceremony took place in the "Suwa Temple," and besides priests, the whole of the Government officials and likewise those of the Judicial Court attended it. During the three days business in the native town was almost suspended, as the natives were enjoying themselves with the procession; consequently business was also correspondingly restricted during that period in the foreign settlement.

The last vessel of the Formosan expedition has left for her destination. On the 17th May Saigo, the chief of the expedition, embarked at the Ohato, and thence proceeded on board the steamer Delta, and received a salute which was fired by the Government battery on shore, after which the vessel proceeded on her voyage to Formosa.

The steamer Argus, which left last week for the wreck of the Russian steamer Nicolai, has returned, bringing in tow to this place the boiler of the wrecked steamer. We learn that the purchasers of the wreck have decided to bring the vessel to this place in pieces, as she lies in a position that would entail a very heavy expense were they to endeavour to float her off from the reef as she is.

Kitashima Hidetomo, who lately arrived here from Tokio, left this place for Saga on the 19th May to commence his duties as Governor of the Saga ken, to which post he has been recently appointed by the Government. Takaho Motoharo, the newly appointed Secretary of the Japanese Legation at Peking, left on the 18th by the P. M. steamer Oregonian. Yanaguiwara Sakimitsu, who has been appointed by the Government to be Japanese Minister at Peking, has arrived here en route by the P. M. steamer Costa Rica.

H. M.'s gun-boat Thistle, which arrived here on the 21st May from Hiogo, relieves the gun-boat Dwarf, which vessel leaves for Formosa. We hear that H. M.'s s. Cadmus, with Admiral Sir Charles Shadwell on board, is expected here about the 29th May.

CHINA.

CHEFOO.

The trial of the rioters engaged in the late anti-missionary disturbances in the neighbourhood of Chimi-ching commenced on the 25th May, before his Excellency the Taoutai and Mr. Sheppard, American Consul; Mr. Cornabé, U.S. Vice-Consul, being also present. The Rev. Mr. Corbett, as prosecutor, stated his case from the time he arrived in Chimi last September till he was compelled to leave, on account of the threats made against his life. His recital occupied four hours, and he rehearsed every incident of that eventful period, during which he was persecuted, on account of his endeavours to inoculate the minds of the Chimi-ites with the rudiments of the Christian faith. He was patiently listened to throughout his narration, which being delivered in Chinese was interpreted sentence by sentence, and carefully committed to paper for reference, in the event of contradictory evidence being elicited as the case progressed. On Mr. Corbett concluding his statement, the Taoutai expressed himself fully satisfied with the truth of what he had said, which seemed to imply that the examination of the witnesses would be a mere formality, as far as their testimony in corroboration of Mr. Corbett's account of his difficulties was concerned. The impression is that the most, if not all, the twenty-eight prisoners will be found guilty.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 31st May; the P. and O. mail from London April 3 arrived out on the 16th May; the French mail of April 10 was received on the 22nd May, and the P. and O. mail of April 17 on the 29th May. The following summary of news is from the North China Herald:—

It is said that H.M. Minister has expressed himself in favour of the liability of the Chinese to fully indemnify foreigners for all loss and damage occurring through the riots on the French Concession; and that claims, of a direct and indirect nature, to the extent of about Tls. 10,000 have been sent in by British subjects. This, however, does not cover the whole of the British interests involved.

Some excitement has been created by the news from Hankow that the Agamemnon, with the first cargo of new teas, had got aground in the river. It appears that the Agamemnon after starting from her moorings about 3 A.M. on the 26th May was rounding to head down river, when she caught the mud on the Woochang side, and remained fast. The Tunsin and Fire Queen added their power to her own in efforts to pull her off, but without avail, and the further assistance of the Shanghai proved equally ineffectual. By latest accounts we hear that these steamers were still persevering in the task, and it was hoped that the discharge of a portion of her cargo would lead to their efforts being shortly successful. A few days since, while coming to the Hongkew Wharf, the Sarpedon struck the wharf with her sharp iron stem and occasioned considerable damage. She was being brought up on the ebb tide, in charge of her pilot, and as she took rather a large sweep, the ebb probably caught her head, so that she came prematurely end on to the wharf, instead of gently dropping alongside parallel with it. The consequence was that she went through and sunk a cargo-boat which happened to be lying alongside with twenty bales of piece goods, and made a gap in the wharf of about twelve feet laterally by four in depth, besides straining timbers and iron ties over a much larger area. The cargo-boat fortunately lessened the force of the collision with the wharf. The piece goods have been recovered, though of course rather the worse for their novel experience in hydraulics.

The Courier gives the following additional details. The Shanghai reached Hankow on the 26th, and found the Fire Queen engaged trying to tow the Agamemnon off, while the Tunsin was alongside of her removing her forward cargo. The Fire Queen retired, and the Shanghai took her place, but after breaking a hawser and a pair of bits, she had to give it up without result. The discharge of cargo into the Tunsin went on all the time. The Fire Queen and Shanghai then both attached themselves to the Agamemnon, but after the Shanghai had broken another pair of bits, they had again to desist. On the 27th both steamers again attached themselves to the grounded vessel, and the Agamemnon was got afloat, and at once commenced to reload. At the time of our present writing the Agamemnon has, doubtless, passed Woosung and gone to sea.

H.M.S. Cadmus left on the 27th May for Nagasaki, en route for Yokohama, and thence for England. We shall therefore not see her again in Shanghai. The Cadmus has been so much on this station, and Captain Whyte and his officers have made themselves so generally popular, that she will be missed as an old friend. We hear that the Modeste, which comes out to relieve the Cadmus, and would probably have taken her place at Shanghai, has broken down on her outward voyage. The Elk, therefore, will stay here for the present; but it is not unlikely that the Thalia may also be sent. The latter is now at Hong Kong, on the point of starting for Japan viâ the Southern ports.

The fifty-fourth anniversary of the Queen's birthday was celebrated on the 25th May with all due glory by the British naval force in port. The Cadmus, Elk, and Frolic dressed ship, and a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the former at noon. Some two hundred seamen and marines were also landed, and drawn up in the British Consular compound, where they fired three volleys, and gave three hearty cheers and "one more" for Her Majesty. The French and American men-of-war and several of the merchant vessels in port also dressed ship.

Three British subjects who, on principle or for other reasons, had refrained from registering themselves, have been summoned at the instance of H.B.M. Consul. Mr. Drummond appeared to support the prosecution, and the presiding magistrate, Mr. Mowat, inflicted the full penalty of $10 fine in two cases, with costs of summons, and mitigated expenses on behalf of the Crown. The third case was adjourned.

At her Britannic Majesty's Supreme Court on the 27th May, in the case of the North China Insurance Company v. the Union Steam Navigation Company, the Chief Judge refused the application by plaintiffs' counsel for an injunction to prevent the defendants from dealing with the money they may recover from the Messageries Maritimes Company in respect of damages in the Rona-Ava case.

A case of plucking flowers in the Public Garden has been brought before the Police Magistrate. It was dismissed with a fine of $1.75, as the act was evidently a thoughtless one; but his Worship announced that any case of wilful abstraction or of malicious damage was punishable by a fine of £5 or three months' imprisonment. We endorse Mr. Mowat's suggestion that it would be well to put up notice boards, warning people who may not realise the offence that it is a punishable one.

We have received copies of two large works published by order of the Inspector-General of Chinese Maritime Customs, to illustrate the international exchange of products, in connection with the part China took in the Austro-Hungarian Universal Exhibition of 1873. One, a volume of over 500 pages quarto, gives the port catalogues of the Chinese Customs Collection; the other, somewhat smaller, is devoted to the trade statistics of the same places. Fourteen ports, from Newchwang to Canton, are shown to have contributed to the collection; and the catalogues give, in a succinct and clear form, the names in English and Chinese —and German also in the majority of cases—of the exhibits; remarks on their origin, nature or method of preparation, the places of production and consumption, uses and value, and quantity imported or exported in 1871—thus forming a minute and comprehensive commercial dictionary of Chinese products. The trade statistics are supplementary to the catalogue, in accordance with paragraph seven of the exhibition programme. They also have been compiled by the Commissioners at the fourteen ports, and represent an enormous amount of labour, not less valuable though perhaps less attractive, as being purely a collection of figures, than the catalogues which they accompany. Both works have been printed in very creditable style at the Customs press.

A new feature has been introduced into Shanghai business by Messrs. Thorne Bros., viz., sales by auction of undamaged piece goods. The first was held on the 25th May, and the novelty of the event attracted a larger attendance at the Yuenfong godowns than is often to be seen at Shanghai auctions. There were at least a couple of hundred Chinese, with a good sprinkling of foreigners. The Woollens offered realised, we believe, full market rates, though it is suggested that most of them were bought by a speculator, who is already well into Spanish Stripes and Long Ells, and cannot afford to let the market drop. Shirtings were also sold nearly at the market rate. The experiment was repeated on the 28th, but, we believe, with less success. The Chinese combined to keep down prices.

The drawing for Kuhn and Co.'s Lottery of Japanese curios has taken place at the Old Masonic Hall, and a good deal of interest was shown in the event. A number representing a share having been taken from a spherical box, by a very small boy appointed to the duty, another number, from a corresponding coffer, denominated the prize. Both numbers were called out and noted by gentlemen well-known in the community, who had accepted the office of scrutineers. The Lottery may be said to have been an attempt—on speculative and commercial principles—at an Art Union distribution of Eastern objects of vertu, and its design and conduct appear to have given general satisfaction.

The old British jail buildings in Peking Road are being pulled down, as a preliminary to the erection of the new Post-office on their site. The building, being a Government one, will of course be carried out by H.B.M. Office of Works.

Among the arrivals from Japan are H.E. Yanagiwara Sakimitsu, to be Japanese Minister at Peking, and Takaho Motoharo, his Secretary of Legation, and an Assistant Secretary. We understand that the Minister and his suite will remain in Shanghai a few days before proceeding to the capital.

We have received for review a French-Chinese pocket dictionary, compiled by M.M. Lemaire and Giquel, which will no doubt be found useful by students. The specialty of the book is a technical dictionary of professional and scientific terms used at the Foochow Arsenal, which forms the second part and covers nearly 100 pages.

It is said that Herr Annecke, formerly German Consul here, and at present Chargé d'Affaires at Peking, will change places with Herr Von Brandt, the latter becoming Minister Resident at Peking, and Herr Annecke assuming the same position at Yedo.

We hear that the three Swiss gentlemen who were denied the recognition hitherto extended to them by the Consul-General for France, in consequence of their signing the recent memorial against M. Godeaux's action in the matter of the riot, have been taken under German protection.

Our Ningpo correspondent writes:—We are daily expecting the arrival of the Futai, who is on a grand tour of inspection, and who has already reached Chusan, whence he comes in the Fuhpo, escorted by a frigate and various gunboats,—an interesting feature of the progress China is (say what people may) making, and a final answer to those who declare that the Chinese Government will not adopt Foreign appliances when their convenience and utility is demonstrated. They refused to have a foreign-controlled fleet, but they are ready enough to have and use one of their own.

The new encampment near Overweg's bungalow has been surrounded by a substantial mud wall and moat. The wall is about twelve feet high, battlemented after the model of the city wall, and well finished.

Rumours are current that one or two firms are about to establish at Kiukiang. We hope it may be true. It is difficult to understand why foreigners should be almost wholly deprived of sharing in the growing import trade of that port, as they have the advantage of direct trade, and of being able to develop the transit traffic which a native will not venture to do. Unless a dealer is certain that a barrier on a new route will honour his transit pass, he will not risk his goods; and wisely too, for in the event of detention he has no appeal but to the authorities whose interest it is to suppress the transit trade. Kiukiang has been much neglected, but there is still a good field for enterprising firms with intelligent agents. It seems strange that this port, whose trade is worth 11,000,000 taels a year, cannot afford business enough for as many firms as Tamsui, whose trade is not much over Tls. 1,500,000 a year.

The Peking Gazette of May 16th contains a Decree according an Audience to the newly arrived Russian Minister (M. de Butzow); and the audience was had at eight o'clock on the morning of the 20th May. He was received in the same pavilion in the palace grounds in which foreign ministers were last year received, and in general with the same forms. He was not, however, kept so long waiting as they were.

Shen Pao-chen, a red button mandarin, formerly Chinese head of the Foochow Arsenal, and at one time Futai of Kiangsi, has been ordered, by Imperial Decree, to proceed to Taiwan, as Special Commissioner for the Chinese Government. This would show that the authorities at Peking are becoming alive to the importance of looking after their interests in Formosa.

FOOCHOW.

We take the following from the Foochow Herald, dated May 21st:—

It is rumoured that the Arsenal at Pagoda Anchorage is about to be closed for a period of five months. The establishment is said to be too great a drain upon the resources of the Province.

A very heavy freshet came down the river towards the close of the last week, flooding the low lying streets on both banks of the river, and, to a certain extent, doing a good service by cleaning the streets of accumulated masses of filth and garbage.

The fifteenth and last Chinese gunboat, built under foreign superintendence, was successfully launched at the Arsenal, Pagoda Anchorage, on the 16th inst. The launch was effected solely by the Chinese employés.

The Japanese invasion of Formosa is an accomplished fact. About 5,000 men, with a strong force of artillery, were landed on the 12th May at a place about fifty miles south of Takao. The disembarkation was not opposed by the Chinese troops, a significant circumstance when we consider that the invasion is in itself a breach of international law—no declaration of war with the Chinese Empire having been proclaimed by the Japanese Government. However, our sympathies are with the Japanese, to whom we wish every success, believing as we do that any Government would be preferable to the effete and corrupt administration through whose wilfulness and rapacity one of the most fertile islands on the earth has long been, and still is, virtually a terra incognita.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 6th June; the P. and O. mail from London April 17 was received on the 24th May, the French mail of April 24. on the 31st May, and the P. and O. mail of 1st May on the 5th June. We take th following items of news from the China Mail:—

Digitized by Google

The report of the commission which has been appointed to enquire into the effect of the blockade by the Canton cruisers on the trade of the colony was sent in about a month ago, but it has not yet been published.

The prosecution of the men on board the Mandarin junk, which was caught in the act of firing on some fishing-boats in Stanley Bay, has been abandoned, the Viceroy of Canton having claimed the junk as a Government boat. It seems extraordinary that this course should have been adopted upon the bare promise of the Viceroy to punish the offenders, as the Chief Justice expressed his regret when the case was withdrawn that justice had not been allowed to take its course, as it would have been incumbent on the men to show beyond doubt that they had the authority of the Canton authorities to act as they did. Their having escaped will doubtless form an encouragement for further depredations of the same kind by soi disant revenue cruisers.

In regard to the Formosar Expedition a large number of Japanese soldiers have already landed about forty miles south of Takow, on what is recognised Chinese territory. The Chinese there from the Canton Province, are exceedingly delighted at their arrival, as they are rejoiced at the idea of having such powerful allies to assist them in their fight with the aborigines. You must know that an incessant border warefare has been going on for many years past, in which the mutual aim of each has been to secure each others heads. In this warfare a good many heads have changed owners on both sides. The appearance of such a large force of Japanese, with the expressed purpose of subjugating the whole of the savage territory, is the source of unmixed delight to these men, who have had to live so long with their guns in their hands to keep themselves from extermination.

Though the Japanese were arriving in such force, the authorities here seemed to be making no move in the matter, and appeared as indifferent as though the attack were to be made on some place with which they had no concern. No impediments, moreover, were thrown in the way of the steamers by the native Custom house officials, and speculation was exceedingly rife as to what would be the policy of the Government in a crisis like the present. The fact is, native officialdom has all along been in the greatest possible excitement, and couriers have been incessantly passing and repassing between here and Foochow. It takes the Chinaman a long time, however, to move in any matter, and the present method of communication is so slow that it is impossible to act quickly. It is to be hoped that the Chinese authorities will get such an impression of the need of the telegraph from recent affairs, that all the past opposition to it will pass away for ever. At last a large corvette has arrived here on her way to the scene of action, and it is said that a row may very shortly be anticipated, should the Japanese develop any marked intentions of conquest. The influential and wealthy Chinese in Formosa firmly believe that the Japanese intend taking possession of the island, and great numbers have removed their families and their goods to the mainland. There are rumours that the Japanese who have landed are suffering severly from fever, and that in a recent skirmish with the savages forty or fifty were killed.

H.M.S. Hornet which arrived last week from where the Japanese landed, was ordered away almost immediately to the same place, and will remain there till relieved by H.M.S. Dwarf. The U.S.S. Monocacy, which was to have left last week, has been ordered to remain here till further orders, very probably with the idea of watching the progress of events. As there is a reporter from the New York Tribune in connection with the expedition, we may look before very long for spicy accounts from the seat of war.

The Queen's birthday passed off on Saturday, 30th, minus some of the usual ceremonies—notably that of a parade or review of the troops. A legend goes that at 5 A.M. three salvos—or whatever the noisy discharge of firearms is called—and three cheers for Her Majesty, were fired off by the 80th Regiment on the parade ground, but for all practical purposes there was nothing of the sort, to the great disappointment of the native population. The arrangement carried out may have been quite correct, but was not over courteous to the Colony. The Chinese explanation of the omission to make the parade public, is too good to be lost. "That Soldier man savey walkee No. 1. ; he no savey too much that fightee pidgin. No wantsee any man look see"—i.e. "very good at a march out, but indifferent at drill; don't want people to look at them." There was no official reception at Government-house.

Latest advices from Foochow point to the tea market there as not having opened, although some new teas had already gone forward by the last and present mail. The fleet of steamers at Pagoda Anchorage was larger than on any other occasion. On the berth for London were the steamers Cheops, Glenearn, Montgomeryshire, Crocus, Sirius, Glaucus, and Braemar Castle, with the Achilles, Canton, Galatea, and Pleiades expected. This competition will not, however, improve prospects of high freights.

News of two significant facts come to hand from Peking ; the one that Mr. T. F. Wade, Minister for Great Britain, and M. Geoffroi, the Minister for France, having asked to be admitted to an audience with the Emperor on Chinese New Year's day with the view of paying their respects, in accordance with the custom of the high dignitaries of the Government, and the usage of diplomatic representatives in Western countries, on similar occasions, were, not very politely, refused; the other that a similar request made by the new Russian Minister has been granted, an edict to that effect appearing in the Peking Gazette of the 16th ult. We are not making too much of the first incident in saying that it is of some importance. It manifests the idea entertained by the Chinese of what the much talked of "audience" of June last really meant. It clearly shows that, so far from being regarded as a precedent to be habitually followed, it was looked upon as a magnificent and isolated concession not to be easily repeated.

THE JAPANESE ON FORMOSA.

A correspondent at Amoy gives the following news of the Japan expedition :—

27th May, 1874.

Captain Smith has just arrived with a Japanese transport from the seat of war, with the following news :—About six or seven days ago one hundred and fifty or one hundred and sixty Japanese were sent out to reconnoitre ; when they had proceeded some distance they saw three or four men, who waved them to come on. Three of the Japanese obeyed, and went towards them, but when they got within fifteen or twenty yards of them the savages fired at them with matchlocks, killing one of them on the spot, and wounding another. The unwounded man and the one wounded beat a hasty retreat, and before the body of the reconnoitring party could get up, the savages had the head of the dead Japanese cut off, had stripped him naked and cleared off with his arms.

The party went back and reported what had taken place, when it was at once agreed there should be war to the knife, and no quarter given. So it was settled that the village should be surrounded, which was done two nights afterwards, before daylight, by 400 or 500 Japanese soldiers ; the fighting then commenced. How many were killed is not known at present. Two Japanese are stated to have lost their lives, and the soldiers brought in eleven heads, besides a large quantity of arrows, spears, and matchlocks.

MANILA.

The following particulars of an engagement with Sooloo pirates are from the Manila Comercio. The gunboat Paragua left for a cruise in the direction of Dapitan, in consequence of news of the appearance of Moorish pirates off Sibuco. These pirates were, it was supposed, those who had in the middle of March set out from Lap Buan. The Paragua being at Dapitan under the command of Lieutenant Caravaca, received news from the military commander of that district that at 7 A. M. that morning people from two prahus had sacked a village near the chief town ; the gunboat was in consequence got ready, the Governor of Dapitan with some troops, and the person who had brought the intelligence, going in her. They left at noon, and succeeded in sighting the prahus at 3 P. M. ; from that time they began to give chase to them. Within two hours they overtook the largest where navigation was very dangerous, owing to the great number of shoals ; a struggle ensued, and the prahu was captured, together with the articles plundered, including the bell of the church. Of the Moors, some thirty were killed, about ten succeeding in getting ashore. From the statement of a captive who was found in the captured prahu, a Datu, the chief of the expedition, was amongst the slain.

This affair ended with nightfall ; the neighbourhood was extremely dangerous for towing the prahu. Notwithstanding this, several holes made in that vessel by discharges from the Paragua were plugged, and the gunboat at great risk, but ably handled, returned to Dapitan with the Moorish vessel. She arrived there at midnight, and was triumphantly received by the inhabitants of the village. The other prahu had been lost out of sight the evening before, the gunboat not being in condition to give chase to her from want of fuel, and also owing to the engine being slightly out of order. Other vessels which are also cruising in these waters may come in sight of her and give her chase. On board the prahu made prize of, lantacas, muskets and swords, &c., were captured. Several piratical Moorish vessels continue roaming about the coasts of some of the Visayas islands, doubtless with the object of enabling the pirates to commit their criminal depredations, but the activity of two Spanish men-of-war and the intense watchfulness they display near the villages lying on the coast, prevent these wretches from carrying out their wicked designs. The German barque Marie Louise, which was captured last autumn for carrying on an unlawful traffic with Sulu, has been employed in the Spanish navy as a transport ship, and was afterwards sold by auction. The affair has long been the subject of negotiation, but it seems at last to have been settled between the German and Spanish Governments, as the captain of the ship, who has been staying at Hong Kong, has received a telegram from the German Consulate, instructing him to resume the command of the vessel at Manila.

According to the returns published by the Customs the quantity of hemp and sugar exported during the first four months of the year brought into the Treasury the sum of $421,398.50.

Messrs. Tuason entertained several friends at a grand banquet. Amongst the distinguished guests were H.E. Admiral Brummer and officers of the Russian frigate Askold, as well as H.E. Vice-Admiral Antequera of the Spanish navy. Admiral Antequera entertained H.E. the Russian Admiral and his officers at a grand banquet, the officers of the Spanish navy being also present; the band of the Artillery discoursed sweet music during the repast. Toasts were proposed and drank, and when the distinguished guests left in the launch for the vessel, a perfect shower of blue lights illuminated the harbour. It is needless to add that all the men-of-war in port were lighted up.

SIAM.

BANGKOK.

The Siamese Government Gazette made its appearance on the 17th May. It is a neat quarto of eight pages. The paper and the printing is highly commendable, and is in every way superior to any vernacular newspaper that has heretofore emanated from the Government Printing Office. This sheet owes its existence to the enlarged spirit of H.M. the Supreme King of Siam. It purports to owe its existence to a recollection of the advantages that grew out of a small sheet occasionally published during the late reign.

The Grand Council has had two sessions since its appointment. We learn that the revenue of the country is now occupying their attention. It is to be hoped that the old method of collecting the revenue, which was the source of many unjust exactions from the common people, not contemplated by the Government, and which so effectually checked the industry and the accumulating tendencies of the people, will be judiciously remodelled and placed upon a basis, such that the masses will be enabled to see that the Government asks of the people only such support as will make it efficient to secure for them good protection and the full enjoyment of their inalienable rights.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 13th June; the French mail from London, May 8, was received on the 6th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 15 was was expected on the 14th June. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

His Excellency the Governor is still absent on his visit to Penang, and intends remaining there until about the 25th, when he will leave on his return to Singapore. We are glad to learn that H.E. has received a telegram at Penang from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, generally approving of his policy in the Malay Peninsula and consenting to the appointment of Residents at Perak and Laroot. This action indicates that the Home authorities are at last convinced of the necessity of looking after British interests in this part of the world, and awakening to a sense of our duty towards the native States in our immediate vicinity; whose real interests, identical with our own, have so long been allowed to suffer through the apathy and neglect of the local and Home Governments in matters vitally affecting not merely the interests of British subjects, but the prosperity of our Colony and the honour and prestige of the nation.

The changes in the Courts of the Colony, alluded to in our last Summary, came into effect on the 1st. The first session of the new Criminal Court of Quarter Sessions, to be presided over by the Puisne Judge sitting with at least one magistrate and one Justice of the Peace, will open on the 15th; this Court will have to try many of the important cases that have hitherto occupied the time of Judge and jury at the Criminal Sessions, and as summary proceedings are usually preferable among a native population, can scarcely fail to prove a valuable acquisition to our judicial institutions. The new Summary Civil Court, with jurisdiction from $10 up to $500, will hold its first sitting on the first Monday in July, and be held monthly thereafter. The experiment of entrusting a share of the magisterial work to honorary magistrates selected from among the community is now being tried. Two honorary magistrates sit each day in the Court formerly presided over by Mr. Gottlieb, and during the past week have discharged their duties most creditably. As the labour is divided among a large number, and the cases coming before them are not usually of a difficult nature, the work will not require any great sacrifice of time on the part of any individual member of the community; while in the event of a riot, or any extraordinary press of magisterial labour, these gentlemen will have the advantage of a fixed position, and some experience as magistrates, which cannot fail to place them in higher estimation among the native population.

The latest news received from Atchin is not favourable to the Dutch, who have found it necessary to despatch reinforcements to the troops left in the Kraton. The Atchinese, taking advantage of the withdrawal of the bulk of the forces, had gathered in considerable numbers in the neighbourhood of the fortification, and the garrison may be said to be closely confined to their own works. The Atchinese endeavoured to cut off communication with the sea, and probably but for the fear of Dutch reprisals by the people in the immediate neighbourhood, who therefore maintained a friendly attitude, it is likely the attempt would have been seconded by them, with a better chance of success. The health of the garrison was most unsatisfactory, many of the soldiers suffering from fever. The weather was, however, said to be favourable, and afforded excellent opportunities for landing reinforcements if sent speedily.

We regret to learn of the loss of the French barque Charles Auguste, Capt. Cogrel, which struck on a reef in the Torres Straits on the 26th April, on a voyage from Newcastle, N.S.W., to Singapore, with coals. The captain and eight of the crew arrived safely in a boat at Somerset, Northern Australia, and were brought on to this port by the E. and A. mail steamer Jeddah. The chief officer with eight more of the crew left in another boat, and sailed out of sight ahead on the second night after leaving the ship; they were not heard of during the three weeks the captain remained at Somerset, but may, however, have made for another part of the Australian coast, or have been picked up by some vessel on their way.

The arrivals of steamers via the Suez Canal have been the Amsterdam from Grimsby on the 7th, Hankow and Menelaus from Liverpool, and Bengal from London, on the 9th, Leon from Liverpool, via Cadiz, on the 10th, and Estepona from London on the 11th. The departures homeward have been the Aurrera for Liverpool, via Cadiz, on the 9th, the Agamemnon and Glenartney on the same day, and the Glenfalloch on the 11th for London, with teas.

A letter from Malacca says:—E. E. Isemonger, Esq., one of the newly-appointed police magistrates, took his seat on the bench for the first time on the 1st inst., and Captain A. R. Ord commenced his duties as assistant colonial treasurer the same day. A somewhat curious as well as novel case of cheating took place lately. The case was fully investigated by the new police magistrate, but the culprit succeeded in getting off, owing to a slight discrepancy between the evidence of the complainant and that of his principal witness.

IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—No improvement had taken place in the market, but arrivals being large, lower rates had been accepted. A considerable business had been done in Shirtings and Yarns. Woollens remained without change. There was no inquiry for Metals.

HANKOW.—There had been a moderate amount of business transacted in the chief makes of Plain Cottons, at, with few exceptions, a further fall on last mail's rates. In other Textiles little had been done.

SHANGHAI.—A fairly good inquiry had existed for Plain Cottons at the commencement of the fortnight, but latterly the market had been extremely quiet. The chief feature to notice was the establishment by an importing firm of "auctions of sound goods without reserve," the result of which for the present had been to curtail ordinary inquiry. Cottons: A moderate business had been transacted in Grey Shirtings at about former rates, 9 10-12 lbs. Cloth keeping in good demand. T-Cloths of ordinary qualities had been in fair request, Mexicans 8 lbs. also attracting some attention. Drills had changed hands to some extent, but inquiry was less active towards the close. White Shirtings were quiet. In Fancy Cottons, Black Velvets had been asked for, and sold at lower prices. Woollens were dull of sale, the late auctions having fully supplied the local dealers. Quotations for these goods were quite nominal. Metals were quiet at unchanged values.

FOOCHOW.—The only sale of Piece Goods reported had been one of 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, 500 pieces at $2.72½ per piece. About 550 pigs of Lead are reported to have found buyers at from $8.20 to $8.25 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The market had remained quiet during the fortnight for both Piece Goods and Yarn, and only a moderate business had been done. Drills had attracted some attention, but there was little change to report in any other article.

CANTON.—Lead was being forced off at declining prices, last quotation was $7.70 for fair brands, at which buyers could scarcely be found. W.B. was quoted $7.85 to 7.90 per picul. Quicksilver was wanted at $188 to 189 per picul.

BATAVIA.—The position of the market had undergone no material change during the fortnight; there still continued a fair demand for Dutch staples at late currencies, but no improvement was reported in English Grey Goods and Yarns.

SINGAPORE.—Messrs. Boustead's Circular says:—We have no improvement to note in the general tone of our market for Piece Goods. Most articles are in limited demand, and prices weaker. The only exception is 6 lbs. T-Cloth, which keeps in good demand. Scarlet Long Ells 8½ lbs. to 9 lbs. wanted at $6 to 6¼. In Coloured Yarns the demand is chiefly for Light Green and Turkey Red, at about late rates.

PENANG.—In the early portion of the fortnight the market continued very quiet, but during the closing week a good demand had sprung up for export to Atchin, and a large business had been done in several staples, but at a decline on previous rates—importers being free sellers,

TEA.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer, and Co.'s report says :—Owing to high prices we have but a limited business to report by this opportunity, total settlements to time of writing, as compared with last year, being :—1874 : 7,839 chests, 87,268 half-chests, 7,504 boxes. 1873 : 72,850 chests, 100,996 half-chests, 3,849 boxes. Particulars of settlements are :—At Exchange 6s. 3d., freight £5 10s., adding Tls. 3 for duty. 10,028 half-chests, 1,106 boxes, at Tls. 50 to Tls. 55 per picul ; 7,953 half-chests at Tls. 45 to Tls. 49¾ per picul ; 3,655 half-chests at Tls. 40 to Tls. 44¾ per picul ; 700 chests, 15,267 half-chests, at Tls. 35 to Tls. 39¾ per picul ; 23,237 half-chests, 4,878 boxes at Tls. 30 to Tls. 34¾ per picul ; 6,736 chests, 23,065 half-chests at Tls. 25 to Tls. 29¾ per picul ; 403 chests, 4,063 half-chests, 1,520 boxes at Tls. 22½ to Tls. 24¾ per picul. Opening rates for the various districts as compared with last year :—Ningchows, Tls. 40 to Tls. 55, against Tls. 38 to Tls. 45 ; Cheong-sow-kais, Tls. 27 to Tls. 37½, against Tls. 26 to Tls. 35 ; Toong Shans, Tls. 29½ to Tls. 35, against Tls. 30 to Tls. 35 ; Soong Yongs, Tls. 30½ to Tls. 38, against Tls. 28 to Tls. 35 ; Young-low-toong, Tls. 26 to Tls. 32½, against Tls. 24 to Tls. 33½ ; Ping-kongs, Tls. 24 to Tls. 29½, against Tls. 24½ to Tls. 27 ; Low-yongs, Tls. 24½ to Tls. 27½, against Tls 23½ to Tls. 27. Regarding the crop we do not consider it up to the average. A few of the districts compare favourably with last year, but others are not so good, the falling off being more particularly in the lower class kinds. The Ningchows are the chief feature this season ; they are probably the finest teas seen for some years, and have realised the highest prices on record. Last year two or three small parcels were sold between Tls. 45 and Tls. 48, againgst which, during the past week, nearly 18,000 half-chests found buyers between Tls. 45 and Tls. 54. Next to the Ningchows the Cheong-sow-kais show most improvement over last year's teas, being stronger and fuller in the cup while quite equal in quality. Soong-yongs are also strong good teas, and both districts have obtained an advance on last year's prices of Tls. 2 to Tls. 3. Some rather better parcels of Ping-kong tea have realised up to Tls. 29½, or Tls. 3 over last year. The Oonfars were late this season, musters having been placed on the market during the last two days only ; some thirty or forty parcels have been shown, but so far we have not heard of any sales. Judging from what we have seen of them ourselves we do not think them so good as last year's. Young-low-toongs, Low-yongs, and the commoner district teas we consider inferior to last year's, they have however realised the same prices. Opening rates were maintained up to the 19th May, and on that day there was even a marked advance, owing to there being only a few parcels left on the market which were somewhat eagerly competed for for shipment per Agamemnon. Since then tea has come forward more freely, and there is now rather a large stock. In a few days we shall probably see a considerable decline in values.

KIUKIANG.—Black Teas : The market was opened on the 19th May, and the business since had consisted of three chops Kiukiang-packed, at Tls. 36.5.0 to 38.5.0, and 17 chops Ningchows, at Tls. 39.0.0 to 46.0.0. 78 chops had arrived, equal to 32,100 half chests, and large supplies were coming in.

SHANGHAI.—Black : No business. Green : Prices paid in the country for fine chops of Moyune and Teenkais were said to be about one or two taels higher, and for medium and common about the same as last year. Pingsueys cost less all round, but common parcels showed the larger decline.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s report says :—The new Season's Teas commenced arriving on the 19th May, and up to date (30th May) supplies have come forward slowly. Total arrivals to date are :—Congou : Season 1874-75, 53,400 chests; 1873-74, 71,782 chests ; 1872-73, 156,814 chests. Oolong : Season 1874-75, 570 half chests ; 1873-74, 1,178 half chests ; 1872-73, 12,363 half chests. From the samples at present shown it would be premature to give a decided opinion of the quality of the crop, although so far they do not come up to the past season. Paklings have been offered in sufficient quantities to judge of the yield, and they are decidedly inferior to last season both in leaf and liquor. A few settlements of this kind have been made, and the prices paid for first purchases are one to two taels under last year ; the better parcels remaining are now firmly held for rates fully equal to the previous season's. Up country Teas are expected to arrive during the coming week, and in the next impression a fuller report will be given. The following steamers are in port waiting to load for London: Glenearn, Brœmar Castle, Sirius, Crocus, Cheops, Glaucus, and Montgomeryshire ; and one or two others are expected. No rate of freight has yet been fixed.

AMOY.—Amoy Oolongs : Arrivals to date (3rd June) amounted to 1,193 half-chests, representing 40 chops ; this was of course too small a quantity to form a correct estimate of the quality of the first crop, but, so far, the teas compared favourably with those of last year. Supplies of first crop teas were variously estimated at from 70,000 to 80,000 half-chests. Congous : Arrivals only 423 half-chests, representing 19 chops, their quality was about on a par with those of last year, and the season's supply of this kind was reported to be from 25,000 to 30,000 half-chests. Formosa Oolongs : Purchases commenced in the first week of May, and a few settlements were made at an advance of about $2 on last year's opening rates ; buying became general almost immediately, however, and in many cases prices fully equal to those at the highest point of the market last season were paid. Up to the 18th May, leaf for about 3,000 half-chests had been settled, and the bulk of purchases showed an average advance of about $8 on opening rates in 1873—quality considered. The teas to hand seemed superior in make to those of last season, and the better grades were pungent, and had a full Formosa flavour. It was difficult to give precise quotations owing to the irregularity of purchases, but the following may be taken as about the closing rates :—Good cargo to superior, $32 to $36 ; superior to fine, $37 to $42 ; fine to finest, $43 to $48 ; choice to choicest, $49 to $54 ; short price in Amoy.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Market Report says:—The business in Tea, as shown by the market settlements reported during the past fortnight, has been on a moderate scale. Holders are less exorbitant in their asking prices, but in view of the large quantity gone foward and still in preparation under contract, operators generally look for still further reduced prices. Congous have not been dealt in here, but at Macao there have been purchases to some extent at Tls. 18 to 23 per picul for fair to medium grades. Scented Teas: In Capers the settlements have been mostly in the medium to good medium description, which show a decline of about Tls. 1 per picul ; a few parcels fine have been placed at a reduction of about Tls. 2, while in the lower class scarcely anything has been done, and there are but few desirable of these on offer. In Orange Pekoes, long leaf kinds may be quoted about Tls. 1 cheaper since last mail, and settlements have been reported at Tls. 20 to 26 for medium to good medium, and at Tls. 27 to 29 for fine ; "new-make" sorts are also fully Tls. 1 under previously extravagant prices. In Canton Greens no purchases are reported. The following are the settlements reported during the fortnight :—

Scented Orange Pekoe... 9,000 boxes ... at Tls. 17 to 29 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Unfavourable advices from home continuing to be received, native holders had again made some slight concessions, and a decline in Mybash and other hanks had taken place. For Oshious, &c., prices remained as before. The quality offering was of inferior quality, but reports of the new crop promise well. The settlements during the period had amounted to 250 bales, which included about 40 bales from the Imperial Filature Factory at Tomyoka. The M.M.S.S. Volga, on the 3rd June, took 133 bales. The reports of the silk worms continue favourable, and Government are said to have removed all restrictions on their production.

SHANGHAI.—The business done had been small, and excluding 78 bales shipped to the Coast Ports for native consumption, reduced the actual settlements for foreign markets to barely over 100 bales. From the interior the reports had continued favourable, and although the original estimates had been somewhat reduced, owing to some mortality amongst the worms in the later stages, the Chinese spoke confidently of a large yield, and estimated it at fully 65,000 bales. Settlements for the past fortnight, Chinas, 200 bales. Total settlements since 1st June, 1873, 57,600 bales ; against 1872-3, 56,300 bales ; 1871-2, 50,200 bales. Comparative unsold Stock on this market on the 30th May, 1874, 200 to 300 bales ; 1873, 100 bales ; 1872, 100 bales.

CANTON.—Settlements of New Season Silk to extent of 50 to 100 bales were reported to have taken place, but as usual at this stage, there was difficulty in ascertaining particulars of purchases. Most parcels on offer were rather foul, and the quality was not commended. The weather was favourable for the growth of the second crop, and it was hoped that subsequent yields would show considerable improvement in the general quality. Loongkongs : 130 piculs of Seulam, and other sorts taken by Parsees for the Indian market. Re-reels : no contracts had transpired, and until a cleaner thread can be found for reeling purposes, little was likely to be done in this branch. Stock computed at 300 to 400 bales Tsatlee, 100 bales Loongkong, and 120 bales Kowkong. Waste : No new waste had come to hand. About 100 bales old season's remained in stock, $60 per picul was the price asked.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

The Glenartney, which left Hankow on the 29th May, one day after the Agamemnon, arrived in dock on the 16th, followed by the Agamemnon on the 17th, and the Glenfalloch on the 18th. The Braemar Castle, from Foochow, with the first of the new teas, is expected on the 23rd.

The Glenearn, which left Foochow on the 14th ult., has arrived at Aden with screw damaged, twenty-nine days from Singapore, and fifteen guineas premium was paid on her previous to receipt of telegram.

The hull and cargo of the Canton, wrecked in the river Min, has been sold for $1,950.

The P. and O. steamer Nizam, which brought this mail to Suez, has new teas on board, and will come via Canal to Southampton.

COPENHAGEN, JULY 12.—The Great Northern Telegraph Company has obtained from the Chinese Government the privilege of establishing a telegraph line over a distance of fifteen miles between Foochow and Pogoda Anchorage. The Chinese Government will undertake to protect the line.

THE WAR IN ATCHIN.

THE HAGUE, JULY 13.—An official despatch from the Governor of Java announces two positions occupied by the Atchinese have been captured by the Dutch navy, after a sharp engagement; the result being that the situation of the Dutch troops and their communication with the Atchin River is more secure than before. The losses on the side of the Dutch were four men; whereas the Atchinese lost nineteen killed. The Atchinese were prevented by a well-sustained fire from thr owing up works in front of the Dutch posts.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us that the Taku Vice-Consulate is about to be withdrawn. This Vice-Consulate has now been established thirteen years, and so long as British steamers and sailing vessels are despatched to Tientsin and Taku, and while British subjects reside at Taku, the retention of the office is absolutely necessary at the present time, when there is a probability of a railroad being constructed to run between Taku and Tientsin, and Taku is likely to become an important commercial port, the withdrawal of the office would seem to be ill-advised. For political reasons it should most certainly be retained. Its withdrawal would in the eyes of the Chinese be a sign of the weakening of our prestige, and in the north of China, more especially at the present time, when the Chinese are endeavouring to compete with foreign commercial companies, and at the same time making every effort to rival foreign nations as a military power.

A STATEMENT having been made in some of the London papers that the treaty concluded by Sir ANDREW CLARKE, Governor of Singapore, with the native States of Perak and Laroot, had been ratified by our Government, we have authority for stating that no such ratification has taken place. The policy of these treaties requires the most careful consideration of the Government, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies in particular, and we are not surprised that Lord CARNARVON has found it impossible in the full swing of the Parliamentary Session to give the required time to the matter.

THE CHINA AND JAPAN MAILS, VIA SAN FRANCISCO.—In our last issue, under the head of "Latest Advices," we gave Yokohama dates to 23rd May, via San Francisco. It appears, however, that the Yokohama advices to 31st May brought by the China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vancouver to San Francisco were delivered in London on the 7th inst. in thirty-seven days, including two days' postal detention in America.

MESSRS. HENDERSON, COULBORN, AND CO., of Renfrew, have launched the Normandy, an iron screw steamer of about 1,000 tons and 160-horse power nominal, for the Eastern and Australian Royal Mail Company. She is intended for the company's mail service between Singapore and Sydney.

AT the Lecture-hall, Mildmay Park, London, on Tuesday, July 14, Mr. Edmund Wheatley, of the Chinese Customs' Service, gave a lecture, entitled "To China and Back in Sixty Minutes; with some account of what the missionaries and teetotalersare doing in the Middle Kingdom."

MESSRS. JOHN ELDER and Co. have launched from their shipbuilding yard at Fairfield, Govan, an iron screw-steamship of 3,000 tons register, and 400-horse power nominal, for the "Stoomvaart Maatschappy Nederland." The vessel was named the Voorwaarts.

THE China Trans-Pacific steamship Vasco de Gama, Captain J. F. Rice, arrived at San Francisco from Yokohama on the 11th inst., in sixteen days seventeen hours, and leaves again for Yokohama and Hong Kong on the 23rd inst.

THE "Nederland" Mail steamship Prins van Oranje, Captain Aukes, sailed from Southampton on the 14th inst. for Java, with a full cargo, 45 passengers, the Dutch mails, and £10,000 in specie from here.

THE Pacific Mail Company's steamer Alaska, with advices from Yokohama 5th ult., arrived at San Francisco on the 27th ult., and the mails reached London this morning.

CHINESE RAILWAYS.

TAKING as his text a passage from the "Shoo King," a writer in the last number of the China Review contributes a particularly pertinent and sensible article on this subject. Recalling to the recollection of his readers the fierce opposition offered to progress in the early days of railway enterprise in our own country, he observes, "If less than "fifty years ago, and yet fresh in the memory of many "living people, the projectors of railways were regarded, "in the words of Mr. WILLIAM BROUGHAM, as 'maniacs "fit for Bedlam,' it is hardly too much to hope that before "long the shrill blasts of the railway whistle may be heard "in the plains of China, and the rush and whirl of the "locomotive become familiar to the myriads who inhabit "the crowded cities of the Middle Kingdom." Having pointed out that one of the first essentials of real progress in China is "the extinction of the power of the 'Literati,'" and having reminded us that, unlike his confrère in Japan, the Chinese official seeks only his own interest, and not that of his country, the writer turns in blank despair from the bare idea that the natives will in any way help themselves in the matter before us, and he concludes that the foreigner, and the foreigner alone, can be depended on to be "the pioneer of truth, and light, and progress in such a land of ignorance and prejudice." The question naturally arises as to how foreign influence can possibly be brought to bear on the subject, and our authority first discusses the case of the foreign employés of the Chinese Government, but while fully admitting that they have the good of the Chinese at heart, he observes that they are not free agents, being the paid servants of the very mandarins who are themselves the greatest bar to the development of civilising influences in the Celestial Empire. These mandarins, nevertheless, have shown themselves willing enough to adopt the suggestions of their foreign subordinates in what may be comprehensively termed defensive matters, the aim and object of which is not disguised, and "were railways "only another step towards the extermination of the "foreigner, instead of being one of the greatest class-"levellers in creation, and, therefore, so adverse to Chinese "exclusiveness, they would long ago have been introduced "into the country," together with dockyards, arsenals, foreign military drill, &c. To whom, then, shall we look? To the British Government, acting spontaneously and solely in the interests of universal civilisation? That quarter is hopeless, for they care for none of these things. Owing to a perverse concatenation of circumstances the position of the British merchants in the matter is worse and more helpless than it was two or three years ago, for though ready and eager to supply the requisite capital, they have, in defiance of all Treaty rights and stipulations, been authoritatively forbidden to purchase land away from the Treaty ports, and the power to do that is, of course, a sine quâ non and of primary consideration in any plans for the construction of a railway.

Having passed in review the obstructiveness of the Chinese authorities, the position of the foreigners they employ, and the indifference of the British Government to the subject, having "demonstrated the utter helplessness "of the British merchant in China, and the vanity of "looking to the private enterprise of the Chinese," the writer concludes that people in China must look homewards, to England, where far greater difficulties in the way of the introduction of railways were successfully overcome but half a century ago by the persistent efforts of a few resolute and energetic men. The writer in the China Review advocates the forming of an Association for the promotion of a Chinese railway, and points out the best course for its members to pursue, viz., to go to Parliament and the Government, and offering to guarantee funds, men, materials, and everything else, never to cease urging the necessity of concluding a Convention with the Chinese Government to enable them to construct a railway and to obtain the land required for the purpose. The words of his summing up on this point are so forcible that we quote them in extenso. "It is absurd," he says, "to reply that "such a Convention would be impossible. Firmness and "decision are the first qualities required for such an under-"taking. Let a special mission be sent out by our Go-"vernment for the purpose; let some new blood be intro-"duced into our stagnant Diplomatic Agency at Peking; "let men only be selected who have our cause at heart, "and let them be supported at every movement; and of "welcome, and assistance, and encouragement, to the very "utmost, they may be indeed assured from every mercan-"tile house in China. Shall we, then, be still content to "do nothing? Shall the 'fractious child' policy still "continue? and will people at home never believe that "China is one of the richest countries on the earth, and "that it requires but a few determined men to take an in-"terest in the subject, and the great kingdom can be "thrown open, with all its treasures, for the benefit and "profit of mankind?" We earnestly trust that these cogent remarks will not fall upon stony ground; and that ere long they may bear abundant fruit will, we are sure, be the heart-felt desire of every one who takes a true interest in the welfare of the Chinese.

THE WESTERN CHINA ROUTE.

A SECOND letter has been addressed by Captain RICHARD SPRYE to the Presidents of the various Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, upon the subject of British trade with the Shans and Western Chinese by the direct land route from Rangoon, and Captain SPRYE considers that Baron RICHTHOFEN has, in his preference for the Tonking Songka river Route, refrained from noticing how much longer and more perilous the voyage is to the port at the Cuacum mouth of the Songka than it is to Rangoon, and that the advantages the Rangoon and Kiang Hung railway must possess over the China Sea and Songka River route are undoubted. The Captain dwells at length upon the richness of the Yunan province, and he quotes from many authorities on the subject, coupled with many geographical and statistical facts, which are very weighty arguments in his favour. The importance of the projected new route is earnestly urged in a commercial point of view, the long inland carriage in China and the many passing tolls, together with the risks in time of war, being deemed powerful reasons against the present route. Captain SPRYE quotes a letter from Admiral SHERARD OSBORN, which appeared in The Times in 1860, and in which the perils which our commerce in the China Seas would undergo in time of war are clearly put forth. "I will not," says Admiral OSBORN, "waste time in efforts to "impress upon official intellect what others have failed to "impress upon it, but will try and point out how home "and Indian trade with China may be carried on by a "shorter channel and one far less liable to capture in time "of war." It is to give every facility and every encouragement to the development of trade with Western China direct from the Bay of Bengal. It is a question as much for this country as for India.

With regard to the proceedings of the French in China an article from the Calcutta Friend of India is quoted in order to show the value of the Condore Islands in a military and naval sense. They are, says the writer of the article, to the Sea of China what the Isle of Perim is to the Red Sea. And in consequence of their proximity to the new French settlement of Saigon the French have very quietly occupied them. Mr. CHALONER ALABASTER, when coming round from Hong Kong to Calcutta in charge of the Chinese ex-Commissioner YEH, becoming aware of the French intention, reported it to the Indian Government, but the subject was shelved, consequently the French took possession of the islands, and Englishmen have to learn that in the event of war the whole China trade of England and India is at the mercy of France. Captain SPRYE pays a graceful tribute to the present Secretary of State for India, and concludes by hoping that numerous appeals made by the Chambers of Commerce to the Home Government will lead the Government of India to see that the days for exercising its power obstructively towards British commerce have now wholly passed away. Captain SPRYE includes in his letter copies of the communications addressed by him to the Duke of ARGYLL and Mr. GLADSTONE, which called forth a formal acknowledgment of receipt, and nothing more. A letter from the Marquis of SALISBURY, however, contains the satisfactory reply that Captain SPRYE's letter has engaged the consideration of the Secretary of State in Council, and that a copy will be forwarded to the Government of India. Since the receipt of that communication it has been intimated that a despatch sanctioning the survey of the Kiang Hung route was about to be addressed by the Secretary of State to the Indian Government.

WE understand that Vice-Admiral KRANTZ, at present acting Governor of Cochin China, is to be replaced by Vice-Admiral RIBOURT, now on a special mission to New Caledonia. Vice-Admiral KRANTZ will resume charge of the French fleet in the China seas.

SIGNOR LOBO D'AVILA, who has been appointed Governor of Macao by the Government of Lisbon, has been for some time a member of the Cortes. The appointment is considered a very good one in the interests of the Portuguese colony.

THE Right Hon. W. H. GREGORY will, we understand, return to Ceylon by the next mail, to resume his duties as Governor.

Literature.

La Chine; Son Histoire, Ses Ressources. Par LOUIS STRAUSS, Consul Honoraire de Belgique. Paris: Auguste Ghio. 1874.

M. Strauss rightly considers that the interest which Europe takes in the affairs of the Far East is increasing every day, and for this and other reasons he desires in the volume before us to make the commercial and industrial classes of Belgium acquainted with the political, social, and economic situation in the Middle Kingdom, and thus to contribute his mite towards arousing a spirit of enterprise amongst his fellow-countrymen and towards developing their relations with the countries of Eastern Asia. With this laudable end in view he has just published this work, which appears to us to be more comprehensive in its range of subjects than any other single book of its size on China with which we are acquainted. He divides his work into three main portions, viz. (1), the History of China; (2), China and its Inhabitants; (3), Products.

M. Strauss treats the History of China as being most properly divisible into four periods of very irregular length. The first period, from B.C. 3,000 to A.D. 220, comprehending what he terms the first dynasties, he disposes of in a somewhat summary manner in thirteen pages. In eleven more pages he brings us down to A.D. 1368, giving a rapid sketch—to quote his own words—of the power of the Eunuchs, Troubles and Material Progress. We may mention that he considers the epoch of the Tang dynasty, A.D. 620 to 906, to be one of the most brilliant in the history of the Celestial Empire. The licence which had reigned under previous Sovereigns gave place to virtue and heroism. Chinese colonies established themselves in Thibet, Mongolia, Korea, and the Lewchew Islands. The Island of Hainan, colonised under the Han Dynasty, Tonkin, Cambodia, and Cochin-China, were added to the Empire, one after another, by conquest, treaty, or voluntary submission. Agriculture and industry, too, made rapid strides under the paternal administration of this dynasty. M. Strauss next treats briefly of the Ming Dynasty, A.D. 1368 to 1646, and finally he goes with more minuteness into the history of the Manchu Dynasty, which now occupies the Dragon throne. Of the most famous Emperor of this period our author observes:—Kang-hsi died in 1722, after a reign of sixty years; his liberal and enlightened ideas on political subjects facilitated the submission of the cities of the South, and the definitive establishment of the Manchu Tartars on the throne of China. In his reign a frontier and commercial treaty was negotiated with Russia. On his death he left the Empire to his fourth son, Yung-chêng, so celebrated in the history of China for the wisdom of his government, and, throughout the whole world, for the expulsion of the Jesuits. Difficulties with foreigners occurred during his reign; but, says M. Strauss, it was reserved for his son and successor, Chien-lung, to close the gates of his Empire to the civilisation of the West; his reign, A.D. 1736-1796, was one of the longest and most brilliant in the history of his country. Of the occurrences during the reigns of this monarch's successors in the present century it is unnecessary to speak, and we think M. Strauss would have done wisely had he dealt more concisely with them.

In addressing himself to the second portion of his subject, our author remarks that this Empire, the most populous on the face of the earth, and also the most vast, if we do not reckon the deserts comprehended in the Russian Empire, is divided into four parts, viz., China, properly so called, the kingdom of Korea, Chinese Tartary and the tributary countries. China Proper, we need hardly mention, consists of eighteen provinces, of which, in his statistical table, M. Strauss estimates the population to amount, twenty-two years ago, to 536,909,300. These figures are simply preposterous, and, we should imagine, overshoot the mark by nearly 200,000,000. Though in the main he is fairly accurate, we must dissent from some of our author's statements under the head of La Famille, and we think that he has dealt with that important question in too off-hand a manner. Fancy, too, such a subject as the Chinese language being disposed of in a page and a half! He next passes in review, dealing but briefly with each, such matters as Government and Society, Schools and Literary Institutions, Religions, Justice, Arts, Sciences. He then treats of what he terms Renseignements Hydrographiques, speaking successively of peninsulas, islands, mountains, rivers, and means of communication (under which heading he reproduces the old error that Yangtsze means Son of the Ocean,—a statement which shows that he is not acquainted with Chinese characters), of lakes and canals, incidentally informing us that the Grand Canal was begun in 1289, and finished in 1409; and finally he says a few words on the subject of railways.

In the third division of his work M. Strauss discusses at length the products of the Chinese Empire, making a few remarks, by way of preface, on the climate and agriculture; of the latter, he observes that it has been held in honour from time immemorial, and is elevated by law and custom above all the other professions. Further, an edict of the Emperor Yung-cheng conferred honours and recompenses on all who should clear uncultivated lands; and although the Sovereign is regarded as the proprietor of the soil, yet the cultivator only pays to the State an impost in the nature of a tenth. Our space will not admit of our attempting to follow our author through his remarks on all the varied products of the vast empire of which he is writing, but the reader will find that he has some observations, of greater or less length, to make about almost every conceivable article of commerce, from fruits and vegetables up to tea and silk. Animaux domestiques et Faune come in for a large share of his attention, nor are ornithology and icthyology neglected. M. Strauss next gives some account of the mineral products of China, and he has collected together much information respecting coal, iron, copper, the precious metals, &c., &c., of which it is not possible to give even an analysis here. Having made sundry remarks on industry, wages, and such like topics, he lays before his readers some tables of the imports and exports at the Treaty ports of China, together with a few observations on commercial matters generally; and he concludes his work with a short appendix on the weights, measures, and money in use in China; and here he gives us one or two curious pieces of information, viz., that instruments for weighing were employed in the Middle Kingdom as far back as the twelfth century B.C., and that the Chinese foot, or unit of length, was adopted by the Emperor Huang-ti about B.C. 2,600, the division into inches taking place some 300 years later.

M. Strauss deserves much credit for the industry and care which he has expended on the volume before us; but, in taking leave of his book, we must express our regret at the unintelligible manner in which Chinese words are reproduced. We were, of course, prepared for the usual vagaries of French pronunciation; but our author, apart from inconsistency, is more hopeless in this respect than French writers commonly are. To quote but one instance of his method of rendering Chinese sounds, who would understand that Ta-Tshieng-kwaw was intended to represent the Chinese characters for "the Kingdom of the Great Pure Dynasty?"

Mr. Benjamin Smith Lyman, who left this country for Japan last year in order to make geological surveys for the Japanese Government, has sent home a preliminary report of the survey of Yesso. With one exception all the surveyors were Japanese. The Bulletin of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg is publishing a series of papers entitled "Diagnoses Plantarum norarum Japoniæ et Mandshuiæ." They are contributed by M. Maximowicz, and are a valuable addition to our knowledge of the Flora of Japan and Mantschouria. A work entitled "La Province de Smyrne," from the pen of Mr. Charles de Scherzer, Consul-General for Austria at Smyrna, has just been published. Mr. de Scherzer was a member of the Novara Expedition in 1868 to Siam, China, and Japan.

THE ORDEAN STABLE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph,)

SIR,—Your correspondent "Δ," who objects so much to a peer of the realm "flogging the dead horse" of the Straits, has evidently no objections to tying up the animal to his own triangle; for, certainly, while protesting that nobody in the Straits now cares for Sir H. Ord, who is "almost forgotten and therefore forgiven" there, he rakes up all the worst scandals of his administration in a manner that shows that he, at all events, has neither forgiven nor forgotten him or them. He seems, however, to resent Lord Stanley's interference when "no petition or formal complaint" had been preferred by the Straits people. But when did any ever emanate from them? Besides, are "Δ" and his constituents invested with the prerogative of condonation? And is a member of the grand inquest of the nation, who discovers great abuses, bound to hold his peace until he receives a brief? Let the colonists in future take a more active and intelligent part in the conduct of their own affairs; let them especially look after their representatives, the non-official members, and we shall hear no more of performances such as "Δ" does not like anybody but himself to expose. Meanwhile let us observe what Lord Stanley's drift really was. He had obviously nothing to do with Sir H. Ord or with the Colonists. It was the Colonial-office that he called to account, and this was the burden of his case:—A colony is kept in hot water for years. With a revenue of £300,000, no less than £50,000 is devoted to a Governor's palace, and £60,000 or £70,000 more to steamers. Worse still, a reprehensible practice of diverting public money from the objects to which it was destined to others more congenial to the Governor's tastes or wants is resorted to. Another bad practice, that of receiving presents, is introduced. In one instance, a payment is ordered to a favourite dependent which nothing could justify, which the Treasurer objected to and which the Colonial-office ordered to be refunded. Are these tales true? Has the Colonial-office investigated them? Will it do so? Or if it has already done so, will it produce its version of the facts and its decisions on them? This was the sum and substance of Lord Stanley's speech, and its object was manifestly to call to account the Minister of the Crown who is responsible for the good government of the Colonies.

And what was the answer? Lord Carnarvon refused a new enquiry indeed, but he promised all the correspondence which can throw light on the conduct of the Colonial-office as well as on that of the Governor. And in the mean time both he and the late Colonial Minister made speeches which left no doubt about the main facts, or the disapprobation which they had excited. "Δ" may consider all this "a sad waste of time," but those who love justice, however tardy, and those who know that publicity is an appropriate reward for evil as well as for good, will probably be of opinion that Lord Stanley rendered a great public service, and deserves the cordial approval of all classes for having dragged the doings of the late Straits executive before the bar of English public opinion.—I am, &c.,

July 14.

(THE HOUR.)

There is an old leaven of discontent which has fermented in the distant East between the English and the Dutch. Recent diplomacy has not improved matters, and while the Atchinese Sultan had his grievance against us, it is the popular opinion in Sumatra that the English officials at Singapore and Penang looked coldly upon the efforts of the Dutch to crush out the vestiges of Mohammedan rule in Atchin. It is said that the Chinese, who now swarm in the Indian Seas and form the bulk of the trading class, are bitterly hostile to the Dutch, and that they combine with the fanatical or "Arab" Mussulman party in bazaar intrigues against Dutch interests. M. Reville even states, though we should be loth to credit such an assertion without definite confirmation, that the Penang telegrams to Europe during the Atchinese war were believed to be coloured by an unfriendly feeling towards Holland. Whatever may be the truth of this rumour, it in any case indicates elements of political embarrassment in the Malayan Archipelago. We are apt to forget in England that the Kingdom of the Netherlands possesses a Colonial Empire of twenty millions of souls, with exports of the annual value of £12,000,000. The Dutch East Indies are a firmly-welded Empire, and are strengthened by the geographical concentration of the main islands of the Archipelago. Java has always been the most precious jewel in the colonial possessions of Holland. Not to mention numerous smaller islands, we find Celebes to the south of Java, and Sumatra, now for all practical purposes wholly under the Dutch dominion, on the north. To this we must add the partial rights of sovereignty which the Dutch assert over Papua or New Guinea. We are quite ready to agree with M. Reville that a limit should be put to international jealousies, and that the European Powers should recognise in the Dutch Colonial Empire what we ourselves claim to exercise in India—the beneficent and civilising influences of a superior race. But there are political precautions which savour not of jealousy but of wisdom, and we think that public attention should be drawn to the subject when M. Reville coolly annexes Borneo upon paper to the Dutch East Indies. He admits, it is true, that the extent of Dutch authority in that island is only partial. But it will be the fault of the English Government if they ever allow the friendly sovereignty of the successor of Rajah Brooke to be divorced from the protection of the British Crown. Of course the power of the Rajah of Sarawak is confined to a portion of the island, and he may not strictly be a feudatory of the British Empire. All we say is that, through a friendly Rajah, himself an Englishman by blood, we have a footing in Borneo, and we should be very careful that there and elsewhere in the Malayan Archipelago we do not lose ground through apathy or perverted policy. Though weak in Europe, the Dutch are by no means contemptible rivals when once the Straits of Malacca are passed. In the Indian Seas they are relatively strong, and the fact of our growing unpopularity whenever we come in collision with the Dutch in the East should make us anxious to guard against the decadence of our prestige and our commerce. Even should the Dutch be always friendly or pacific, we must remember that, if they were to combine with some other naval Power, they might give us grievous trouble. The duty before us is plain. It is to collect accurate information as to our interests in the Malayan Archipelago, and as to all forces which may operate prejudicially to our trade or legitimate political influence. This being done, we should adopt a firm and consistent Colonial policy, and always keep the route on the high seas clear from our Indian Empire to the Australian Continent.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

COURTS (STRAITS SETTLEMENTS) BILL.

(17th.) On the motion for considering the Commons' amendments on this Bill, Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY said this Bill had as yet received no discussion, for the noble earl (the Earl of Carnarvon) never answered the objections which he made to its principle, and when it passed through Committee he was too much disconcerted by the discussion which preceded that of this Bill to make effectual opposition to the vague and dubious expression of "civilised Powers," which had now disappeared from the Billl. But, so far as the country was concerned, this Bill, in all its stages, had passed through a Secret Committee, for neither the country nor their lordships knew anything of what occurred with regard to it in the other House beyond the fact recorded in the minutes that the Solicitor-General of the late Government put down a notice for the rejection of the Bill. How had these amendments come to pass? Three hypotheses were possible; either they were carried by a majority, which was improbable with the large majority the Government possessed, or the Secretary of State's colleagues and Under-Secretary threw over the "civilised Powers" as untenable and indefensible; or, more probably, the noble earl, after calm reflection, notwithstanding that he had appeared in Committee to be so enamoured of the term "civilised Powers," withdrew it himself. He must remind their lordships that there was no similarity between the state of things attempted to be set up by this Bill and the extra-territorial jurisdiction which existed in Turkey and China and other countries. There an immunity from local jurisdiction existed in favour of foreigners, because it had been freely granted by the Ottoman Emperors in the plenitude of their power, and in China and other countries it had been conceded after negotiation. Here, on the contrary, no immunity was sought for on behalf of our own subjects, but it was sought by an Act of Parliament to assume jurisdiction over foreigners for acts done by them in a foreign country, and this without the consent, or even the knowledge, of their own Sovereigns. There was an additional reason why their lordships should not pass a Bill which legislated for another country, without its knowledge or consent, and that was the bad precedent which they would be setting, and which at this moment might be imitated. He asked their lordships not to proceed any further with this Bill, because, in the words of a petition which he had presented against it, "it proposed to do what is inherently and in the nature of things impossible, since by the law of nature and of nations no Sovereign could have any legal authority out of his own territories. To pretend, therefore, to confer such authority is an usurpation and an act of violence, the more dangerous as it is clothed with an appearance of legality by being put into the shape of an Act of the Legislature." Having argued at some length that this Bill was an infraction of the Law of Nations, he then said that, leaving the Law of Nations, he desired to ask their attention to other considerations. The public here, and also in the Straits, had got the idea that this Bill was part of, and connected with, the engagements recently made in Perak and Salangore. Though this was not the case, it would be impossible to persuade them otherwise; and it would be still more difficult to convince the public and the Sovereigns of Burmah, Siam, and China that this was not the case; and when all the other objections to this Bill were taken into consideration, it could hardly be thought worth while to pass it at the risk of creating alarm and disquietude, and interposing fresh obstacles to the advance of trade in all those countries. The principle of the Bill had received no discussion. The Bill was not a Government Bill. The noble earl (Carnarvon) told the House on a former occasion that it had been drawn up by the Straits Attorney-General. Half the Bill, or half the offenders intended to be brought under its effects, had been lost by the Commons' amendments limiting it to natives of the Malay Peninsula, and excluding the Chinese. The noble lord concluded by moving that the Commons' amendments be considered this day three months.

The Earl of CARNARVON said that all the amendments of the Commons did was to define more accurately the class of subjects to be brought within the Bill. Their Lordships then divided on the question that the amendments of the Commons be now considered:—

The Commons' amendments were then agreed to.

THE Commercial Steamship Company have received a telegram announcing the total loss of the fine steamer Wyberton, through collision with the Spanish steamer Buena Ventura. The disaster occurred about twenty-five miles south of Suez; the crew, fortunately, being saved. The Buena Ventura forms one of Messrs. Olano, Larrinaga, and Co.'s line of steamers between Liverpool and Manila, and sailed from the former port on the 17th ultimo.

Monetary and Commercial.

Reports have been current as to the failure of further firms in China, both English and German, but nothing authentic has been received in the late telegrams, and there appears to be no foundation for the rumours.

Messrs. Schroder and Co. announce that the half-yearly interest, due 1st proximo, on the Imperial Government of Japan Customs Loan for £100,000 will, together with the bonds drawn on the 7th May last, be paid on and after that date.

The prospectus has been issued of the Minho District Railway Company (Limited), which has been formed with a capital of £260,000, in 26,000 £10 shares, for the purpose of constructing a railway, twenty miles in length, from St. Martinho to Guimaraes, in the province of Minho, Portugal. The line is under special concession from the King of Portugal, and will join the Douro-Minho Railways at St. Martinho, now being constructed by the Government. The junction will also connect the company's line with the Lisbon and Oporto Railway.

The directors of the General Credit and Discount Company announce the usual interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The deposits held on the 30th June by the company amounted to £5,439,728, and the acceptances for customers against securities to £598,162.

The directors of the Standard Discount Company announce a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, a balance of £5,637 being carried forward to the next account.

The stoppage is announced of Messrs. Grant, Brodie, and Co., commission merchants, of East India-avenue, a firm established, in 1860, but the amount of their liabilities has not yet transpired. The books have been placed in the hands of Messrs. Turquand, Youngs and Co., the accountants. The failures of Messrs. Hopper, Radcliffe, and Co., of Sunderland, with liabilities estimated at upwards of £120,000, and of Messrs. J. and E. Robinson, paraffin oil manufacturers, Canal Bank, Port Dundas, with liabilities amounting to £30,000, are also reported.

The steamer Canton, with new season's Teas, which has been wrecked while on her voyage from Foochow for London, registered 1,741 tons, with engines of 200-horse power, and was built at Sunderland in 1871. The total amount of the loss has not yet been ascertained, but it is doubtless very heavy. Most of the insurances, it is believed, have been effected with the various companies, the desire to take risks at Lloyd's upon steamers trading through the Suez Canal having considerably dimniished of late.

The Black Sea telegraph cable between Constantinople and Odessa has been opened at a charge of f.12 for twenty words.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Hydaspes, which left Southampton July 16, was, in gold, to Galle, £1,740; in silver, to Shanghai, £54,306; to Hong Kong, £63,854; to Singapore, £35,290. Total in gold, £1,740; in silver, £153,450.

EXPORT OF COTTON GOODS TO THE FAR EAST.

TEA.

The new black leafs, per Glenartney, from Hankow, were partially offered on the 16th inst., and as the trade were bare of stock, there was a good demand for all grades, which was met by importers—the Agamemnon being reported off the coast. Opening sale, a useful to medium Oonam in half-chests at 1s. 9d., followed by a very preferable tarry Pekoe-flavoured Tea in chests at 1s. 10d.; subsequent sales ranged up to 2s. 4½d. for 510 half-chests, a rich and full malty burnt tea, buyer securing the counterpart of 600 half-chests "to arrive" at the same money. Later in the day business was done so low as 1s. 6½d., and several parcels desirable to fine quality from 1s. 10d. to 2s. 1½d. per lb., closing sales showing a decline. The day's business estimated at 7,000 to 8,000 packages. On the 17th several parcels extra fine Ningchow were on offer from 2s. 10d. to 3s. per lb., but it is a question whether such prices being paid for Home use, and failing business here, teas will be forwarded to the Continent. A quieter feeling was apparent later in the day; a catalogue of 818 half-chests and 753 boxes Congou, ex Glenartney, offered without reserve, realised 1s. 9d. to 1s. 9½d., and 1s. 11d. to 1s. 11½d. per lb. respectively, being full rates. The selling broker announced a similar sale per Agamemnon for to-day (Monday).

Messrs. James Goddard and Co.'s Circular says:—The market has shown no change for the week; little or no business has been doing privately. Canton made Congous have been dealt in without any improvement in value. Scented Teas, especially Capers, are heavy of sale, and still forced at auction. Green and Indian Teas are without any feature to report. Public sales were held on 13th and 14th inst., when 17,457 packages were offered, 15,143 without reserve. Newmake Congous obtained 1s. 1d. to 1s. 1½d.; Scented Caper again went easier, from 11¾d. to 1s. 5½d. Two breaks of fine Souchong, counterpart sold at 2s. 4d., realised 1s. 8½d. to 1s. 9d. Foochow siftings old import obtained 4¾d. to 5¾d. Deliveries from London, from 1st to 13th inst. inclusive, or eleven days, 5,400,000 lbs., against eleven days, 1873, 5,624,454 lbs. Imports, deliveries, and stocks in London, from Jan. 1 to June 30:—

Imports.		Deliveries.		Stocks.
56,107,602	44,551,359	81,478,011	80,275,576	64,128,722	53,573,346

The Board of Trade Returns for June show an increase in the imports of Tea of 778,235 lbs., as compared with the same month in 1873, while, on the other hand, for the six months ended 30th ultimo, there is a decrease of nearly 11,000,000 lbs. The deliveries for home consumption for the month have augumented to nearly 1,500,000 lbs., as also for the six months of 1,309,533 lbs. over that of the corresponding periods of last year. In the exports for the month there is an excess of 151,245 lbs., but a falling off of 2,748,173 lbs. for the six months. The bonded stock in the United Kingdom on the 30th ultimo was 60,480,711 lbs., as compared with 71,591,964 lbs.; and 80,063,748 lbs. on the same date of the years 1873 and 1872 respectively.

COFFEE.—There has been no alteration of any importance in the market for Ceylon, the parcels offered in public sale during the week—which have been moderate in quantity—having gone off at little or no variation from the rates quoted for last mail. The closing prices are—Plantation Ceylon, triage and ordinary, 87s. to 101s.; small to middling, 107s. to 118s.; good middling to bold, 118s. 6d. to 124s.; peaberry, 125s. to 128s.; native Ceylon, small, 83s. 6d.; bold, 99s.; peaberry, 102s. 6d.

CUTCH.—Small sales of fine Pegu have been effected at 23s. per cwt.

GAMBIER is steady without much business doing; prices show no alteration.

HEMP.—A fair business has been done in Manila during the week at £36 to £39 per ton.

ISINGLASS.—350 packages Penang have been sold at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 8d. per lb.

PEPPER.—Black: The public sales have evidenced a quiet tone, and the supplies brought forward have been chiefly bought in, but what sold brought private contract rates—viz., Penang, 6½d. to 6¾d., Singapore, 6¾d. White: Singapore has sold steadily at 8⅝d. to 8¾d. for good, and 8½d. to 8⅝d. per lb. for fair quality.

RICE.—The market exhibits a quiet tone. There is less demand for floating cargoes of soft grain, and prices are barely supported.

SPICES.—Mace: A moderate demand has prevailed, and small supplies have been partly sold, including 14 cases Penang at 3s. 3d. to 3s. 4d. for fair rather mixed pale. Nutmegs have not gone off so readily as last week, but prices are without alteration. Of 44 packages Penang offered 11 sold, brown 78's to 79's at 3s. 6d. to 3s. 7d., 82's at 3s. 4d., 88's at 3s. 1d., 180's at 1s. 4d.; 30 cases Java were bought in, 83's at 3s. 5d., 109's at 3s. 3d.

SUGAR.—The market has been quiet but steady during the week. Business has been exclusively in West Indian descriptions, and there are consequently no sales of East India to report.

SILK.—The market is very quiet, and without any new feature Deliveries are good, being from 1st to 18th inst.:—1,773 China; 352 Canton; 479 Japan; 241 Bengal; total, 2,845 bales.

STICLAC.—An offer of 370 boxes Siam was partly sold at £5 5s. to £5 7s. 6d. per cwt.

SAGO has brought steady prices, but has met only a moderate demand. Of 1,612 bags offered a small part sold at 17s. for good small; the remainder being bought in at 18s. for medium.

TAPIOCA.—Steady rates have been obtained at the sales; 688 bags flake sold, good small Singapore at 2½d. to 2⅝d., Penang, old import at 1⅝d. to 1¾d.; 117 bags Flour were with drawn. Pearl Tapioca has sold moderately, about half of 770 bags catalogued finding buyers, bullets at 21s.; fine large, 22s. 6d. to 23s.; medium, 21s. 6d. per cwt.

TIN.—Business has been very dull, and quotations show a decline of £2 to £4 per ton. The current rates are:—Straits on the spot £97, afloat £96, Banca £100, Billiton £97 per ton.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

AND OINTMENT.—PREMATURE DECAY.—When from free living, excessive indulgence, or the enervating effects of hot climates, the nervous system becomes shaken, the muscles flabby, the heart's action irregular, and the bodily powers generally debilitated, Holloway's remedies may be used, with the certainty of their producing relief. For dyspepsia, liver complaint, sick headache, and loss of appetite, this Ointment should be very well rubbed twice a day over the pit of the stomach and right side, whilst Holloway's Pills are being taken in such doses as can conveniently be borne. This treatment will always restore strength and energy. Nervousness, flushings, and fainting fits may all be prevented by a timely recourse to, and diligent use of, these remedies.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Our advices from the Japan Ports by the present mail are of no later date than those received by Pacific mail on the 20th inst., and published in our last issue.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 7th June; the French mail from London April 24 arrived out on the 6th June. The following summary of news are from the North China Herald:—

About 200 bales of silk having arrived, the market was opened to-day by the purchase of 50 bales market Tsatlee (about No. 5), for which the price reported is Tls. 255, about Tls. 115 below last year's opening rate, but 1s. above present London quotations. The first arrivals, as usual, are coarse and mixed in size and not well cleaned, but they are no guide to a judgment on the general quality of the crop.

Seven yachts, the "perfect number," presumably, for a fleet as well as for many other things, joined in the closing cruise of the S.Y.C. They were the Nimrod, Phantom, Charm, Lillie, Fearless, Fairy, and Dolly Varden. It was intended to rendezvous at the Tien-shan-hu, or Si-Tai-hu, as it is more generally called, but the wind was unfavourable, and the yachts had to restrict their movements to the river. Making the best of contrary winds, a sharp thunderstorm on Saturday night—in which the river was brilliantly lighted up by electricity for many seconds at a time—and of the tidal current, the yacht fleet and their houseboat friends worked up to near the Mao Pagoda by Sunday forenoon. Then, after a short stay, passed idly but not unpleasantly, they beat down river again, reaching Shanghai on Monday, at from 2 to 6 A.M.

A fatal accident happened in the powder manufactory at Loonghwa on Saturday. An explosion occurred, by which one man was killed and another so seriously injured that he has since died. We have not much confidence in Chinese manipulation of such dangerous material, and should not be at all surprised to hear some day that the Pagoda had been blown down.

A few months since we commented on a case in the Mixed Court, of Mr. J. H. Mackie against his compradore, Wang Shang-yuen. After a patient hearing of the case before Dr. Yates and Chen, it has been found that the account presented by Mr. Mackie was correct. Wang Shang-yuen had shares in the Ping On, but even if these were valuable, there would be a large balance unaccounted for, and which the compradore is unable to pay. At his own request Wang was allowed to go to Ningpo to sell his houses and lands, in order to meet the claims of his creditors; but it seems that the land had been mortgaged and could not be sold for more than the amount of the mortgage. In addition to the claims of Mr. Mackie, the compradore owes the Hoo-quong Bank over Tls. 10,000. Failing any assets, it remained for the Court to punish the delinquent debtor, and after reference to the Taoutai, Wang Shang-yuen is sentenced to two years' imprisonment at the Mixed Court, the term to begin on the 27th May, 1874. The Magistrate adds that, at the expiration of the sentence, Wang will be released both from prison and from his creditors.

Two important cases were heard on appeal from the Mixed Court, by H.B.M. Consul and the Taoutai; H.M. Vice-Consul, Mr. Stronach, and the magistrate of the Mixed Court, being also on the bench. The Court sat in the Supreme Court room, which was crowded by Chinese, even to the jury box and the passages alongside the doors. The first case was an action by Messrs. Carter and Co. against a silk broker named Chang-kee, to recover the amount of loss on a quantity of silk shipped home in May, 1872; Chang-kee having been guarantor for a man named Yuen-kee. The transaction was rather complicated. In the spring of 1872, Carter and Co. lent Yuen-kee, under Chang-kee's guarantee, Tls. 6,575, to be repaid in two months, either in money, or half in money and half in silk. It was repaid under the latter condition, and the silk shipped to England on Yuen-kee's account. The shipment resulted in loss, and Carter and Co. claimed to recover from the broker and guarantor, Chang-kee; pleading that they had known Yuen-kee's worthlessness from the beginning, and had relied on Chang-kee throughout the transaction, under the terms of the guarantee letter produced. But the latter contended that his responsibility ceased with the repayment of the loan, and did not extend to the shipment. The case was decided in Carter and Co.'s favour at the Mixed Court, and Chang-kee appealed.

The second case was purely one of shipment. Carter and Co. shipped a quantity of silk to England to Messrs. Broughall and Co., on behalf of one Dee-say. The silk lost Tls. 4,313, which Carter and Co. sought to recover from Dee-say. Judgment was given against the latter in the Mixed Court, but without specifying the amount, and the case was referred to the higher Court for decision. Dee-say contended that he had ordered the silk should be sold at once, and that it was through neglect of these instructions that the heavy loss resulted. Carter and Co. contended —first, denial of neglect; Dee-say had ordered the silk to be sold on arrival at market rate, and it had been impossible to sell at market rate; there was no market; a man would value silk at twenty shillings, but decline to give eighteen; silk had been simply unsaleable. Secondly—that if there had been neglect it was not theirs, but Messrs. Broughall's, and Dee-say's claim lay against the latter. The Court reserved judgment in both cases.

The Shunpao says, Ying Fantai has come down from Soochow to interview the Japanese Ambassador about the Formosa affair, and he and the Taoutai had an interview with his Excellency on the 31st ult. The Ambassador is reported to have said that the despatch of the army to Formosa is only with the view of their remaining a short time to overawe the aborigines, and it does not at all follow that there will be any fighting. But this has been the cue of the Japanese all along, to represent the expedition as a trifle.

The Viceroy of Fuhkien has written to the Japanese Consul at Shanghai, affirming the right of China to the whole island of Formosa, without distinction of inhabitants—whether civilised or savage. Any acts of violence against passengers along the coast can be settled by reference to the Chinese Government; only last year a Japanese shipwrecked crew was kindly treated by the aborigines, and handed over to Chinese officials, by whom they were sent up and returned to their own country. What right, then, has Japan to send an army to invade the place? The Consul is requested therefore to ask his Government to withdraw the troops.

A Peking correspondent calls attention to the efforts that are being made to fortify the Peiho. A large fort is now being constructed at Hsin-chêng, about fifteen miles above Taku. Considerable interest is felt in the Japanese proceedings in Formosa.

A Newchwang correspondent writes:—This province is quiet for the moment, but large bodies of banditti are reported to be on the northern frontier in—one may say—summer quarters. Our Tauotai is ordered to Peking, to be consulted with in person on the state of his district. He is a vigorous old man, and foreign officials will regret his departure. The Chinese gunvessel on the station has departed suddenly, for no one knows where, on receipt of unexpected orders. There has been much rain of late, and the crops are likely, after all, to be poor.

A Ningpo correspondent writes:—At our landrenters' meeting on the 27th, to elect a member of Committee in place of Mr. Beebe, Mr. Wadman presented a report showing that, when the Customs paid up their contribution, the funds would be about sufficient for the contemplated works. These are progressing satisfactorily, about half the main street being near completion. A vote of thanks to the Committee was passed for what they had done, and Mr. Dumaresq was elected a member. It was then determined to organise and maintain a corps of scavengers by a poll-tax of $0.50 per mensem; so you see the Municipality is advancing. In conclusion, the section of the bund constructed by the Taoutai, Mr. Beebe and Mr. Alabaster, was presented to the community, and with a vote of thanks to the Chairman, Dr. Lord, we went from labour to refreshment.

The departure of Mr. and Mrs. Hannen from Yokohama leaves a blank far more than usually felt. For three years Mr. Hannen has occupied the post of Acting Assistant Judge of H.M.'s Supreme Court in a manner which has been most creditable to himself and beneficial to the community, and none who have observed his painstaking impartiality, and the justice of his decisions, can fail to hope that a proper recognition of the qualities he has displayed as a judge may be shown at home. But not only as a judge has Mr. Hannen deserved all the commendation that can be awarded; in private life he has made himself equally popular. His house was ever open. The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Hannen was without stint; and no persons who ever came to this place will be more missed by so many young men, to whom home influences such as were there found are invaluable. On their departure they were rowed off to the stermer by six gentlemen of the Amateur Rowing Club, and many ladies and gentlemen went to see them off and take a last farewell.

An extraordinary general meeting of shareholders in the Union Steam Navigation Company was held on June 1st, at the offices of the agents, Messrs. Olyphant and Co. Present:—Messrs. R. Francis (chairman), J. G. Purdon, Talbot Olyphant, J. F. Seaman, E. Seligmann, R. E. Wainewright, J. Macgregor, E. McLoughlin, T. R. Wheelock, H. P. Hanssen, A. J. Vickers, F. A. Groom, W. Chrystall, J. O. Fuller, Poyuen King, Minghing, Sung-kee, &c., representing 1,310 shares. The Chairman proposed that the resolution passed at the meeting held on the 31st of March last, at which it was resolved to wind up the Company, be confirmed. This was seconded by Mr. Whelock, and passed unanimously.

In the Supreme Court, before Sir E. Hornby, the case of the Stewards of the Shanghai Race Club v. the Shanghai Cricket Club was heard. The action was brought to obtain a perpetual injunction on behalf of the Race Club against the Cricket Club, to restrain them from completing the roof they were putting on their pavilion. The case occupied a considerable time, the report of the proceedings occupying about fourteen columns of the North China Herald, and it was afterwards adjourned until the following week.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 13th June; no later mail from London had arrived out.

The Daily Press has the following on the late riot at Shanghai:—

A very important question underlies the difficulty which has arisen on the French concession at Shanghai. The Consul claims complete jurisdiction over all the residents, and, as a natural corollary, he ought to be solely responsible for the maintenance of order. The question of cession or concession has long been agitated in Shanghai; and while the English and Americans have recognised the full territorial rights of the Chinese, and their full authority to govern and tax their own subjects as they think fit, the French have maintained that the right of governing in the French concession was ceded solely to the French Consul. In consequence of this there has been a split in the local jurisdiction in the foreign settlements in Shanghai. On the one hand, the English and Americans have joined their settlements under a common jurisdiction, and have recognised the right of residence on the part of other foreigners to be the same as their own, while the French have maintained their exclusive right to their concession, and hold that any others than French can live within its precincts only with the express permission of the French Consul. In consequence of this, there are in Shanghai two distinct municipalities, the one known as the Anglo-American Settlement—being the junction of the two settlements formerly known by these respective names—and the French Concession, separated from them by a small creek some twenty yards in width. It is upon the latter that the recent disturbance arose; and consequently the status of the so-called concession may have much to do with the ultimate settlement of the matter, and with its bearing upon the security of foreigners resident in it in the future.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies in London is just the proper person to take steps for preventing junks being wrongfully overhauled or fired at by Chinese cruisers at Hong Kong. This at least seems to be the view of the local Government, as we learn that they have expressed an intention of withholding the report of the recent commission on this subject, so as to enable the document to be forwarded home, and the views of the Colonial-Secretary to be obtained. This is somewhat surprising, as we are informed that in reply to an application made recently, it was stated that the report would in all probability be published shortly. It will certainly be of very little value in enabling the Secretary of State to come to a sound conclusion on the subject, if it be unaccompanied by the views of the Chamber of Commerce, and of others in the colony interested in the matter; and the delay which will be caused will render any practical measures a matter of difficulty.

We hear that H.E. the Governor, accompanied by the Surveyor-General, some other local officials, and two or three members of Council, went round the island, and visited the lighthouses in course of erection at Green Island and Cape d'Aguilar. Both these structures are now some seven or eight feet above ground. They are being built of massive granite, and give promise of being fine and durable structures. The one on Green Island will be twenty feet high, and that on Cape D'Aguilar the twenty-five feet. It is stated that after tiffin some speeches were made, and that a member of Council expressed his opinion that the trade of Hong Kong had never been in a more satisfactory state than at the present day. We make no doubt that a good many people on shore will be as delighted as surprised to hear of this fact.

Mr. R. Walker has been cited to appear before the Hon. Chief Justice, in the Supreme Court, to show cause why he did not attend as a special juror when summoned in the case of Fabregas v. Wong-lai-chan and another. Mr. Creagh (the sheriff) stated that it was entirely his fault. He had addressed the summons to "Mr. R. Walker, at Messrs. R. S. Walker and Co.'s." Mr. R. S. Walker, who lived in the same street as Mr. R. Walker, had, therefore, attended. His lordship said Mr. Creagh ought to have known better than address the summons in that way, but the thing had evidently been a mistake. Mr. R. Walker was not at all to blame in the matter, and the explanation given would be sufficient.

We have learned that the missionaries in Hangchow, who had built on the City Hill, and thus disturbed the Fing-shui of the place, have moved from the Hill into their new premises in the other end of the City, as arranged for between the United States Consul at Ningpo and the native authorities; the latter providing the new grounds and bearing the cost of erecting the requisite buildings on them, thus fulfilling to the letter the agreement into which they entered on the subject some months ago. The dwelling houses, schools, chapels, houses for the natives, &c., all in the same enclosure, are said to present quite an imposing and home-like appearance, surrounded as they are on all sides by Chinese structures. The dwelling-house on the Hill is to remain, to be used by the Chinese as a kind of theatre, or club-house; but they commenced to pull down the boys' school-building just as soon as they possibly could after it was vacated.

PHILIPPINES.

MANILA.

The Manila journals give the following items of news:—There have been planted in a village of the province of Pampanga fifty specimens of the Eucalyptus globulus, the celebrated tree which is enjoying such favour in Europe, and is as remarkable for its height, foliage, and quick growth as for its health-giving properties. We congratulate Mr. Petel for having imported into the archipelago these fifty Eucalypti, and we heartily wish to see the environs of Manila full of these trees, one of the peculiarities of which is to check the growth of the fevers usually felt in this city at this time of year.

A new kind of raw material has just been utilised for paper making. The material referred to is the megass, that is, what remains of the sugar-cane after it has been crushed completely to extract the juice. Until now the said megass has served merely for fuel and manure, but, from experiments made, it has come out that pulp made from the aforesaid megass might be produced with great cheapness, at less than a third part of the cost of the manufacture of the pulps now obtainable. It appears also that the process for converting the megass into pulp is a very simple one, owing to which there is no doubt that those who wish to increase to an enormous amount the usefulness and the benefits of the sugar-cane will adopt it. In the Philippines the value of the produce will be raised by many thousands of dollars yearly.

On Friday, the 15th, some piratical Moorish vessels were sighted rom the island of Batang, district of Bacon. The brave inhabitants of that place hastened immediately to receive the ferocious Sooloos, should they endeavour to land; these inhabitants repaired to the sea shore from a distance, on which patrols were stationed by order of the authorities, after 6 P. M. Fortunately, fresh alarms have not as yet been raised.

The nominal statement of the subscriptions obtained until this date, with the object of affording relief to the unfortunate sufferers of those provinces, particularly of Lagana and Tayebas, who, in consequence of the hurricane and inundations of the 25th October last, have been reduced in condition and to misery, is $9,656.55.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 22nd June; the P. and O. mail from London May 15 was received on the 14th June. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

The Government Gazette contains a circular from the Colonial-office, notifying that, in accordance with an arrangement existing between the Colonial and India-offices, Chartered Joint-Stock Companies will not be empowered to establish agencies and branches in India until they shall first have conformed to the existing laws of that country. The Gazette also publishes the text of an extradition treaty concluded between Great Britain and Austria, which came into effect on the 30th of March last; also the convention of 24th January last, between Great Britain and France, supplementary to the treaty of commerce and navigation of 23rd July, 1873.

We have before had occasion to direct the attention of our commercial public to the growing importance of the trade between Australia and these Settlements, and the advisability of fostering and increasing that trade by every legitimate means. In our columns of yesterday we informed our readers that news had been received by telegram from Port Darwin, the northern Settlement of South Australia, that an assay of ten tons of quartz crushed there had resulted in a yield of 771 ounces of gold, or 77 ounces to the ton! We have no reason to doubt the correctness and authenticity of this despatch. The yield here indicated is very great, showing a money return of more than £250 per ton. The importance of this can best be realised by taking into account that Victorian Companies find it a payable matter to work reefs whose quartz when crushed yields only five pennyweights, or gold to the value of about twenty shillings per ton. The geographical position of Port Darwin, as well as that of the other Settlements in the north of Australia, is very favourable to its future trade with Singapore. The merchants there, provided they meet with encouragement, will find it greatly to their advantage to make this their entrepot, instead of having to adopt the long and circuitous route via Adelaide for the shipments and the transaction of their business. Again, a great deal of the trade consequent upon the extension of the lucrative pearl and pearl-shell fisheries at and near Port Walcott on the north-west coast of Australia is now done at Singapore, whither, with proper management, much more will eventually come. It is well worth the while of our mercantile community to direct a portion of their attention and enterprise towards fields of future profit which promise so well as do those of the Northern Settlements of Australia.

PENANG.

Mr. T. F. Ford (who is acting as temporary judge of Penang at present) opened his court recently, and as none of the members of the Bar were present he immediately adjourned till the following week. It is to be hoped that neither the Bench nor the Bar will for the future be wanting in punctuality—hitherto the latter has proved far more punctual than the former.

His Excellency has promised to hand over $10,000 out of the Beach-street fund to a committee, to be elected by the Chinese inhabitants of Penang, in order to build them a town hall.

His Excellency the Governor has been visiting the province, accompanied by the Lieutenant-Governor, Colonel Anson, the Surveyor-General, Mr. McNair, the Inspector-General of Police, Captain Dunlop. Sir Andrew left the jetty at 9.30, in the police launch Mata Mata, and proceeded to Batu Kawan estate. From thence his Excellency journeyed to Nebong Tebal, inspecting the police stations at Bukit Tamboon and Sunghy Bakup on the way. After receiving some deputations at Nebong Tebal, his Excellency remained at Caledonia Estate to sleep. Very early in the morning the estates of Caledonia, Victoria, and Kreean were visited by his Excellency. The works, the coolie lines, and the hospitals were all most carefully inspected. After breakfasting at Caledonia the Governor returned to Penang, calling at Golden Grove and Pry Sugar Estate during the journey. We believe his Excellency settled the site of the new hospital at Sunghy Bakup during his visit.

A meeting of the Executive Council has been held in Penang, and we hear that it was resolved at it that the provisions of the Peace Preservation Ordinance are to be put in force stringently throughout the island. The grounds for taking such extreme measures are not apparent to the public generally, and we can only surmise that the authorities, feeling that the police force is totally inadequate to the work of keeping order, owing to its smallness, have resolved to enforce the Act in order to assist or relieve it. We await some explanation as to the actual cause of this movement before commenting upon it.

The late Rajah of Rendong, Kaw Soo Cheang, who has abdicated in favour of his son, Kaw Sim Kong, is at present in Penang, and purposes proceeding to China in his yacht a few days hence. We learn that this distinguished chief retires from public life for good.

Mr. Swettenham left Penang in the s.s. Queddah for Laroot and Perak, on a diplomatic mission.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

CHEFOO.—Messrs. Wilson, Cornabe, and Co. report as follows:—During the past month we have had a fair enquiry for Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths, but for Drills and Fancy Cottons there has been scarcely any demand. Woollens have been neglected. Metals: Iron continues in fair enquiry, but Lead is now in heavy stock, and is very dull of sale.

SHANGHAI.—The business of the week had been comparatively small, and demand had been confined chiefly to heavy Shirtings, heavy T-Cloths, and Black Velvets, all which had risen considerably in value.

Digitized by Google

The two first-named articles had been wanted by consumers, but the improvement in Velvets was attributable to speculation in expectation of large orders from Hankow. As usual, at this season, money was dear amongst the natives.

FOOCHOW.—The following sales were reported, viz.: 1,000 pieces 6 lbs. T-Cloths, at $1.85 per piece; 500 pieces 7 lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.15 per piece; 150 pieces 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $2.53 per piece; 1,000 pigs Lead, at $8 to 8¼ per picul.

MANILA.—The market for Plain Staples had undergone little change since last advices, and although a considerable amount of business had been transacted, prices in most cases remained the same. Coloured goods continued quiet.

SAIGON.—With the exception of 7 lb. Shirtings, which had been a little more sought after, and therefore commanded somewhat better prices, the market had not exhibited any noteworthy change. Quotations: Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., $2.45 per piece; ditto, 7 lbs., $2.10 per piece. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.60 per piece; ditto, 5 lbs., $1.25 to 1.27; ditto, 4lbs., $1.12. White Irishes, $1.60.

BATAVIA.—Messrs. Houghton and Co.'s Circular says:—During the past month we regret we cannot report a very satisfactory business having been done. At the beginning of it only new and suitable styles of Prints could be placed to advantage, but since then considerable arrivals of such goods having taken place the tone of the market is weaker, and dealers are not willing to operate now unless slight concessions are made them. This dulness will not, however, we expect, last, but, at the same time, considering the season of the year, it affects our future somewhat unfavourably. So small a business having been done we have naturally little change to report in prices.

TEA.

HANKOW.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer, and Co.'s Report, dated 2nd June, says:—Since our last, dated 26th ult., a large business has been done in Tea, settlements for the week amounting to 33,588 chests, 105,204 half-chests, and 5,998 boxes. Total settlements to date are:—1874: 41,671 chests, 191,107 half-chests, 14,960 boxes; 1873: 102,382 chests, 168,401 half-chests, 10,466 boxes. Particulars of the week's settlements are as follows, at ex. 6s. 3½d., and frt. £5 10s., adding Tls. 3 for duty:—

Chests.	Half-chests.	Boxes.	Per lb.
—	3,695	—	at 3s. 0½d. to 3s. 3½d.
—	4,702	—	at 2s. 9½d. to 3s. 0½d.
—	8,463	610	at 2s. 6d. to 2s. 9d.
3,767	22,755	902	at 2s. 3d. to 2s. 5⅝d.
11,046	29,432	2,371	at 1s. 11⅜d. to 2s. 2⅜d.
10,305	25,154	694	at 1s. 8½d. to 1s. 11½d.
8,288	9,620	1,421	at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8½d.

At the date of our last we reported only a moderate business, in consequence of high prices, and comparatively small supplies. At the beginning of the week, however, arrivals began to come forward much more freely, notwithstanding which prices were well maintained, and in some cases showed an advance. The market for Oonfar teas was opened on the 27th ult., at the extreme price of 37 Taels, and since that time a large but irregular business has been done in these kinds. Ningchow teas only have steadily declined, and though occasional chops are still taken at extreme rates, many have been settled eight to ten taels under prices current at the opening. Lye-ling teas have been bought at Tls. 24.50 to 25.50 against Tls. 22.50 to 23.50 last year. At the time of writing the market is weak for all classes, and we look for a heavy decline. The Agamemnon left on the 28th May, the Glenartney on the 29th May, the Hong Kong and Glenfalloch on the 31st May. Vessels in port are the Cawdor Castle s.s. (engaged full), the Gordon Castle s.s., and sailing vessels Ada and Cutty Sark. The Nankin s.s. is expected during the week. Freights, by steamer, £5 to £5 10s.; sailing vessel, £4 12s. 6d. to £5 per ton.

SHANGHAI.—During the week there had been a steady business in tea at Hankow. It was said that prices had largely fallen, and this no doubt was true as respects the Ningchows. Of the Oonfaas the accounts were not very favourable; though strong teas, they appeared to lack quality and were rather dusty, and it was said that they were mixed with Shontam leaf. Up to date settlements up the river amounted to 150,000 chests, but as there were almost daily departures from Woosung, and also arrivals of tea from day to day by the river steamers, of which the destination was not at once settled, it was hardly possible to fix very precisely what had been done so far. About 4,000 packages of tea had arrived, but so far only two musters had been placed on offer, and it was probable that the bulk of these arrivals consisted of tea for transhipment.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Westall, Galton, and Co.'s report says:—In this market no purchases of country teas have as yet been made; Pehlings however have been in good demand, and prices have advanced considerably, many of the later purchases of good parcels costing Tls. 2 over last season. The quality of the crop on the whole must be considered inferior to last year. The low country teas, such as Yung How, Saryune, Suey Kut, Kien Tong, &c., seem poorly made. The Siew Miews are also not so good in make, but the liquors are fair. No Souchongs have yet arrived. The few Oolongs shown are of good colour and make, but are wanting in strength. Flowery Pekoes and Scented Teas: The musters at present on the market are too few for any definite opinion to be formed. Pehlings costing from Tls. 23 to Tls. 31½, freight £4 10s., Exchange 4s. 5½d., lay down in London at 1s. 7d. to 2s. 0¼d. In port awaiting new teas for London:—The steamers Glenearn, Braemar Castle, Crocus, Montgomeryshire, Cheops, Sirius, and Glaucus; the steamer Canton, and the sailing vessel Thermopylæ are expected. For the Colonies:—The Torres Strait mail steamer Legislator, and sailing vessels Mary Blair, Korsor, Fyen, J. H. Jessen, and Peri. Expected: Steamer Amoy, and sailing vessel Maugerton, and two or three others. Freights.—To London: Glenearn, £4 10s.; Braemar Castle, £5 per ton of 40 cubic feet. Both engaged full.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

We have no further sailings of new season's tea ships to report. The Hong Kong (str.), from Hankow, with 2,130,000 lbs., arrived on the 23rd inst. The Braemar Castle, from Foochow, and the Gordon Castle, from Hankow, have passed through the Suez Canal.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE SAIGON CONSULATE.

(July 24th.) Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government intended to fill up the post of British Consul at Saigon, which was now vacant.

The Earl of DERBY said there was no information at the Foreign-office of the existence or even the probability of the vacancy assumed in the question of his noble friend. The Consul was absent on leave obtained in the early part of this year. In his absence the Consul left as his deputy a gentleman who was partner in a firm at Saigon. He was not aware whether that gentleman was a British subject, but he believed he was very well fitted to discharge the duties in the temporary absence of the Consul. He did not think there was any reason for avoiding a new appointment in the case of a vacancy.

HOUSE OT COMMONS.

THE CONSULAR SERVICE.

(July 21st.) Mr. B. COCHRANE asked the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether, by a new regulation, Consuls serving in South America, China, or any trying climate, were permitted to count for every year of service two years towards a pension ; and, if so, why the same favour was not extended to the Diplomatic Service.

Mr. BOURKE : There is no new regulation to the effect suggested. A regulation was agreed upon between the late Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Board of Treasury by which two years' service in unhealthy climates was to count as three in calculating the pensions for the Consular Service. This is in accordance with the recommendations of the Committee of the House of Commons on the Diplomatic and Consular Services. The regulation is intended to meet the case of Consular officers stationed for considerable periods at particularly unhealthy places. It was not recommended by the Committee for the Diplomatic Service, whose members are not as a rule stationed at places to which it would apply.

THE INDIA AND CHINA MAILS.

(21st.) Mr. D. JENKINS asked the Postmaster-General whether the statement in the daily press was correct as to a proposed alteration of the contract now existing between Her Majesty's Government and the P. and O. Company for the conveyance of the mails, and if so, when the conditions of such alteration would be laid upon the table of the house.

Lord J. MANNERS (the Postmaster-General) said some alterations had been made in the contract between Her Majesty's Government and the P. and O. Company, but, so far as he knew, the statements which had appeared in the daily press with regard to the nature of those alterations were altogether incorrect. The new contract was in the printer's hands, and would shortly be distributed.

(23rd.) Mr. WILLIAM HOLMS gave notice to ask the Postmaster-General if he has arranged to allow the P. and O. Company to run their steamers with the heavy portion of the Indian mails through the Suez Canal ; and, if so, to what extent the transmission of that portion of the Indian mails will be retarded : what deduction from the subsidy of £449,000 per annum is to be made on account of the permission thus granted : and, is he aware that his two predecessors in office recommended that a considerable deduction from that amount should be made in that contingency.

(24th.) In reply to the above question Lord J. MANNERS stated that by the new contract with the P. and O. Company it was arranged that the company might run their steamers with any portion of the mails through the Suez Canal. No part of the mails would be retarded in consequence ; on the contrary, there would be an acceleration for both the heavy and the light mails to the extent of twenty-fours. A deduction of £20,000 a year had been made from the subsidy on account of this change. An additional saving would be effected in consequence of no premium being paid in future, and there would be a further saving arising from the fact that payments by the company in respect of overtime would henceforth be compulsory. Altogether, the saving under the new contract would amount to about £24,000 a year.

Naval and Military.

The command of the China Squadron has been conferred upon Vice Admiral Alfred Phillips Ryder. Captain Philip H. Colomb (1870) will probably be appointed flag-captain, and Mr. Thomas H. L. Bowling, paymaster R.N. (1866), secretary. The Admiral will proceed in the Audacious, the new flag-ship, and is now at Chatham, superintending the fitting out of the vessel.—The paddle despatch-vessel Vigilant will, it is stated, be shortly commissioned for special service as tender to the Audacious.

Colonel A. Bassano, C.B., half-pay late 32nd Foot, will succeed Brevet Major W. C. O'Shaughnessy as assistant military secretary at Hong Kong, when the latter officer's staff service shall expire next month. Colonel Bassano has seen considerable service in India.

From a return, just issued, showing the whole of the dockyard transactions during the financial year 1872-73, it appears that in the Hong Kong yard the ships repaired, refitted, &c., were the Iron Duke (flag-ship), Adventure, Avon, Banterer, Barrosa, Cadmus, Curlew, Dove, Dwarf, Elk, Flamer, Hornet, Juno, Leven, Manilla, Melville, Midge, Nassau, Opossum, Orontes, Princess Charlotte, Rinaldo, Ringdove, Salamis, Sylvia, Teazer, Thalia, Thistle, and Zebra, and a number of launches, lighters, and barges. The value of the materials issued for these repairs was £29,593, and the wages amounted to £3,195, a total of £32,788; but the value of the materials returned was £12,564, leaving a net total of £20,224. To this, however, are to be added the incidental and establishment charges, £14,908, which brought the total for repairs, &c., in the Hong Kong yard to £35,132. Several of the above-named ships received supplies from the Shanghai yard during the year. The total cost, inclusive of incidental and establishment charges, was £468.

A scene of some interest was witnessed at the Kendal parish church on the evening of the 18th inst. being, the depositing of the Chinese imperial standard captured in the year 1841 by the 55th foot (Westmoreland regiment) from the Imperial army at the battle of Tinghae, Chusan, China, during the war of that year. Major-General Daubeney, late commanding the 55th, and other officers, were present. The Kendal rifle corps, headed by the band, preceded the standard, which was borne unfurled by Sergeant-Major Higginson, late sergeant of the 55th, and serving under the major-general in the war, and afterwards in the Crimea. The colours were affixed to the wall above a large monumental tablet to the memory of a number of officers and men of the 55th, who have fallen in action.

Lieut.-Colonel J. Sanderson, retired full pay 1st Foot, joins the Royal Foundation of the Military Knights of Windsor, vice Captain Desborough, deceased. Major P. Cahill, late 56th Regiment, has been appointed to the Lower Foundation, to fill an existing vacancy. Major Cahill served with the 49th Regiment throughout the whole of the operations in China (medal), commencing with the first taking of Chusan, and terminating with the demonstration before Nanking. He also served in the Eastern campaign of 1854, was present at the battle of the Alma and siege of Sebastopol, and was severely wounded.

The Distinguished Service Reward, vacant in consequence of Major-General Armstrong's death, has been awarded to Colonel S. F. C. Annesley, 10th Regiment. Colonel Annesley served with the 87th Foot in Ceylon during the rebellion in 1848, and with the 10th in the Indian campaign of 1857-58.

The following changes in the Medical department of the Army have been made :—Surgeon-Major A. P. Cahill, M.D., from Ceylon to England; Surgeon-Major R. M'Nab, M.D., from Hong Kong to Singapore; Surgeon-Major J. B. Baker, from Hong Kong to Singapore.

The Netherlands steam sloop Bandjermassing, three guns, Lieut.-Commandant Ehorle, from Helvoet bound for Atchin, put into Falmouth on the 20th inst. for the purpose of coaling, and proceeded the same evening via Malta and the Suez Canal.

The Victor Emmanuel, which sailed for Hong Kong on the 5th inst. arrived at St. Vincent, Cape de Verde, on the 20th inst. ; all well. It is expected she will reach the Cape of Good Hope by the 1st of September.

The Teazer, Commander H. A. Digby, from the China station, arrived at Malta on the 11th inst., ninety-eight days from Hong Kong, and twelve days from Port Said. She left on the 17th inst. for Devonport.

Brevet-Major W. C. O'Shaughnessy, who has been serving on the Staff in China, is to resume duty in the 1st battalion 12th Regiment, stationed at the Curragh.

The 57th Regiment, now stationed in Ceylon, will eventually, it is stated, be moved to India. The health of the men since their arrival out has been excellent.

Commander George Parsons, who commanded the Rinaldo, recently returned from China, has been promoted to the rank of Captain.

JAPAN MISSIONS.

The Church Missionary Intelligencer contains a Nagasaki letter from the Rev. H. Burnside, in which he gives an interesting account of the progress of his mission work. Application had been made to the Governor of Nagasaki for permission to open a mission school in the native town where, in addition to English, the Bible would be taught. His Excellency refused this permission, indicating that he did not object to the school itself, but he had decided against the religious influence which would be brought to bear on those who would attend. The project had to be abandoned for the present, but Mr. Burnside has not given up the idea. The mission premises are very much too far away from the town, and Mr. Burnside has decided, if he can raise the necessary funds, to build nearer the native town. The Rev. C. F. Warren writes from Osaka, "We in Osaka are without the protection of foreign guns, and Kobe is no better off, as the Russian gunboat Sotol has left for Nagasaki. The troops at present quartered here are dressed in French uniforms, but there is a sad want of discipline amongst them. I am thankful to say that we have no ground to fear that we shall need their protection."

MR. ROBERTSON'S REPORT ON YOKOHAMA TRADE.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in noticing Mr. Russell Robertson's report on the trade of Yokohama, says :—The sudden influx of European goods and the requirements of a foreign market some twenty years ago seems to have acted as a dissolvent element in the whole social and political constitution of Japan. Nothing, indeed, is more striking throughout the report than the evidence continually afforded of the wide reach of the influences set in motion by such commercial activity as foreigners develop wherever they found a trade in the East. The change in the cost of articles and the purchasing power of the precious metals is only among the earliest results; the first move in the great game of commerce which in this case ended in checkmating kings and arousing Eastern populations from a "sleep of a thousand years," as a Japanese Minister himself expressed it. When we read that tea—now as great a necessity to the Japanese as to the Chinese—was only introduced in 1605, and tobacco about the same time, we are disposed to ask how not only the Japanese, but all Western nations, contrived to bear the ills of life without such "necessaries" as they have since become to all the millions of the present day, to whom the deprivation of the one or the other would be almost a calamity. Wine and malt and spirituous liquors could very imperfectly supply the more gentle stimulus of tea or the soothing and sustaining influence of tobacco. Perhaps the wine and spirits and beery potations may have met the coarser wants of a less artificially nurtured body. But with our later experiences of the evil effects of the stronger potations of Northern races, we may well envy nations who find in the weakest infusion of the tea-leaf and the mildest form of tobacco all the comfort of this kind that their nature or constitution requires. And this appears to be true of by far the greatest part of the population occupying Eastern Asia, numbering probably a third of the whole of the human race. We are not debtors to the Chinese or Japanese for our tobacco, and there are many still left in Europe who think it a doubtful acquisition. But this cannot be said of tea or silk, or porcelain or lacquer ware, in all of which products these two nations are to this day unrivalled by the foremost and cleverest European workmen. We may well show some patience, therefore, if we find them slow to see all the merits of free trade and competition, and learn that, like some nearer and dearer friends, they require educating up to the higher conceptions of the Western intellect.

HONOURS TO THE LORD MAYOR AND THE SHERIFFS.—The Queen has conferred a baronetcy on the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir Andrew Lusk, and the dignity of knighthood on Messrs. Johnson and Whetham, the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, in commemoration of the marriage of the Duke of Edinburgh and of the Czar's visit to the City. Sir Andrew Lusk, Bart., M.P., is a native of Barr, Ayrshire, where he was born in 1813. He is a merchant, shipowner, and provision dealer in the city of London, and is a director of the Imperial Bank and other companies. In 1865 he was returned to Parliament in the Liberal interest for the borough of Finsbury, which constituency he still represents. He is also a deputy-lieutenant and a justice of the peace for Middlesex. He became Lord Mayor of London in November last. Sir John Henry Johnson, one of the sheriffs of London and Middlesex, was born in 1827. He is the sole representative of the old established house of Messrs. John Johnson and Sons, of the Corn Exchange. Alderman Charles Whetham, alderman and sheriff, was born in 1812. He was elected alderman for Bridge Ward, in the city of London, in 1871, and is connected with many public companies in the City. By the honours just conferred titles are now borne by twelve out of the twenty-six members of the Court of Aldermen. In addition to Lord Mayor Lusk and Sheriff Whetham, there are Sir R. W. Carden, Sir W. A. Rose, Sir B. Phillips, Sir Thomas Gabriel, Sir J. C. Lawrence, Sir Thomas Dakin, Sir Sills Gibbons, Sir Sydney Waterlow, Sir Thomas White, and Sir Francis Truscott. This is the fourth year in succession in which the Lord Mayor has received a title, a knighthood having been conferred upon Alderman Dakin in 1871, and baronetcies upon his three successors, Aldermen Gibbons, Waterlow, and Lusk.

THE conversion of a young Japanese to Christianity is just reported from Frankfort-on-the-Maine, where he was sent by the Ambassador at Vienna to superintend and control the printing of paper money for his Government. Having already acquired a good knowledge of the German language, he became acquainted with Pastor K. von Gerlach, the garrison chaplain, and evinced such a strong desire to be initiated into the mysteries of the Christian religion that the clergyman good-naturedly offered to give him a regular course of instruction, which was gratefully accepted by the young Japanese—who is said to be the scion of a very wealthy and influential family in his native country—and which made such a deep impression on him that at his own special request he has now been publicly received into the bosom of the Germau Protestant Church. The ceremony of baptism was performed by the above-named clergyman on Sunday week at the parish church of Seckbach, a village about two miles distant from Frankfort, in the presence of the assembled parishioners, pastor Hartman and the missionary Strobel acting as his sponsors.

THE Board of Trade report on railway accidents during 1873 has been published. It appears that the total number of persons killed on railways during the year was 1,372, and the number of injured was 3,110. Of these, 160 persons killed, and 1,750 persons injured, were passengers; and the remainder, 1,212 killed, and 1,360 injured, were officers or servants of the railways companies, or trespassers, or others who met with accidents at level crossings, or from miscellaneous causes. Of the passengers, 40 were killed, and 1,522 were injured, from causes beyond their own control. The total number of passenger-journeys having been 455,272,000, it follows that the proportion of passengers killed was in round numbers 1 to 2,845,450, and of passengers injured 1 to 260,155. The report concludes with a series of suggestions for securing increased safety. They refer to the judicious selection and training of officers and servants, a thorough maintenance of permanent way, sufficient siding accommodation for goods traffic, and continuous breaks.

A RETURN relating to the Indian and Ceylon Telegraphs has just been published. It appears that the line from Ceylon coast (Talla Manaar) to Galle, is 311·75 miles in length, and that the total cost of the lines and buildings to the end of the financial year 1872-73 was Rs. 1,56,085. The line from Belgaum to Ceylon is 983·835 miles in length, and the total cost of the lines and buildings to the end of the year 1872-73 was Rs. 9,41,555. The line from Madras to Ceylon is 393·5 miles in length, and the total cost of the lines and buildings to the end of 1872-73 was Rs. 6,00,080. The line from Colombo to the Railway-station, a mile in length, cost to the end of 1872-73 £500. The receipts in India from the Ceylon Telegraph during the year ending March, 1873, were £9,370. The expenditure was: superintendence, £2,186; line maintenance, £1,486; signal offices, £3,791; repairs, £270; total, £7,733.

A REPORT on the census taken in Scotland in 1871, showing the occupations of the people, has been issued. Of the 3,360,018, which is the total population of Scotland, it appears that 1,468,585 followed occupations of some kind. The professional class during the ten years has increased by 2,567, and now numbers 54,198. The commercial class during the same period has increased by 31,773, its total number being 114,694. In the agricultural class, however, there was the marked decline of 102,289, the total number now being 270,008, instead of 372,247, as in 1861. This fact, says the report, "fully bears out the conclusion we arrived at, that the prosperity of our country is every year becoming more and more dependent on the prosperity of our commercial, manufacturing, and mining industries."

SHAFTESBURY PARK ESTATE, which is being formed into a township of cheap houses for the accommodation of the working classes, was publicly opened on the 18th inst. The proceedings included a meeting, at which the Earl of Shaftesbury presided, and Mr. Disraeli and Earl Granville spoke warmly in praise of the plan thus set on foot. The Premier remarked that the promoters of it have to a certain degree solved a question that has perplexed Parliament, viz., the improvement in the dwellings of the great body of the people. Shaftesbury Park is a township which in November next will contain 1,200 houses, capable of accommodating about 8,000 persons, and is situated in Battersea, near Clapham Junction Station. It is the work of the Artisans, Labourers, and General Dwellings Company, which also has estates in Liverpool, Manchester, and Birmingham.

TWO more of the City churches will shortly disappear. Workmen are now engaged in the demolition of St. Antholm Church, Watling-street. The foundation is very ancient, being the gift of the canons of St. Paul's in 1181. The church was restored under the direction of Sir Christopher Wren in 1682. Another church, the demolition of which will be commenced as soon as the necessary arrangements are completed, is that of All-Hallows, Bread-street. In this church Milton was baptised, and the register still preserves the entry of the event as follows :—The xxth daye of December, 1608, was baptised John, the sonne of John Milton, Scrivener." The font which was then used is still in the church. There is also in the church a beautifully-carved altar-piece of ancient foundation.

PROPOSED AQUARIUM AND WINTER GARDEN FOR LONDON.—A prospectus has been issued of the Royal Aquarium and Summer and Winter Garden Society, with a capital of £200,000, in shares of £5, to provide an aquarium and summer and winter garden on a freehold site facing the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Abbey. The building is to be principally of glass, forming a large conservatory and promenade surrounded by galleries, and the aquarium is intended to be the most complete yet constructed. Rooms for private concerts, lectures, &c., are also to be included, and likewise a picture and fine art gallery.

BY his will the late Lord Dalhousie has directed that all political correspondence and confidential public papers connected with his official life shall be selected and placed in a locked box by themselves. It is to be sealed up and deposited in the family charter-room at Panmure, and is not to be opened for more than one hundred years—namely, 1990. The present generation will therefore never learn all the particulars connected with the "Take care of Dowb" despatch which Lord Dalhousie, then Lord Panmure, while Secretary of War, during the Crimean war, sent out to Lord Raglan, and the existence of which document was first mentioned by Sir de Lacy Evans in the House of Commons in an after-dinner speech.

A GRAND banquet has been given by the Lord Mayor of London to a large number of gentlemen and ladies concerned in the pursuit of literature, art, music, and the drama, and the occasion brought together a picturesque assembly of English and foreign celebrities. The first special toast, "Literature and Art," was responded to by Lord Houghton, Sir Francis Grant, and M. Halanzier. "Music," represented by the prime donne of both operas, was acknowledged by the Marquis de Caux and Sir Julius Benedict. Messrs. Sala, Hynam, and Saner, of the New York Herald, severally responded for "English and Foreign Journalism," and Mr. Alfred Wigan for the "Drama."

THE Lord Mayor, accompanied by the Lady Mayoress and several members of the Corporation, visited Stratford in state on the 20th inst., for the purpose of opening West Ham Park as a public recreation ground. The park was purchased of Mr. John Gurney for £25,000, that gentleman and the Corporation of London each contributing £10,000 towards that amount, the remainder being made up by local subscriptions. The title-deeds having been handed to the Lord Mayor, he in turn gave them over to the managing committee, at the same time declaring, amid loud applause, that the park was open for ever.

THE Secretary of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society has received a letter from a correspondent in Jeddah, which tends to confirm the representations made as to the increased briskness of the slave trade on the Red Sea. This communication says :—"All the ports on this side of the Red Sea bristle with slaves for sale, particularly Jeddah; this town supplies hundreds of homeward-bound pilgrims with (to them) the necessary article of human flesh. Abyssinians are always in demand, and the Arabs seem well able to meet it, judging from what I saw during the last pilgrim season."

DR. HERBERT VAUGHAN, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Salford, has protested against the conduct of those who have, without proof, asserted that the recent attempt to assassinate Prince Bismark was the work of his Church. Alluding to the telegrams announcing the event, Dr. Vaughan said that the whole of the telegraphic system of Europe was manipulated by Jews, "the hereditary opponents not only of the Catholic Church, but of all Christianity." They and the Freemasons, he asserted as a serious fact, were leagued together to destroy Christianity in Germany.

THE steamship Albion, of Leith, Captain Howling, has sailed from Aberdeen, having on board the American Expedition to Iceland. The gentlemen composing the Expedition are Mr. Cyrus W. Field, Mr. H. N. Gladstone, a younger son of the ex-Premier, Mr. Bayard Taylor, Dr. Hayes, Dr. Kneeland, Mr. M. Halstead, and Mr. Eirikr Magnusson. The cruise round Iceland and the Faroe Islands will occupy about two months, and it is intended to take part in the rejoicings on the occasion of the Danish King's visit to Iceland on the 2nd proximo.

A PROPOSAL TO TUNNEL MONT BLANC.—During the past year M. Ernest Stamm, an Alsatian engineer, devoted much time and care to the study of the question of a connection between France and Italy independently of Swiss territory. With this object the idea of tunneling Mont Blanc is advocated by him in a paper which has been read by M. Stamm before the Société Industrielle de Mulhouse. A survey proves that while Chamounix is 3,445 feet above the sea level, and Entrèves, on the south, 4,216 feet, a tunnel between the two points would not be longer, nor its gradients more difficult, than the Mont Cenis tunnel.

IT appears from a Parliamentary return that there were at the end of last year 16,820 miles of railway open in the United Kingdom. The total authorised capital amounted to £676,686,586, of which £588,320,308 was paid up. The number of passengers, exclusive of season ticket-holders, was 455,320,188. The total receipts from all sources amounted to £57,742,000, of which 55 per cent. was from goods traffic, and 41 per cent. from passenger traffic.

SEVERAL houses in the parish of St. Martin, London, having been found in a dangerous condition, the surveyor applied to the Marlborough-street Police Magistrate for an order to evict the occupiers. Some of the inhabitants, who were poor people, pleaded that they could not find lodgings elsewhere on such short notice as had been given them, but Mr. Knox said he had no power to allow them to remain in their houses, and granted the order.

THE Messageries Maritimes Company's steamer Ara, with the present inward mail, arrived at Marseilles on the 21st inst., at eleven A.M. She brings seventy-one passengers and a general cargo, including one hundred and fifty bales of silk, 6,440 packages of tea, and 8,000 sundries for London, which part of her cargo will be forwarded to its destination per company's steamer Labourdonnais, due in London on or about the 2nd proximo.

THE Eastern Telegraph Company have announced that their Vigo-Lisbon Cable has been broken by the Pacific Company's screw steamer Chimborazo, near Lisbon, in thirteen fathoms of water. It is anticipated that the line will be speedily re-established, and during the interruption messages for Egypt and the East will be forwarded vid Marseilles.

THE National Debt, it appears from an official return—funded, unfunded, and terminable annuities included—stands at the sum of £779,283,245. For the year 1857-8 the amount was £839,519,326. During the intervening period £21,026,489 has been added to the Debt, and £81,262,570 paid off, leaving a balance in our favour of £60,236,081.

A FLAX MILL at Lockinnock, in Renfrewshire, has been totally destroyed by fire. The premises were occupied by Messrs. Crawford Brothers, spinners, and were five storeys in height. About two hundred and fifty persons will be thrown out of employment. The damage is estimated at £20,000.

IT appears from the annual report for 1873 of the Scotch Fishery Board, that the number of fishing-boats in Scotland was 15,095, and of fishermen and boys, 45,594 ; and that the estimated value of the boats, nets, and lines employed in the herring and cod and ling fisheries was £1,020,828.

HER MAJESTY'S SHIPS ON THE CHINA STATION.

The Oriental for July refers almost exclusively to Indian matters, as the papers, "Forty-three Years in India," "Benevolent India," "The Government of India Traffic in Spirits," and "The Capuan Fever," testify. There is a brief sketch of the labours of Mr. Trubner in the field of Oriental literature, and the usual editorial notes, which are always interesting.

LONDON: MONDAY, JULY 27, 1874.

BARON VON RICHTHOFEN'S PROPOSED RAILWAY.

IN the London and China Telegraph of June 1st we placed before our readers this scheme, as propounded by its author at a meeting of the Berlin Geographical Society, but it appears to us to be set forth with greater clearness in the paper which the Baron has contributed to the July number of the Geographical Magazine, and we therefore take this opportunity of again calling attention to this very important matter.

"The completion of the railroad across North America," observes Baron VON RICHTHOFEN, "first suggested the "idea of direct communication between Europe and "China, the chief consuming and producing countries of "the world. In considering the question in detail, the "object is, of course, the utilisation of existing trade-"routes in combination with existing lines of railway, and "two projects have thus grown up." These are denominated the Russian and the English projects, the former uniting Nijni-Novgorod with Peking by a line past Ormsk, Tomsk, Irkutsk to Kiachta, and then across the Mongolian desert; and the latter joining the valleys of the Indus and the Ganges on the one side with Europe, and on the other with China. For various good and valid reasons Baron VON RICHTHOFEN looks upon both these projects as impracticable, and, as he remarks, neither of them would by any possibility occur to any one looking at the question from a Chinese standpoint. The great goal of railway enterprise is not Peking (for that city and the districts immediately surrounding it have no great commercial importance), but "that densely-populated and fertile alluvial "plain which lies beyond the eastern prolongation of the "Kuen Lun range and the lower courses of the Yang-tsze "and the Hwang-ho. . . . To the north, where the Hwang-"ho breaks out from its mountain cradle, lies the true gate "towards Central Asia," and the real key to communication with it is Si-ngan-fu. From this town there is a wide natural route leading straight into Central Asia, and this route undoubtedly offers the "best line of approach, whe-"ther for caravans or armies, as well as the best, if not the "only, site for a line of communication." This narrow tract or belt of country, "in which the towns Lan-chow-fu, Kan-chow, and Su-chow successively occur," is found to be level and fertile, and "hard by Su-chow it widens out, and "a little beyond the last great gate (Kia-yu-kwan) the "Great Wall is reached." The extreme importance of this route is clearly shown by various events in Chinese history in both ancient and modern times, and Baron VON RICHTHOFEN briefly draws attention to them. Beyond the Great Wall the road is tolerably level to the oasis of Hami, a distance of 1,560 li, and after that it lies through steppes. At Hami the Tien Shan range is reached, and here the road divides, the southern portion running from one oasis to another past Kashgar and Yarkand, and the northern one leading along a steppe-like country studded with wells, past Barkul to Kuldja, which was annexed by Russia in 1872. This road, which we have thus hurriedly sketched, is, we are told, "the best natural line for a railway from "China to Europe; . . . the best proof of the goodness of "the road, and the absence of any important physical diffi-"culties, is that up to the time of the recent political dis-"turbances, camels were rarely used by travellers, but "waggons were almost exclusively adhered to." The worst part of the road lies between Si-ngan-fu and Lan-chow-fu, where a lofty mountain has to be crossed, but the gradients are easy: beyond this the road is level, and there is no lack of water. The distance from Si-ngan-fu to Kuldja is 2,245 miles, and as native carts travel from point to point in eighty days, it is clear that there can be no great difficulties to be overcome, for that is their usual rate everywhere in the plains of Northern China. The road from Hami to Yarkand is shorter than that to Kuldja, "but Yarkand is situated in a regular cul-de-sac, and a railway line would inevitably be brought to a stand-still at that point.

Baron VON RICHTHOFEN thus sums up the advantages of the route which he advocates:—It is the most direct line of communication between China and Europe, and it enters China proper at the only point where a good road exists from the westward. Such difficulties as arise from broken and mountainous country are (as unanimous accounts tell us) conspicuous by their absence. The approach from the plains of China to Si-ngan-fu, and the road thence for a part of the way towards Lan-chow-fu, are not unaccompanied by difficulties, as the yielding löss soil is there met with; but, immediately on entering the thickly populated districts of China, one may look for a most profitable return for one's capital. Without wishing to be captious, we cannot but think that our writer rather underrates the difficulties presented by the Yellow River—"China's sorrow"—but we must hope that European engineers would be able to deal satisfactorily with them. One feature, we are reminded, lends supreme importance to this route, and that is the ease with which coal can be procured. In Shansi and Kansu it is found in great abundance, and on the road to Hami and from Barkul along the northern slopes of the Tien Shan it is fairly plentiful, being used as fuel at every station. All things considered, Baron VON RICHTHOFEN is of opinion that "the line is not only one favoured by nature and one of "which the importance is borne out by history, but its "direction is exactly that best suited for the object sought, "while the ease with which it can be laid down and main-"tained will render the cost of transporting goods very "moderate." He does not pretend to decide on the best route after leaving Kuldja, for there, he says, there is no knotty geographical problem to solve, and he thinks that "the direction finally chosen will probably be determined on from political considerations." Whether the line eventually joins the Russian system by either of the two routes, or "whether efforts will be made to effect a junc-"tion with M. de LESSEPS' proposed line to India, ... "these questions have but a slight importance as regards "the portion of the trans-continental line which will cross "the plateau of Central Asia, inasmuch as at the most "they can but affect its extreme western end."

THE daily papers lately published a statement referring to a proposed alteration in the P. and O. Company's contract for the conveyance of the mails. This paragraph was copied by our overland contemporaries, and our readers may have been surprised that so important an item of intelligence should have been omitted from our own columns. The reply made to Mr. D. JENKINS in the House of Commons by the Postmaster-General, at once places the rumour referred to in its proper light, and shows that the reports on the subject were incorrect. The practice we have adopted of ignoring statements which are not well founded we consider the wisest. Exceptions to this rule of course occur occasionally.

THE Parliamentary return of the number and names of the ships employed in conveying coolies from India and China to the British West Indies since the 1st of January, 1872, to the present time, has just been issued. There were fifty-nine vessels from India, with a total embarked of 27,086 coolies, out of which number 1,162 deaths occurred and 176 births. The mortality on board the ships Humber, Woodburn, Golden Fleece, Hereford, and Kate Kellock was heavier than that on the other ships, amounting in one case to sixty-eight deaths. The only vessel from China is the Corona, which took 388 immigrants to British Guiana. The Indus was lost on her passage.

THE amendments to the Straits Courts Bill have been passed, but the Bill is not yet reprinted, and we therefore reserve any comments on it, and Lord STANLEY'S remarks.

THE Gazette notifies that Mr. R. F. MORGAN, Queen's Advocate in Ceylon, has received the honour of knighthood.

THE COINAGE OF HONG KONG AND THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

From the Fourth Annual Report of the Deputy Master of the Mint, which has just been issued, we learn that among the colonial coinages executed during the past year were a coinage of the nominal value of £6,250, in silver pieces of 20c., 10c., and 5c., for the Straits Settlements, and a coinage of the nominal value of £12,000, in pieces of the same denominations, for Hong Kong. Two coinages, which the pressure of the demand for Imperial coinage has rendered it impossible for the Mint to undertake, have been placed in other hands, namely, a silver coinage of the nominal value of £8,000, in 20c., 10c., and 5c. pieces, executed by Messrs. Heaton and Sons, of Birmingham, for the Government of Hong Kong; and a copper coinage of fifty tons, in 1c., ½c., and ¼c. pieces, for the Government of the Straits Settlements, entrusted in the month of May to the Calcutta Mint. Part of the latter coinage was afterwards transferred to the colony of Labuan.

The following table exhibits the number and value of coins struck in the Royal Mint, as mentioned above :—

ASSAY OF JAPANESE COINS.

In his Report, above alluded to, Mr. C. W. Fremantle also states that in September last portions of "pyx" coins of gold and silver, and pieces from "test ingots," taken from the coinage of the Japan Mint during the year, were, by direction of the Japanese Government, forwarded to the Treasury, with a request that their Lordships would be pleased to permit test assays of them to be made by the Mint in London, and would cause a report of the results to be transmitted to Osaka. In accordance with this request, the assays were made in the Royal Mint in the month of November, and the result, which in each case gave proof of the accuracy of the work performed, was in due course communicated to Major Kinder.

THE ORDEAN STABLE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph,)

SIR,—On reperusal of my letter to you of the 8th inst. I must say I am surprised at the warmth of "A.B.'s" rejoinder. No person can be more grateful than I am to Lord Stanley of Alderley for the interest he takes in Straits affairs, only I should like to see his energies employed in a more useful manner to public interests. This is a matter of opinion. Had his lordship backed up the Straits Association when from 1868 to 1872 they clamoured at the doors of the Colonial-office, and obtained from Lord Kimberley then the inquiry he asks for now, Sir Harry Ord, on the spot, would have had necessary papers and witnesses round him, and the result might have tended to public justice and general advantage. Now that he is removed from the Straits, that documentary and personal evidence can be with difficulty procured, that a principal witness in his favour, probably, has been calamitously removed, the inquiry would savour less of fair play, and, upon such grounds, is, I think, objectionable.

But in writing I did not intend to create ill feeling and dissent, but rather concord, if possible. My wish was to show how all those interested in the Straits Settlements might best unite to promote the present and future prosperity of that flourishing colony, being strongly of opinion, with Archbishop Whately, that it is "useless to shiver for last year's snow."—Yours obediently,

Δ

HAMBURG, JULY 21.

Numerous instances having been adduced to show how the unlimited use of private signals in the merchant service interferes with those of vessels in distress or requiring the aid of a pilot, affecting the lives of the crew and safety of the ship, it seemed expedient to issue some general regulations on the subject, if possible by international agreement; but owing to the great pressure of business it has hitherto been postponed from one session to the other. It seems now, however, that the authorities are taking up the matter in earnest, and it is to be hoped it will be brought to a satisfactory solution without any further delay. The Chancery of the Empire recently sent a copy of the English Merchant Shipping Act of 1873 to the Governments of all the maritime States of Germany, with a request for their opinion if it was advisable to introduce the same code of signals as that contained in the Act, or whether it would be better to draw up a separate one for the use of the German mercantile marine. With the exception of Oldenburg, who suggested the expediency of several alterations, all the other Governments were unhesitatingly in favour of the former alternative and the adoption of the English code. In consequence of this almost unanimous expression of opinion, in which the Chancellor cordially agreed, the draft of a decree embodying the contents of the above cited Act of Parliament has now been drawn up and submitted to the Bundesrath for their approval and promulgation.

A conference of delegates from all the commercial seaport towns of Germany is convened to meet at Danzig in the beginning of next month to take into consideration the expediency of memorialising the Chancellor with regard to the introduction of a general code of maritime law, and have already sent a circular to the various Chambers of Commerce in such ports requesting them to consider the subject and send a representative prepared to give their decisive opinion. The Hamburg Chamber of Commerce has already returned an answer declining to take part in the conference, on the ground that the present is not an opportune time for pressing the Government on so important a subject. On the other hand, the majority have replied in the affirmative, and signified their intention of sending a delegate duly instructed to support the proposal.

Since I last wrote to you on the subject of the introduction of the new currency, great progress has been made, and there is now no doubt that it will become an accomplished fact on New Year's-day. During the few days that Prince Bismark spent at Berlin on his journey from Varzin to Kissengen, he insisted on the necessity of putting an end to the dreadful state of uncertainty and suspense as soon as possible, and so it was settled that the date fixed for the Prussian dominions should be the 1st of January next. This has been officially announced, though the decree has not yet been published, but there is plenty of time for that, as the law requires only three months' preliminary notice to be given, and long before the end of September the summer holidays will have come to an end, and the Emperor, Prince Bismark, and all the great officers of State, will have returned to Berlin from their travels and visits to the bathing-places, and have resumed their usual official avocations. The King of Saxony and the Duke of Brunswick have published decrees—both dated July 1—ordaining the introduction of the new currency in their respective territories on the 1st of January. Hamburg has received 50,000 marks worth of the new currency and put it in circulation, which is a great relief to the retail trade, where the scarcity of small coins for change was so severely felt that the tradesmen were put to all sorts of shifts to content their customers. In bringing this to the notice of the public the Finance Department declared their readiness to part with the new coins to the public on application as far as the amount at their disposal went, in sums of six, twelve, eighteen, and twenty-four reichsmarks for the equivalent in the old currency, and in coins of ten, five, two, and one pfennigs respectively. They further point out that the new currency is already a legal tender, but that no one is bound to receive in payment a larger amount than one mark (100 pf.) in the above-named four denominations of coin. And finally they give notice that the legal value of the coins is 7½ pfennigs for a schilling Hamburg currency, but that sums ending in half a schilling are to be reckoned at 4 pf. and one schilling are 8 pf. The whole amount at the disposal of the Finance Department was totally absorbed the first day, and ten times as much was vainly applied for.

In a former letter I informed your readers that the gold coins of the separate States of Germany lost their legal and nominal value on the 1st inst., being called in, put out of circulation, and the new gold currency given in exchange. The largest number of these were found to be the Prussian Friedericks d'Or, which always passed current at the fixed value of 5 thalers 20 silbergroschens, but now that they are shelved as money and have only value as gold the banks and dealers will not give more than 5 thalers 5 groschens for them. And here an unforeseen and peculiar difficulty has been brought to light, and will probably give rise to an Act of special legislation to redress the oversight. In some of the older provinces—especially East and West Prussia—it has been the custom from time immemorial to make out the value of landed property, houses, mortgages, and other objects either in "thalers gold" or in a certain number of "Friedricks d'or.". The latter had no fixed value till 1832, when they became a legal tender and worth 5⅓ thalers, or 17 marks of the new currency. It therefore remains to be settled at what rate the older deeds of mortgage, rent, interest, &c., of a date anterior to 1832 are to be calculated on reduction to new currency. It was formerly the custom to give and take an agio of 4 groschens for the "thaler gold," but custom and usances are not binding in law. Still, however, in fairness and equity the persons interested have some claim to be heard, as it would be very hard on them to make them suffer such a serious loss, which was certainly not contemplated by the German Parliament when they passed the new currency law, as not a word was said about it in the debates by any speaker who took part in them.

It is further officially notified that the South-German two-florin pieces cease to be a legal tender after the end of September, and will be exchanged for their equivalent in new currency till the end of the year, after which period they will only have value as raw silver at the market price of the day. The Austrian quarter-florin pieces are no longer allowed to pass current in Germany. Sixteen hundred bags of these coins, collected at the public offices at Berlin and elsewhere, have been sent hither to be melted down by the Refining Company in this city.

COMMERCIAL.

The dealings in Tea have been on a very limited scale, but the prices are steady; the only sale by importers was 625/8 chests of Congou. Rice finds an easy sale at full rates, a cargo of 21,245 bags Saigon per Aline was sold afloat before arrival. There is a brisk demand for Cassia, and a good many transactions are reported at 61 to 62 marks. Flores is also

AMSTERDAM, JULY 22.

When the Cabinet of Mr. Van de Putte resigned, its organ, the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, advised that a Ministry should be formed by Mr. Heemskerk. This suggestion created much surprise, because it is not long since this statesman was declared by the same paper to be utterly ineligible for any ministerial post. But what was hinted is now an accomplished fact. The manager of the King's Cabinet returned from Montreux, where he met our Sovereign, and some hours later all the papers published the announcement that Mr. Heemskerk had undertaken to form a Cabinet. This quite agrees with the adventurous character of that gentleman, who most undoubtedly possesses great talent, but who does not enjoy a good political reputation. There is a suspicion that he is prepared to sacrifice anything in order to retain office. The worst, however, is that he has no majority in the Chamber. Of the whole eighty members only nine are with him through thick and thin. It needs not to be demonstrated therefore that he must seek support from other parties, and it thus is quite problematical what political colour his colleagues will be. It seems pretty certain that Mr. Weitzel, the late Minister of War, and Mr. Taalman Kip, who recently accepted the portfolio of the naval department, will retain their offices. But who will fill the other vacant seats? There are plenty of rumours, but it is of no use to repeat them. It seems very probable that Mr. Heemskerk will endeavour to engage the old Liberals to back him, and that he will not seek the support of the Clericals, either Protestants or Roman Catholics. This suggestion is based on an article of the Nieuwe Arnhemsche Courant, which includes upon its staff a son of the new Premier. Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illes. It is almost incredible that Mr. Heemskerk should appeal to the Liberal party, or rather to a fraction of that party. I think it is almost impossible that he can do without the aid of the Clericals, and to obtain such aid he will have to make concessions to which no Liberal will agree. But as I stated before, our political situation is thoroughly rotten, and the most improbable things may happen. It seems to me very doubtful whether Mr. Heemskerk is the right man to put matters straight.

Last week the Provincial States occupied themselves with the election of members to the First Chamber, and all the resigning members were re-elected, with the exception of one member, who went from the Lords to the Commons, and was replaced by Mr. Van Voorthuyzen, a very able man.

At Rotterdam a general meeting has been held of the members of the Society for the Welfare of the Javanese. Mr. A. Moens was in the chair, and in his opening speech said much in praise of the late Dr. H. Bosch, who has left his library to the society. You will remember that the vitality of this society has been for some time very doubtful, and the general opinion was, that this meeting would be the last. It was, however, decided that another endeavour should be made to gain the sympathy of the public. A report was read upon the education of the natives, and it was urged that further efforts should be made in this direction. The meeting approved, but the question remained how to cover the expenses, since the Government will not co-operate? Nevertheless a resolution in the sense of the report was put and carried, and in the meanwhile endeavours will be made to find the funds. The budget was approved of. There is an unfavourable balance, but the members flatter themselves that this may be covered. The Rev. J. H. Maronier and Mr. J. Van Gennep were re-elected managers of the society.

The reports from the Bourse are unimportant. There is plenty of money, but no demand for speculation. Transactions in Colonial Produce are not worth reporting, the intense heat of the weather interfering with business.

The practice of signing and delivering bills of lading for cargo not actually on board of steamers, is one to be condemned as calculated to afford undue facilities to reckless trading, and the encouragement of persons of no means or responsibility to carry on a shipping business under advances. The India and China trade already has enough of this class of traders. The competition amongst brokers is no doubt keen, but to adopt such tactics is very questionable.

The suit instituted against the directors of the International Bank of Hamburg by Mr. Strack, a shareholder, for the bonus charged by them on both the London and Hamburg establishments, has been decided by the Tribunal of Commerce against the directors. Some interest was felt in the decision, and the shares fell two per cent. The quotation is now 97½ per cent.

At the meeting of the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, the Chairman, Sir Daniel Gooch, M.P., congratulated the proprietors on the completion of the two large contracts for the Brazilian Submarine and the Black Sea Telegraph Company, and announced that all liability on these important works would cease after this week. He also stated that he was in favour of the formation of a trust for distributing to the proprietors the profit shares on the above contracts by means of certificates as before, and also that the Great Eastern would sail on the 27th inst. to lay the new cable for the Anglo-American Company.

The directors of the Globe Telegraph and Trust Company have issued their report for the year ending the 18th inst. It states that the total revenue accruing from dividends on securities, and from interest on loans, &c., amounts to £141,481 for the year, out of which £101,271 has been already distributed in interim dividends. The working expenses amount to £1,267, leaving a balance of £38,943 10s. 11d., out of which the directors now propose a distribution of 1½ per cent., or 3s. per share upon both preference and ordinary shares, making with the previous interim payments a total dividend for the year of 6 per cent. on the preference, and of 5½ per cent. on the ordinary shares, carrying forward £1,614.

The half yearly general meeting of the East and West India Dock Company has been held. The report stated that during the past six months there had been an increase of 94,771 tons in the vessels discharged, and of 54,793 tons in vessels loaded outwards. The increase extended to the shipping from all parts of the world, with the exception of the China and Ceylon trades, in which there had been a slight falling off generally. A dividend of 3 per cent., free of income tax, for the past half year was declared.

The monthly statistics issued by the Silk Association of America show the imports of manufactures of silk at the port of New York for the month of June and in the fiscal years ending June 30 to be as follows:—1867, pkgs. 17,354, value $18,343,434; 1868, pkgs. 18,793, value $17,037,749; 1869, pkgs. 22,565, value $21,335,667; 1870, pkgs. 26,034, value $23,087,129; 1871, pkgs. 33,638, value $31,629,906; 1872, pkgs. 37,724, value $34,978,026; 1873, pkgs. 32,394, value $28,401,407; 1874, pkgs. 27,887, value $22,669,653. The imports of raw silk of New York and San Francisco were:—1867, pkgs. 2,252, value $1,224,081; 1868, pkgs. 4,938, value $2,263,142; 1869, pkgs. 5,946, value $3,135,273; 1870, pkgs. 5,263, value $2,528,953; 1871, pkgs. 8,164, value $4,942,447; 1872, pkgs. 9,203, value $5,993,828; 1873, pkgs. 11,129, value $7,032,711; 1874, pkgs. 7,862, value $4,374,556.

Existing orders having been filled, the price of Bar Silver has again declined to 58⅜d. per oz., and the tendency of the market appears to be downwards. Mexican Dollars have experienced a further fall, and those lately arrived have been disposed of at 56¾d. per oz.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

No decided alteration is observable in the Produce Markets most of the principal articles still wanting relief from the continued dull monotony, and the downward course in the value of several remains unchecked.

TEA.

There has been some excitement during the week amongst importers, who show great anxiety to sell, but buyers, seeing the weight of Tea available, play a waiting game, and have, so far, the best of it, as prices from the first sales, ex Glenartney, show a drop of 2d. to 3d. per lb. on all but finest quality, which is in small supply, and sells at comparatively good prices. Further inspection of the yield leads us to conclude that the crop is not quite equal to that of last season, and the Ningchows have been too extravagantly estimated. The first supplies of Pakling have been offered, and are disappointing in quality, but the few parcels sold, owing to the scarcity, realised very high prices, ranging from 2s. to 2s. 3d. per lb. The new make Congous, ex late arrivals, are selling at a shade better prices. Capers are selling at ruinously low rates, owing to the high cost.

Messrs. Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—In our last we alluded briefly to the arrival of the Glenartney and partial sale of her cargo at full prices for first samples on offer, especially for good medium kinds. Since then the Agamemnon and Glenfalloch have arrived, and the whole of their cargoes have been put on the market, the quantity being in excess of the requirements of the buyers, exporters operating very sparingly, whilst the trade have bought less freely than usual. The result has been a decline of fully 2d. to 3d. per lb. on the opening rates of 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10d. for good medium kinds, such now being obtainable at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d., fine kinds of which first sold from 1s. 11d. to 2s., are not now worth more than 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10½d. per lb., whilst finest have fairly maintained opening rates, say from 2s. 2d. to 2s. 5d. per lb., with some few superfine chops from 2s. 7d. to 2s. 10½d. per lb., the latter being chop Poh Chun. The quality of the crop we consider about equal to that of the last season, whilst the few Ning Chows, which have been seen, prove to be finer than last. Pak Lins :—A few thousand boxes arrived by Euphrates steamer from Marseilles, and were placed on the market yesterday, and sales were made of some portion of them from 2s. to 2s. 2d. per lb., the quality being inferior to first arrivals of last year. In old season's teas business has been too limited to afford subject of remark under separate heads, the chief sales being made at public auction without reserve at about previous prices. In Green Teas but little has been done, prices showing no material change. Scented Teas : Canton Capers of new import continue very dull of sale, and chiefly find buyers at public auction at low prices, leaving very heavy losses to importers. Orange Pekoes are also selling very irregularly, and at unsatisfactory prices. The market is bare of Foochow kinds, both of Caper and Orange Pekoe. Public sales of new season's Congous and Scented Teas took place on the 17th, 20th, 22nd, and 23rd inst., comprising 6,685 packages without reserve, and selling at the decline noted above in the body of the circular. The deliveries for the week as compared with last year are a follows :—

Coastwise	562,000	...	561,000
	3,104,000	...	2,960,000

Messrs. James Goddard and Co.'s Circular says :—Three steamers, with new season's Moning, have arrived, and have placed on the market about 7,000,000 lbs. of Tea. The market opened with a few sales from 1s. 9d. to 1s. 11d., and one parcel at 2s. 4½d., but at the former prices particularly the dealers only bought sparingly, and a considerable drop in value immediately occurred. Since all the Teas have been seen a slightly more steady market has been apparent (with a good deal of irregularity in value), considering the quantity here and immediately to arrive. The trade throughout the country have not responded, or bought with anything like confidence. Importers have occasionally given some support by the refusal of offers, but small without reserve sales are held every day. The quality appears to be a good average one, and better than last year ; and prices, quality considered, are under last year, whilst cost price would seem to be considerably over. The quantity sold bears only a small proportion to the arrivals. Imports, deliveries, and stocks in London, from Jan. 1 to June 30 :—

Imports.		Deliveries.		Stocks.

SILK.

The market continues very quiet ; manufacturers buy for the requirements of the moment, but beyond that there is little doing. Prices are a shade easier since the public sales last month. Deliveries are satisfactory. The figures of settlements and stocks advised from China are large, and tend to unsettle things here.

The deliveries of Silk, from 1st to 22nd inclusive, have been :—China, 2,453 bales ; Canton, 508 bales ; Japan, 602 bales. Total, 3,563 bales.

COFFEE.

The market has again fluctuated, and prices have been very irregular, but with a generally improved demand at the close the intermediate reduction in Plantation Ceylon has not only been fully recovered but an advance of 2s. per cwt. is established. All ordinary and foreign descriptions have, however, been slow of sale at a further reduction of 4s. for Native Ceylon and 2s. for foreign, but a recovery of 1s. per cwt. has take place at the close. Closing prices are : Plantation Ceylon, triage 93s. to 102s., small grey to coloury 107s. to 115s., low middling grey 113s. 6d. to 117s., middling coloury 117s. 6d. to 120s., good middling to good bold 120s. 6d. to 124s., pea-berry 128s. to 130s. 6d. ; 50 tons ships and marks declared have been sold for arrival at 117s. Native Ceylon closes as follows : Brown garblings 43s. 6d. to 47s., good ditto 52s. 6d. to 54s. 6d., small 83s. 6d., good ordinary to fine ordinary 90s. to 92s., fine bold 99s., pea-berry 102s. 6d. The only sale of other East India reported consists of 500 bags good ordinary Indian Manila at 92s. per cwt.

SUGAR.

The market has remained inactive, the demand from the trade being below the supply. Towards the close, however, an improved state of the market for unstoved manufactured has induced the trade to purchase more freely, which has given a steadier tone to the market, and led to the recovery of the slight decline which has occurred during the past fortnight. For Penang there has been only a limited demand, and sales have been small, prices being steady. Manila has attracted little attention, and only a small business has been done at previous rates. Fine Java has been sold at a slight improvement. The sales have been as follows :—2,100 bags middling to good brown Penang at 17s. 6d. to 18s. 6d., 5,000 bags good clayed Manila at 18s. 6d., 3,500 bags low ditto at 17s., and 850 baskets fine white grainy Java at 27s. An offer of 510 bags date China was bought in at 16s. per cwt.

COIR GOODS.—The public sales on the 17th, although less extensive than the previous auctions, offered a good supply, viz., 2,229 bales 54 tons Yarn, 186 bales 2 tons Fibre, and 50 tons Rope. The bulk of the supply of Yarn consisted of good and well made qualities, which sold at full rates ; common and coarse met only a moderate demand, but former rates were realised. Good Fibre sold at firm rates. Rope was only partially disposed of. 34 tons Ceylon Yarn chiefly sold, low and ordinary at £23 5s. to £27, low modium £27 15s. to £28 5s., good to fine at £33 to £36 10s. Of 128 bundles Ceylon brush Fibre only a few sold at £23 10s.

COCOANUT OIL.—The demand has been limited, except for really fine Cochin, for which, being scarce, £41 has been paid; 40 tons good sold at £39 10s. Of Ceylon there have been sellers at £34 15s. to £35; at the latter price 30 tons have been sold. None has been offered by public sale.

CUTCH.—Prices are nominally steady, but there are no transactions to report.

CAMPHOR.—The demand is inactive, but stocks are very firmly held; small sales of China effected at 72s. 6d. per cwt.

COPRA.—Penang continues in short supply and in good request at £18 to £19 per ton.

COLOMBO ROOT.—Fine quality scarce and in demand.

CUBEBS AND DRAGON'S-BLOOD.—Market quiet but steady.

EBONY.—Market quiet; of 70 tons Ceylon at auction a small part only was sold at £12 15s. per ton.

ESSENTIAL OILS.—Anniseed has been firmer and higher, and there have been disposed of 100 cases afloat at up to 8s. 4½d., and about 40 cases on the spot at 8s. 3d. to 8s. 6d., closing at 8s. 6d. Cassia quiet, but firmly held. Nutmeg quiet; of 4 cases offered, 2 sold at 8d. Cinnamon scarce; 15 cases leaf offered and retired. Citronelle firmer; of 36 cases offered two-thirds sold at 1⅞d., and private sales at same figure. Lemon Grass: Very dull; nothing of consequence done.

GUMS.—Benjamin: Siam steady. Sumatra steady; of 173 cases offered, about two-thirds sold at £7 to £7 10s. for fair seconds, and 60s. to 62s. for good Palembang thirds. Copal quiet; small sales at previous value, 25 cases at auction retired. Damar very dull, but fairly held, rather large stocks. Gamboge quiet; 13 cases offered and retired.

GAMBIER, although quiet, has been steady, and business has been effected in block at 25s. to 25s. 6d. on the spot, the latter for whole bales. For arrival 400 tons have been sold, viz., 100 tons April sailing at 24s. 9d., and 300 tons June shipment at 24s. 3d. to 24s. 6d. all ex ship. In auction 275 mats fine pale free cubes have been sold at 40s. per cwt.

GALLS show a further slight improvement in price, 250 cases China having been sold at auction at 51s. 6d. to 52s. 6d. for good quality.

GALANGAL ROOT has been firm at the previous value, 20 bales having been sold at 24s. 6d. per cwt.

GUTTA-PERCHA continues dull; no business done.

HEMP.—The market for Manila has been steady, good qualities selling freely, but commoner kinds are rather slow of sale; the private sales are about 3,500 bales, including mixed quality below fair at £33 5s., fair at £34, fine Zebu at £39. At the auctions good qualities of Manila have again sold at full rates, but fair and lower kinds were dull of sale. Of 1,900 bales offered about 700 bales sold, rather mixed below fair at £33 5s., good fair at £35 15s., good at £37, fine Zebu at £39 per ton.

JAPAN WAX is in large stock, but holders are not pressing sales, and the few transactions effected have been at the previous value. Supplies in the public sales have been for the most part retired.

PEPPER.—Black has been firm and advancing, and about 5,000 bags have changed hands on the spot up to 7⅛d. for Singapore, and 6¾d. Penang. Afloat, holders are very firm, and about 300 tons have been sold, Singapore at 6 15-16d. to 7d.; more recently 6⅞d.; Penang at 6½d. At auction, of 1,713 bags one-third sold. White has also been firm and active; of 1,483 bags at auction, barely one-third sold last week at 8½d. to 8¾d. for fair to fine bright Singapore, and yesterday, at 9½d. to 9¾d., making a total advance of nearly 1d. per lb. in the week, between which prices about 1,000 bags changed hands; and 100 tons to arrive at 8¾d. up to 9¾d.; both closing dull.

PRESERVES.—In auction 34 casks China were bought in, Ginger at 6d. to 8d., Cumquats at 5d. per lb.

PLUMBAGO.—The market is still overstocked with Ceylon, but a much better demand prevails; of 1,056 barrels at public sale half sold, lump at 12s. to 18s. for middling to very good, fine bold at 21s. privately. Chips at 8s. to 11s. for middling to very good, and Dust at 7s. 6d. to 8s. 6d. good to fine.

RHUBARB.—China is firmly held at high prices. Of 119 cases offered, only a very few sold, fine at 4s., good 2s. 9d., common 6d. to 9d. per lb.

RATTANS continue very dull.

RICE.—The market has remained in a weak state, owing to the great abundance, and prices have further given way, floating cargoes being 6d. lower. On the spot old soft grain is unaltered, but new is lower. In auction 689 bags new Rangoon sold at 8s. 9d. Privately white Bengal has been sold at 9s. 9d. to 10s. 3d., Ballam at 9s. 6d. to 10s., Askoolie at 9s. 3d. to 9s. 7½d., Rangoon at 8s. 3d. to 8s. 6d., ordinary new ditto at 8s. 9d., 13,000 bags new ditto, per Irawaddy, at 8s. 10½d., Bassein at 8s. 3d. For arrival twelve floating cargoes as follows:—The Thorwaldsen, 950 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 9s. 4½d., for Holland; the Uranos, 1,270 tons Rangoon, late March sailing, at 9s. 4½d., for the Continent; the G. B. Repetto, 750 tons Rangoon, March sailing, at 9s. 4½d., Continental terms; the Java, 1,300 tons Rangoon, late April sailing, at 9s. 9d., for London; the St. Elena, 860 tons Rangoon, due, at 9s., for the Continent; the Nanny, 600 tons Necransie, due, at 9s. 3d., for Bremen; the Axel, 525 tons Necransie, off coast, at 9s. 3d., Continental terms; the Phineas Pendleton, 1,840 tons Necransie, off coast, at 8 s. 9d., for Antwerp; the Carlisle, 1,540 tons Moulmein, off coast, at 9s. 3d.; the Hartfell, 1,740 tons Moulmein, April sailing, at 9s. 1½d., for the Continent; the Anne Bragington, 680 tons Saigon, now due, at 8s. 9d.; and the Kelso, 900 tons Saigon, off coast, at 8s. 9d., for the Continent.

SHELLS.—The monthly sales were held on the 17th inst. Mother-o'-Pearl: The sales embraced 22 cases Macassar retired, and 50 cases Manila, of which a small proportion sold at £10 5s. to £10 7s. 6d. for chicken and small thin but large beards; £6 2s. 6d. to £6 7s. 6d. pickings, and £4 7s. 6d. dead. Tortoise: Of 10 cases offered 2 only sold; fine middling and bold bright mottle sorts on the string at 24s. 6d., mixed with rather dull small 18s., being cheaper. Ear Shells: 205 cases, 28 bags, 13 tons loose Japan silver were all bought in, chiefly at £30 to £60 per ton. Green Snail Shells were dull of sale, and of 660 baskets, &c., and 11,000 loose (together 82,850 shells) about 150 baskets and 3,000 loose sold at rather low prices, good bold at 8½d. to 9d., medium 6½d. to 7½d., small 4½d. to 5d., the remainder bought in, bold at 10d. to 10½d., small to medium at 6d. to 8d. each.

SPICES.—Cinnamon has continued quiet. Cassia Lignea dull and further declined; of 450 cases at auction over half sold at 57s. to 58s. last week, and 55s. this week for good unworked. Buds steady. Cloves: Penang are scarce and firmly held; 8 cases retired. Amboyna firm and scarce; of 20 packages offered a few sold at 1s. 4⅝d. for fine. Nutmegs: Of 42 cases Penang offered 6 cases fresh sold at steady rates, 78 and 79 nuts to the lb. at 3s. 6d., 82's at 3s. 4d., the remainder 79's, import 1867, bought in above the value at 3s. 8d. Of 45 cases 4 boxes 5 casks Java 6 cases 4 boxes sold, 88's at 3s. 1d. to 3s. 2d., 130's at 3s., the remainder bought in. Mace: Of 25 cases Penang 17 cases sold at firmer rates, fair bold red at 3s. 3d. to 3s. 4d., ordinary at 2s. 11d., low dark and broken at 1s. 10d., the remainder good bought in at 3s. 8d., 20 boxes ordinary Java bought in at 2s. 2d.

STICKLAC.—An active demand has prevailed for Siam, and large sales have been effected, closing at an advance of 7s. 6d. per cwt., commencing at £5 5s. for fair, and rising to £5 15s. for good, the total sales reaching about 1,000 boxes, and in auction 200 boxes good free at £5 5s., block £4 12s. 6d. to £4 15s. per cwt.

SAPANWOOD.—Continues scarce and in request; of 14 tons Batavian offered 6 tons sold at £10 10s.

STAR ANNISEEDS.—There have been large arrivals, but no business is reported.

SOY.—No transactions.

SAGO.—Small is firm and saleable at 16s. to 17s. per cwt.; large steady but quiet; of 3,198 bags at public sale, 500 sold at 17s. for fine small, and 18s. for medium. Flour is firmly held; there are buyers of Singapore at 15s.; 446 bags Borneo retired; 25 bags Singapore, common, sold at 14s. 6d. per cwt.

STRAW BRAID.—At auction of 325 bales China offered 60 bales sold, No. 3 quality (mottle) at £6 10s.

TOBACCO.—1,008 bales Japan Leaf chiefly sold at 5d. to 8d., 525 bales Japan damaged at 3d. to 7½d., 224 bales China 3¾d. to 7½d., 24 bales China damaged 6½d. to 6¾d.

TAPIOCA has been quiet, and is slightly easier; 1,045 bags flake sold at 1⅝d. to 1⅞d. per lb. for middling Penang, and 2⅛d. to 2⅜d. good bright Singapore; also 707 bags Pearl mostly sold, Bullets at 21s., being 1s. cheaper; large medium 22s. 6d.; small medium 21s. 6d., being steady. Flour steady: 200 bags retired.

TIN.—Business continues very dull, and prices show a further decline. Quotations are, Straits on the spot and afloat £95, Banca £100, Billiton £96 per ton.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Business in this market since the 17th inst. has again been of almost a retail character, but there has been little variation in prices, producers in most cases having steadily maintained their quotations. At the close quietness is still the prevailing feature in the market, buyers offering very sparingly. For the better descriptions of Goods and Yarns sellers maintain their full demands, but in the lower qualities a pressure to sell is apparent, and in these quotations may be considered almost nominal.

Fig. 39.

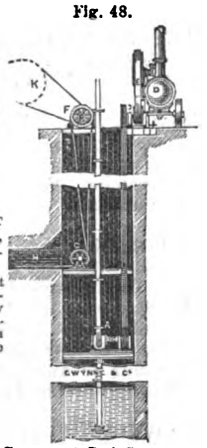
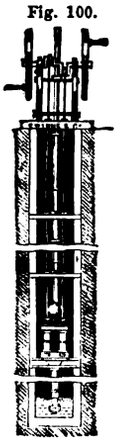
he whole arrangement very compact and self-contained. References to many applications combining unparalleled efficiency with moderate first cost will be given.

Fig. 48.



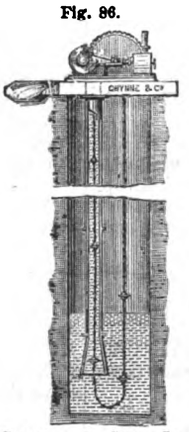
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT CENTRIFUGAL PUMP.
Fixed in a deep well, mine, or coal-pit, and driven by a portable or fixed engine fixed on the surface of the ground. Can be had of all sizes, and capable of raising any quantity of Water.

Fig. 100.



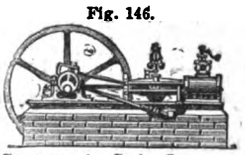
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED DOUBLE BARREL DEEP-WELL PUMP,
For Hand-power, adapted for ordinary wells of any depth, of most careful construction, and on the most approved systems.

Fig. 86.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED CHAIN PUMP, WORKED DIRECT BY STEAM ENGINE.
These Pumps work without valves or packing, and raise a considerable quantity of water. They will lift sand, mud, or grit without choking, and require only very inexpensive repairs.

Fig. 146.



GWYNNE & Co.'S IMPROVED HORIZONTAL HIGH-PRESSURE STEAM ENGINE.
With or without Expansion Gear, for economical working.
From 4 to 100-horse power.

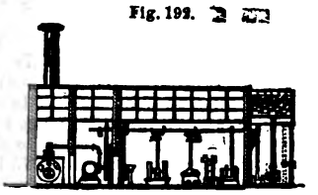
GWYNNE & Co.' IMPROVED CORNISH BOILERS WITH DOUBLE FLUES.
These boilers are simple and compact They are proved by hydraulic power to double the working pressure, are got up with the greatest care, and none but first-class materials are used in their construction. Estimates given for any size or shape of boiler.

Fig. 142.

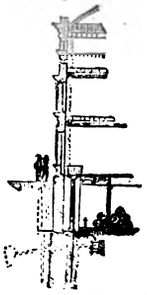
GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PORTABLE STEAM ENGINE.
Light, simple in construction, durable, and economical, and very superior to "Agricultural" Engines.
From 2½ to 30-horse power.

Fig. 192.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED MACHINERY FOR PRESSING OIL FROM SEED, OLIVES, FAT, &c., &c.
The above shows an arrangement for a seed oil mill, and comprises, besides the requisite motive power, a crushing mill, pair of runners, heating apparatus, hydraulic press, and pumps. A Centrifugal Pump is added to lift water or any purpose required.

Fig. 193.

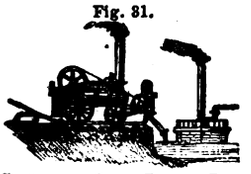


GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED HYDRAULIC LIFTS.
Worked by the supply from a tank at the top of the building, or from main pipe of any water company's supply. Well adapted for lowering wine, or other produce, into or up from cellars, or may be modified for lowering bankers' and jewellers' safes into the strong rooms. The waste water runs into the sewer.
Prices on application.

Fig. 121.

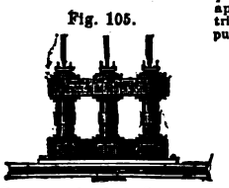
GWYNNE & Co.'s BORING TOOLS.
Of greatly improved construction. The figure represents those most frequently used, but the form and number vary much with the nature of the soil, and size of the bore hole.
G. & Co. can confidently recommend these as the best in the market.

Fig. 31.



GWYNNE & Co.'s PATENT PORTABLE PUMPING ENGINE AND FLOATING IRRIGATOR.
In which the Pumps are furnished with hose for distributing the water over the adjoining plantations. Made in all sizes.

Fig. 105.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED TREBLE BARREL LIFT AND FORCE PUMP.
These are made with gun metal barrels, copper piston rods, and brass valves. The workmanship and materials throughout are of the very best class, and comparison with those of other makers is challenged Gwynne & Co. make single and double-barrelled pumps upon the same principles.

Fig. 207.

GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED DREDGING MACHINERY.
The boat can be constructed so as to draw only 18 inches of water, if required. The machinery is extremely simple, yet thoroughly effective, the workmanship and materials are of the first class, and the amount of work it will do, compared with the cost, most favourable.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

AND PILLS.—RHEUMATISM AND NEURALGIA.—It is sometimes difficult to determine which of these diseases is affecting the sufferer, but this ignorance will not matter if Holloway's remedies be used. They alleviate and cure all muscular and nervous pains. In hereditary rheumatism, after bathing the affected parts with warm salt water, Holloway's Ointment should be well rubbed upon the spot, that it may penetrate and exert its soothing and regulating properties on the deeper vessels and nerves which are unduly excited, and cause both the pain and swelling. Holloway's treatment has the merit of removing the disease without debilitating the constitution, which was the inevitable result of the bleeding, mercury, and colchicum practice formerly adopted in these complaints.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

The present P. and O. mail brings advices from this port to the 10th June; and by the Pacific mail we have nine days later news, viz., to the 19th June; the French mail from London April 24 arrived out on the 8th June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 1 was received on the 13th June. The Japan Herald supplies the following items of intelligence:—

News of the Formosan expedition reaches here in a fitful and fragmentary manner, and we have been disappointed by the non-receipt of reliable intelligence from our correspondent on the spot. One thing, however, is certain, that the Japanese Government have either been deceived itself, or else has wilfully deceived the public, when it asserted that the Chinese Government were favourable to the expedition, as it now appears that so far from such being the case that the Chinese have demanded the evacuation of the island by the Japanese, thus verifying our own predictions. The Chinese are said to have 11,000 troops in Formosa. The Japanese Government have brought a suit against the P.M.S.S. Company, claiming $10,250 damages, in consequence of the withdrawal of the New York from the Formosan expedition.

We regret to have to announce the deaths of Mrs. Pennock, wife of Admiral Pennock, U.S.N., and of Mr. Albert de Groote, the eldest son of the Belgian Minister to this country, who was killed by the accidental discharge of his pistol. It appears that the unfortunate young gentleman was in his bedroom going to change his attire, and for that purpose proceeded to open a drawer containing a loaded revolver. By some unlucky mischance, the act of opening the drawer caused the hammer of the revolver to discharge the weapen, the muzzle of which was pointed towards M. De Groote, who received the bullet in his heart. He appears to have fallen back, and expired instantly.

It is understood that negotiations have so far progressed favourably that the Japanese are about to permit of foreigners travelling in the interior under a system of passports and sureties.

The annual meeting of the Swiss Rifle Club has taken place with the usual éclat. Several cricket matches have also been held.

An inquiry into the late outrage at the British Legation has taken place, but no decision has as yet been arrived at.

In the rifle match betwixt Hong Kong, Yokohama, and Shanghai, the results were as follows:—Hong Kong, 996; Yokohama, 974; Shanghai, 894 points.

As a mark of the march of intellect in Japan, we note that a Japanese Punch has been started in Tokio.

The import markets continue in a perfectly stagnant state. In silk little is doing, but an unusually large business had been transacted in tea.

The following summary of news is from the Japan Mail:—

The Formosan Expedition is the great subject of discussion and speculation. What seems abundantly clear is that the Japanese have shown great spirit over their work, and have found the Chinese settlers and half-castes, and even many of the savage tribes in Formosa, entirely on their side and desirous that the Bootan tribe should be punished if not exterminated. All accounts unite to prove that these savages are brutal and ferocious in a high degree. It was they who have murdered English, American and Japanese shipwrecked crews whenever ill fortune has cast them on their shores; they are a terror to all the other tribes, and appear to be the common enemies of mankind. It is not easy to see why, if punishment is to be dealt out to them for an actual offence, it should not be of a nature to prevent any possible repetition of it. The right to life is forfeited when that life is employed on every possible occasion to deprive others of a like possession, and on these grounds no one can blame the Japanese, or wish the expedition otherwise than well. Nor can the position of the Chinese extort any sympathy. They have invariably replied to any remonstrances made by the European Powers on the occasion of these shipwrecks and subsequent outrages, that they could not control these savages, claiming that though in their dominions they were not subject to their jurisdiction. But surely some responsibility attaches to the Peking Cabinet in respect of the existence of such a tribe within its dominions and on its shores, of which this tribe is the terror. A supine government may feel itself infinitely annoyed by the existence of such a horde of wretches within its gates, and may claim that all its efforts to reduce or exterminate them have been in vain. But it may be replied that what the Japanese can do the Chinese can and ought themselves to do, and the failure on the one side to undertake the duty throws the obligation of doing it on to the other side. Life must be paid for with life, and if the rightful officer refuses to demand and extort it, society steps in, sweeps away excuses, and itself executes justice. But the Chinese at present refuse to see the matter in this light. They say that no reparation for past outrages was demanded at Peking, that no intimation of the intention of the Japanese Government was made to the Chinese Cabinet, that they claim every foot of ground in Formosa, and entirely dispute the right of the Japanese to chastise offenders within their dominions. They quote Vattel against the Japanese, and repudiate all knowledge of any negotiations at Peking which would justify the expedition, and thus the matter stands at this moment.

The Japanese, unfortunately, are so far weak in the legality of their acts that they did not frankly represent their views at Peking at the time of Soyejima's embassy. The question was indeed asked whether the Chinese claimed jurisdiction over the whole of Formosa, and whether they held themselves responsible for the acts of the aborigines, and this was answered in the negative—the latter part of the question at all events. The question and answer, however, did not pass between the Ministers on either side, but casually between the interpreter on the one side and the secretary on the other. No record was made of them, and the Chinese refuse altogether to acknowledge the validity of so informal a proceeding. Nor can it be doubted that the act of the Japanese is both a violation of international law—which it is somewhat amusing to find the Chinese and Japanese referring to—and of the treaty recently concluded between the two Empires. It may also be remarked that the moral grounds on which the act of the Japanese might be justified, were they well founded, disappear before the fact that but for the Saga insurrection we should have had no Formosa Expedition, and no pretensions on the part of the Japanese to act as the police of the world in this quarter. The Japanese must learn that international law has its basis in principle, and is not to be made the justification of acts of mere expediency; and it is expected that they will have to pay dearly for the lesson.

The Chinese have demanded the intervention of the American Consul in order to prevent any further assistance being given by Americans to the Japanese, and the Consul has ordered United States citizens to withdraw from the Expedition, though it may be greatly doubted whether this order will be obeyed, although forfeiture of the protection of the American Government is the penalty of disobedience.

The negotiations for the admission of foreigners into the interior have advanced considerably during the past month, and there is reason to hope that arrangements to this effect will shortly be arrived at with the representatives of the Treaty Powers upon a satisfactory basis.

An entertainment was given on the 3rd June by Hatakeyama, chief director of the Kai-sei-gakko, or Imperial College, to the foreigners connected with the educational department.

The quantity of tea shipped hitherto this season and now awaiting shipment, largely exceeds the production of any former season to the same date. The promise of the crop, both in regard to quantity and quality, is reported to be excellent.

A return cricket match between the "Services" and the "Civilians" was played on the 11th inst. The "Services" won in the first innings by four runs.

NAGASAKI.

Our advices extend to the 12th June. The P. and O. mail from London April 17 arrived out on the 4th June. The following summary of news is from the Rising Sun, under which title the Nagasaki Express will appear for the future:—

The expedition sent by the Japanese has commenced work in downright earnest. The troops have been landed, and some fighting has taken place. Captain Smith, who navigated the steamer Meiku-maru to Formosa, has returned, and he says that the natives commenced the fighting by shooting a Japanese soldier. From his account it appears that a number of the Japanese were strolling inland a short distance, when they observed three men whom they took to be Chinese. The men beckoned to them, so three left their comrades, and went for the purpose of ascertaining what the presumed Chinamen wanted. On arriving close the natives picked up some old matchlocks, and fired at them, shooting one man through the body, killing him on the spot. The ear of another was shot off by a square bullet or slug, so he had a very narrow escape of his life. The other made the best use of his legs and joined his countrymen, who were but a very short distance off. As soon as the Japanese soldier fell the Formosans rushed forward and severed his head from his body in an instant, and then retreated with it. The whole affair was executed so suddenly and took the Japanese so by surprise that the natives got away without the least difficulty. A day or so afterwards the Japanese attacked a village about two or three miles from the shore and killed all the male natives they came across, but spared the women and children, which is a piece of humanity that deserves to be recognised, for the horrors of war are enhanced a hundred fold by the slaughter of helpless women and children. The lamentations of the women for the loss of their husbands, fathers, and brothers are represented to have been pitiable in the extreme. Capt. Smith states that when he left there were two Japanese men-of-war in the bay and the British gun-vessel Hornet, and also a Chinese man-of-war. The Chinese Admiral has left word with the representatives of his country to assist the Japanese as much as possible; and the Japanese themselves are arming the Chinese with weapons taken from the natives, such as old matchlocks, bows and arrows, spears, long knives fixed on the end of long poles, &c.

The Formosans are described as being slim built men, resembling the Chinese in appearance, and their heads are adorned with long tails. They are reported to have very extensive cities in the interior, some walled in; and Captain Smith thinks that the Japanese will proceed inland and destroy all the towns and cities they come across. With regard to the Chinese he says they seem to be principally bent upon making dollars, as they charge most extortionate prices for the use of their boats—Chinamen all over.

The following letter has been sent to us by a correspondent:—

According to promise I send you a few lines relative to the state of affairs here. I left Nagasaki on the 17th of May in the s.s. Takasago-maru (late Delta), which vessel also conveyed General Saigo. On the morning of the 22nd the Takasago-maru arrived at Sailio, which is situated on the southern part of Formosa, after a pleasant and safe passage of four-and-a-half days. When we arrived at Sailio Bay we found there H.I.J.M.'s corvette Nissin-kan, steamers Meiko-maru, Yuko-maru, Nikuni-maru, and also an English gunboat. About 8 A.M. on the same day the Japanese gunboat Mo-sun-kan arrived from Amoy; and at ten o'clock a Chinese frigate and gunboat came in from Taiwan-fu, and half-an-hour afterwards the steamer Sailo-maru (late Shaftesbury) put in an appearance. The country appears to be fertile and of rather a sandy nature; very little is cultivated. The villages close to the shore consist of some 400 or 500 houses, and the natives do not appear to be so very savage and fierce; in fact, they are perfectly willing to work for us for payment. The day before we arrived, 21st, the wild tribes from the mountains, who are very fierce and savage, fired upon and killed one of our spies. This was the beginning of hostilities. On the 22nd our troops marched over the mountains a distance of about two Japanese miles, and attacked the savages, killing a large number and burning their houses, after which they retired, taking with them as trophies a quantity of fire-arms, bows and arrows, spears, &c. The killed and wounded on our side were seven.

The Cadmus has arrived here from Shanghai in a very leaky condition, one of the pumps having to be kept going continually. The reason of the leak was on account of the wood round the brine pipe being decayed. Upon her arrival salutes were exchanged with the Government Fort. She is bound for Yokohama, and will proceed home from that port. The Admiral, Sir F. A. Shadwell, will transfer himself and suite on board of the Iron Duke.

Sir F. A. Shadwell, the British Admiral, has paid the Seamen's Club a visit, and expressed his satisfaction of the arrangements. He remarked that such institutions should be supported, and as soon as he returned in the Iron Duke he would not only subscribe but would also get up a subscription list, which he was prevented from doing at once on account of his early departure. He made minute enquiries as to the state of the funds, and the principles upon which the Club is to be conducted. And while approving of the latter expressed a hope that the funds would soon be increased.

A steam tug has been launched from the yard of Messrs. J. F. Mitchell and Co., at Namenohira. She is called the Border Chief.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 14th June; the P. and O. mail from London May 1 arrived out on the 10th June. The following summary of news is from the North China Herald:—

A special meeting of ratepayers has been held, to discuss certain proposals that could not be conveniently brought up at the annual meeting held last month. In the first place, the desirability of revising the Land Regulations was admitted; and Messrs. Iveson, Keswick, Little, Kingsmill, Paterson, Seligmann, Webb, Forbes, and Heyden were appointed by the Chairman a committee for the purpose. The two resolutions brought forward by Mr. Carter against proxy voting were carried, the first without division, the second by a majority of two to one. The two were indeed nearly alternative; the second completely meets the case, but the first was necessary in case the second had been rejected, though the acceptance of the second was a natural consequence of the first. As it is, the ratepayers have now expressed a clear opinion adverse to the admission at public meetings of proxies of ratepayers present in Shanghai, and have asked the insertion of a short phrase in the Land Regulations defining this principle. Most people hold that these already express the intention; but the confusion of arrangement and indistinctness of expression in the regulations caused doubt and led to a reference to the Treaty Consuls, who, in face of a doubt, preferred adhering to the rule in the Old Regulations which allowed proxies. We are glad to think that the vote will terminate the practice. The evil of proxy voting is, we think, generally admitted. Ratepayers absent from Shanghai, whether householders or property-owners, have a right to be represented. Men are often called away on business to England, to an outport, or to Hong Kong, while their interest in the place remains; but that meetings should be liable to be swayed by a few individuals holding a mass of proxies for ratepayers who are present in the Settlement but will not strain a point to attend is an undoubted evil. The new Regulation may be hard on a few who take an interest and really cannot attend; but their case is more than counterbalanced by that of the many who could attend but will not. However, the point has been too often argued in our columns to need repetition.

A vote in favour of the amalgamation of the Settlements was carried without discussion; it being felt that the matter was one which must be eventually decided by diplomacy, and that the function of the meeting was only to raise the question.—The proposed tax on ponies, carriages, and dogs was rejected—chiefly through the vote of one ratepayer holding sixty proxies. We regret that ponies and carriages should remain exempt for another term, as we think the tax on them is a most fair one; but the dog tax is better omitted; it would have involved a degree of annoyance and trouble incommensurate with the small financial results.—The last resolution brought forward required a long array of statistical information regarding the relative expenditure on various parts of the Settlement. The object is to show that the Chinese quarters have contributed a proportion of revenue fair in relation to the outlay upon them. We doubt whether the desired end will be very clearly attained, for figures can be made to prove nearly anything if cleverly manipulated. The statistics will however be interesting, and will probably furnish rich food for debate hereafter.

The report of the French Municipal Council for the year 1873-4 does not record much useful work. What could be expected, when we remember that there have been six changes of Council within that time? Despite, however, and in some degree owing to, these changes, the financial result of the year is most satisfactory. The changes of Government did not disturb the routine of administration; while they did prevent attention to public works, and thereby check expenditure. The revenue has yielded Tls. 84,383, besides Tls. 16,148 in hand at the beginning of the year. The expenditure has only amounted to Tls. 68,904, leaving in hand a surplus of Tls. 34,627.—The revenue for 1874-5 is estimated at Tls. 81,600, which will be further swollen by the above balance. A heavy outlay on public works will raise the expenditure to Tls. 113,205, which will still leave a surplus on the 31st March, 1875, of Tls 3,022.

A heavy storm swept over Shanghai on the 7th June. Beginning from the north it travelled round the compass, the greatest strength of the gale being from the south. The rain fell in a perfect deluge, with large hailstones, the whole driven with such force by the wind as to constitute a blinding sheet of spray, through which objects could not be seen at twenty yards distance. The squall was attended with fatal consequences on the river, where a yacht was upset and two men drowned. The streets were half-flooded; and in the country a good many young cotton plants were washed bodily out of the ground, and deposited in the furrows. Some trees were blown down, and leaves and sprigs were torn off and whirled frantically into space. In a couple of hours the air was clear again, and much cooler than before the outburst, but the weather did not at once become settled, as occasional peals of thunder, threats of further rain, and gusts of wind testified. About ten P.M. the thunder resumed, and very heavy rain again fell. The weather cleared next morning, but very heavy rain again fell in the evening. It has since been cooler.

We are informed that the subscription to the Chinese reading room project, from foreigners alone, has reached Tls. 950.

The A.D.C. have given their last performance for the season. The evening was fortunately cool for the time of the year, and there was a good house. The last piece, the burlesque of "Villikins and his Dinah," bristled with local hits, which kept the audience in a roar of laughter.

The Leven returned on the 8th June from the Sedan wreck, having failed in the salvage expedition she was sent on. We are told that she brings as the result of her trip only a sheet or two of iron, weighing altogether, perhaps, 100lbs. She sailed, as it will be remembered, on the 22nd April, arriving at Sand Island, in lat. 25.19 N. and long. 119.42 E., on the 5th. The diver, Mr. Roberts, took advantage of every opportunity to go below, but an almost unceasing heavy sea appears to have proved too great an impediment to the diving operations. The Leven accordingly left the island on the 3rd June for Pagoda Anchorage, and, after coaling, started for Shanghai, arriving at Woosung on the 7th. She reports having experienced a severe squall outside. The Sedan was found to be in from sixteen to twenty fathoms of water, and the want of success on this occasion will likely lead to the abandoning of the enterprise for the recovery of the treasure and opium she contains.

Some time since we noticed the loss of a barque near the Lamocks, off the Boat Rocks, which was supposed to be the Scotland, bound from Shanghai to Swatow. An attempt was made by the United States Consul at Swatow to ascertain beyond doubt the identity of the vessel, but the depth of the water in which she had sunk, and the prevalence of bad weather, rendered this extremely difficult, if not impossible. We understand, however, that while a junk was making a trip lately to the Lamocks Lighthouse with stores, the weather being fine, Mr. Hammond, the Commissioner of Customs at Swatow, directed that it should visit the wreck, and endeavour to get some information about it. It was found to be that of a large barque, sunk in twelve fathoms of water, about 1¾ miles to the S.W. of the Boat Rocks. The foretopsail was set, and sheeted home. The foretopmast was found to be new, the crosstrees painted white and the iron bands red. These particulars lead to the belief that the unfortunate vessel is certainly the Scotland, which had just been overhauled before she left Shanghai by Messrs. Farnham and Co. Chinese were commencing to wreck when the Customs boat left, the weather being favourable. The Scotland was an American barque of 441 tons, commanded by Capt. Glidden, and manned by a crew shipped at Puget Sound. As nothing has been heard of her officers or crew, it is only too probable that they went down with the ship.

Rear-Admiral Pennock, U.S. Navy, who has been transferred from the North Pacific to the Asiatic Station, arrived at Yokohama by last mail, to take up his command. Rear-Admiral John G. Almy has been ordered to the North Pacific.

We hear that Mr. Joseph Haas, of the Austrian Consulate, has received the decoration of the Imperial Gold Cross of Germany, in recognition of services rendered to the German Consulate at Shanghai last year, during the absence, through illness, of Mr. K. Himly.

The trial of the Chemeh rioters was brought to a conclusion at Chefoo on the 3rd June, when six of the rioters and the Tipaos of Kwo-poo and Hwa-yen were sentenced to various degrees of flogging; the latter also to be degraded from office. Those who had possession of Mr. Corbett's property to be imprisoned until the amount (Tls. 375) is made good, the Taoutai guaranteeing payment. All the accused are further to enter into a bond for Mr. Corbett's safety while he remains in Chemeh. The Taoutai delivered a sharp and good lecture to the accused in passing sentence, and has drawn up a proclamation on the whole question. The punishments were inflicted at noon on the 4th June. The whole affair is considered to have been satisfactorily adjusted.

We have received the first number of a publication just revived, and which we are glad to welcome. The Chinese Recorder and Missionary Journal, when published at Foochow, used to contain much interesting matter. It has been in abeyance for a long time, and is now revived and re-issued from the Mission Press, Shanghai, and we doubt not will sustain its old position.

The Taoutai paid a visit to the Japanese Consul on the 6th June, with the object of formally introducing the Mandarin who has gone to Foochow as Imperial Commissioner in connection with the Formosan difficulty.

The C.M.S.N. Company have just added the Hochung and Aden to their Yangtsze fleet, which includes, besides, the Yung-ning, Tungting, and Hanyang. The company are said to have made a very favourable contract with Shensi tea-merchants for the conveyance of their purchases to the north.

The American schooner Almatia, which has recently changed owners, at the price of $12,000, has sailed for Newchwang, under command of Captain Lowell, late of the steamer Manchu.

A Newchwang correspondent writes on the 6th June:—

A Southern piratical junk, mounting two brass guns, has been captured in the Gulf and brought in here by the steam gunboat Mei-yuen, one of the Foochow vessels. She has been taking the treasure and valuables out of a large number of native craft, and her being caught is a matter of great congratulation here. Eleven of the crew were executed on the river side three days ago. The troops have had a successful action with a large band of banditti not more than thirty miles from the port. It was a surprise, brought about by the free use of money on the part of the authorities. Some twenty or more prisoners were taken, and have been beheaded at various towns around. Seven heads now decorate our east gate, one being that of the son of a leader amongst the Mahomedans.

The weather is dreadful, very heavy storms of rain and wind daily. The new buildings going up for several of our residents will, I fear, suffer severely.

We take the following from the Shanghai Courier:—

Inspector Grimes, of the Hong Kong police force, arrived on the 6th June, to demand the rendition of Walter Jackson, the man recently taken out of the steamship Nanking, on the charge of piracy. At the time the inspector left Hong Kong it was not known that the prisoner had claimed the protection of the United States Consul, and had consequently been handed over to Mr. Seward, the United States Consul-General, under whose control he now remains. Inspector Grimes not having the requisite papers to enable him to deal with these altered circumstances, the matter will have to stand over until their receipt from Hong Kong. They have, we understand, been telegraphed for.

A new Chinese newspaper, which is, we believe, to represent the views of the Cantonese in Shanghai, is to be published on the 16th June. They have secured very commodious and centrally situated premises, their office being at the west corner of the Kiangse-road, at its junction with the Nanking-road. It is understood they have engaged the services of many eminent persons among the literati, to provide its leading articles, and in all probability will put the Shun-pau on its mettle. Whatever we may think of the circumstances to which this new scheme owes its origin, there are, we think, few facts that look so promising for China as the existence in Shanghai of two Chinese newspapers, opposed to each other, and yet both having every appearance and promise of being ably conducted and well supported.

On the 7th June we were visited with a remarkable storm, which suddenly overcasting a bright and hot day lowered the temperature rapidly. The wind began to blow from the north, but rapidly veered round the whole range of the compass, till in less than an hour it came back to north again, when it subsided as rapidly as it had risen. Meanwhile, thunder, lightning, rain in torrents, and hail, made the elements of a terrible storm, the effects of which have been most disastrous in the gardens and fields. During the cyclone, short as it was, a number of casualties occurred. The saddest is that of the cutter-rigged yacht Annie, which was just starting on a sail down river with Mr. Penning (ship-keeper of the tug Fairy) and the carpenter of the Thermopylæ on board, who were in the act of hoisting the sail, when the blast struck her, throwing her on her beam ends; on which she filled and sank immediately. Mr. Braysher, Deputy Harbour Master, saw the occurrence, and hastened to the spot, not more than two hundred yards from his hulk, but he could see nothing of the ill-fated men. The end of the long boom of the Annie was visible at the surface, to which a Chinese boat was launched to serve as a beacon, and to show a light during the night. Next morning the professional diver from the Leven went down and searched for an hour, but could find no trace of the bodies. The Annie was towed to Lindsay's Wharf, and beached on the mud; she belongs to Mr. Gilbert, engineer. Mr. Penning's body was recovered on the 11th June, but that of the carpenter has not yet been found. A Chinese boat was capsized near the Pagoda, and one Chinaman drowned. A yacht between this and Woosung was capsized and the two foreigners who were in swum to the shore in safety. A Chinese house in Hongkew had its roof torn off by lightning, but no one was hurt. A cabstand, stables, &c., near the Sailors' Home, were blown bodily away.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 20th June; the French mail from London May 8 was received on the 14th June.

We take the following items of news from the China Mail:—

There seems to be some chance at last of a measure we have in past times very strongly advocated being carried out. This is the prolongation of the Praya from its present terminus at the military landing place till it meets the Praya East, just beyond the Ordnance Wharf. The scheme has, if we are rightly informed, already passed the stage of "consideration," and bids fair before long to be placed in the efficient hands of Mr. Price for practical fulfilment. We believe that the sea wall at the back of the military hospital is to be retained and utilised, the new road being constructed inside it. We need not say a word in favour of a project which has for years been advocated by the local government, the public, and the press, and which official obstruction at home has alone prevented from being carried out. If, as we believe, the intelligence we give be true, we may heartily congratulate the colony upon at last getting a chance of seeing the worst portion of Queen's-road on the drive eastward disused. Apropos of this matter, we understand that it is proposed to fill in Causeway Bay just beyond the distillery, the present ancle-endangering, and at high water impassable, causeway being replaced by a good substantial road. This matter is apropos of the other, inasmuch as rumours assert that in return for the departmental concessions regarding the new piece of Praya a quid pro quo will be given from the new ground to be made at Causeway Bay. If this be the case nobody will have any reason to grumble, and the public, whether residing in the centre or the east-end of the town, will be decided gainers. H.E. the Governor could scarcely initiate, and Mr. Price could hardly undertake, any work more thoroughly popular than that which it is said is about to be commenced.

The Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce have applied to the local Government for the report sent in by the recent commission, with reference to the effect of the Chinese cruisers upon the trade of the port. The application has, however, been refused, but the Government offer to forward to the Colonial-office any memorial which the Chamber may send in.

The colony has sustained a severe loss in the death of Mr. Douglas, who has been for over twelve years Governor of the gaol. Mr. Douglas was generally respected as an able and energetic public servant, and was about two years ago made a justice of the peace, in consideration of the valuable aid he had at times rendered to the Government.

A good deal of talk has very naturally been caused by the extraordinary report of the Indo-Chinese Sugar Company, and the debate thereon at the meeting held on the 15th. Opinion outside the company seems to be that it had better wind up. Shareholders, on the other hand, cling to the slightest hope of retrieving their position, and the only question before them at this moment is whether under the conditions disclosed by the balance sheet there is what an ordinary business man would call "reasonable hope" of manufacturing sugar in future at remunerative rates, and in such quantities as to convert past loss into future profit. This being the issue, its settlement would seem to us a tolerably easy matter.

We have received from Mr. James Porter,* formerly Commissioner of Chinese Customs at Amoy, but now a "a resident of Albemarle Country in the State of Virginia, United States," a copy of a pamphlet which he has addressed to the Senate Committee of that State on the subject of immigration—not the immigration which attracts most notice from journals published in China. On the contrary, Mr. Porter is apparently anxious only to see a stream of "retiring officers of Her Majesty's military and civil services in England, Scotland, France, Germany, Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay," induced to flow towards the teeming plains (or mountains,—we are not quite sure which, as the pamphlet contains no geographical information) of "Ole Virginny." Regarding this subject, however, we cannot expect readers in China to feel a very deep interest.

FORMOSA EXPEDITION.

We learn from semi-official native sources that the Chinese Government has finally decided to give the Japanese "notice to quit" Formosa, Shum-pao Ching the Superintendent of the Foochow Arsenal having been appointed high commissioner to settle the question with the Japanese. We understand that his instructions are to first of all adopt peaceful negotiations to get them to leave, and those failing to threaten a resort to arms. In view of such a contingency being possible, Shum is appointed Commander-in-Chief also. The Chinese officials appear to feel very strongly on the subject. They highly object to the action taken by Japan, and—to use a well-known expression—are "spoiling for a fight." Large purchases of guns and ammunition are being made in this colony, and holders of "warlike" stock ought to be doing a good business. The Chinese, by the way, assert that the Japanese before starting for Formosa were warned to desist.

The correspondent of the China Mail writes:—

Hitherto, whenever a foreigner has desired to pay a visit to the savages, he has found it an exceedingly difficult and troublesome matter to accomplish. First of all, guides have had to be secured from amongst the Chinese who can speak their dialect. Then, at various points in the savage territory halts had to be called, and signals had to be exchanged before the party were allowed to proceed. Then, finally, a large party having taken them under their protection, escorted them to the particular village to which they belonged. Now it is hardly conceivable that knowing what a large force had been landed for the express purpose of destroying them, the savages should allow small isolated parties to go about, and actually to penetrate into their villages, before they were stopped. It seems to me, then, that the village must have been a Chinese one, and the heads that were taken off must have once belonged to the liege subjects of the Emperor. That this may be so is quite possible, if we take into consideration the position of affairs in the neighbourhood of the camp. For reasons that are best known to the Chinese in authority there, the Japanese seem to have been entrusted with discretionary powers to exercise their discipline upon all that in any way trouble them. It is said that complaints were made some time ago by the Japanese that the Chinese in the neighbourhood were molesting then, in some way or other, and requested that the authorities should come and forbid them. They were told, in reply, that they were quite at liberty to take the fellows in hand themselves, and punish them as they liked.

While, however, measures are being taken at Canton to check the expedition, news comes from Formosa that serious fighting has taken place between the Japanese and the Aboriginal tribes. So far the Chinese troops have not appeared upon the scene of action, and, as the Foochow Herald observes, the attitude of the Chinese Government hitherto has certainly not been calculated to inspire foreign nations with any great degree of respect for the empire. The momentary calm will, however, be succeeded by vigorous action if there be any truth in Chinese gossip. As a confirmation of the fact that the Chinese intend to wake up shortly, we may note that the Peking authorities are said to have formally notified Mr. Wade that the Formosa expedition was undertaken without their knowledge or consent.

The following notification dated June 6th, 1874, has been issued by the U.S. Consul at Amoy :—

Whereas, the Chinese authorities of the Foh-kien Province have informed me that a Japanese armed force has invaded the Island of Formosa ; that that island is a part of the Chinese Empire, and have requested me to prevent American citizens from taking part in the enterprise ; also, that they have demanded of the Japanese forces its immediate evacuation ; and

Whereas, citizens of the United States in China are under the protection, and subject to the jurisdiction and laws of their own country,

Now, therefore, I, the undersigned Consul, charged with the care of American interests and the execution of the laws of the United States and treaty obligations with China in the Island of Formosa, hereby notify and command all citizens of the United States to at once withdraw and hereafter abstain from all enterprises unfriendly to the Chinese Government, and to avoid all acts which are inconsistent with the said laws and treaty obligations.

Any citizen of the United States who shall refuse to comply with, or offend against the provisions of this notification, shall forfeit the protection of the American Government.

J. J. HENDERSON, United States Consul.

A gloom has been cast over Macao by the unexpected death of Captain A. Tassara, the Governor of Taipa and Colovan. He has been buried, and many sorrowing friends, among whom we remarked the principal Chinese of Taipa, accompanied his remains to their last abode. Unfortunately it is not in the spirit of Portuguese colonial administration that many of the stamp of this highly-esteemed officer be sent to these far away places, and it is doubtful if the villages of Taipa and Colovan will for a long time be as contented and happy as before.

In the case of Espantoso v. Ehlers, $5,000 claim for commission on the sale of the steamer Fatchoi, tried before Mr. Justice Snowden and a special jury, in the Supreme Court, the following is the result :—

Mr. Hayllar, in opening, stated that plaintiff was a commission broker, doing business in the Colony, and defendant was a merchant here also. The facts of the case were simple, and he did not think it would be necessary to dispute that the steamer was sold by the plaintiff, the dispute was on the brokerage due. A statement of the transactions between the plaintiff and defendant, as he understood it, was then made, and the plaintiff called.

Plaintiff sworn : I have known defendant since 1872. The first thing I did for him was to charter the steamer Fatchoi. I chartered her for a Spaniard ; the charter party was signed ; I received a commission of five per cent. from Mr. Ehlers for the same ; I never bought anything for him, and I generally allowed him five per cent. Mr. Denegri is a merchant in Lima, Peru. The defendant requested me to sell the steamer for him. He said she was mortgaged to a bank here for $90,000 and he had to pay heavy interest on her. I spoke to my friend and offered her for sale to him. The limits were fixed by Mr. Ehlers at $129,600. He agreed to purchase her on condition of receiving her credits first to enable him to pay for her. Mr. Denegri was introduced by me to Mr. Ehlers in the latter's office. He waited some time for his credits, when Mr. Ehlers set a certain number of days in which she should be turned over, on a penalty of $30,000. A contract to that effect was signed. There was another conditional agreement signed at the Spanish Consulate in Macao. The agreement was signed in Hong Kong. The defendant promised verbally to pay me five per cent. commission as usual. Nothing was said about a penalty. Defendant left the colony about the middle of the year 1873. I did not send him any notes, it not being my custom to send notes. I considered that he owed me money. I did not owe him any money ; I had a coal contract at the time. It was concerning the purchase of some coals ; I lost $6,000 or more by the same. I paid Ehler 2½ or 5 per cent. at the time. I do not recollect which. Defendant brought an action against me for the amount $4,000, which I paid. When the defendant left he gave me to understand that he was coming back. I have never been paid any commission on the present transaction.

By Mr. Kingsmill : The Fatchoi was twice chartered. The first time she went to England and returned, but the second fell through. I do not know her owners. The contract was drawn up by Mr. Ehlers. I think he read it over. I firmly believe that I have paid Mr. Ehlers 5 per cent. on transactions he has done for me, not always. I paid him 2½ per cent. commission on the purchase of the coals. The account produced shows that I paid him 2½ per cent. In May last Mr. Ehlers negotiated two loans for me and charged me 5 per cent. commission and 1 per cent. interest. I am sure it was not 3½ per cent. altogether, but more. I do not remember his negotiating a loan for me in September, 1872. Mr. Ehlers first spoke to me about the sale of the steamer in the early part of the year 1873. It may have been in April. When the second charter fell through I made no proposition to Ehlers to charter the steamer with him and another to carry coolies to Peru. There was no mention as far as I can remember concerning a charter of the steamer to carry coolies. There may and may not have been such a suggestion. The introduction of Mr. Denegri to Mr. Ehlers by me was made for the purpose of bringing the proposed buyer and defendant together.

After the examination of other witnesses the case was given to the jury, who returned a unanimous verdict in favour of the plaintiff.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 28th June ; the French mail from London May 22 was received on the 22nd June, and the following P. and O. mail of May 29 on the 27th June. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times :—

His Excellency the Governor is still absent on his visit to Penang, but will probably leave on his way back to Singapore about the middle of next week. We presume after his return the Legislative Council will again resume its sittings. Among the subjects to be brought before it, is a Bill for regulating the immigration of, and affording protection to, native labourers from British India. This Bill is a result of complaints made by the Madras Emigration agents, and of the Province Wellesley coolie scandals brought to light some months ago. No doubt some measure is necessary for the protection of the coolies from fraud and oppression after their arrival in the colony ; we have not yet had an opportunity of carefully examining the Bill, but it is drawn up with a view to protect both labourers and employers, and on this ground ought to prove a just and useful law.

The E. and A. Mail Steamship Company are somewhat unfortunate. First, their steamship Sunfoo was totally lost near Hong Kong ; and we now learn that their chartered steamer Flintshire has grounded in entering Townsville, Northern Queensland. The first telegram led to the inference that the steamer was wrecked, but later advices (26th June) state that she had been beached for temporary repairs, and would probably be despatched within her contract time. A serious shipping disaster has also occurred here, in the Tanjong Pagar Dock, the ship England having gone over on her side in the dock. The accident was due to a leak in the vessel during the temporary flooding of the dock, and her ballast being trimmed to one side, the water in the hold rushed to that side, causing her to heel over and fill. During the efforts made to right her, the tackles secured to the masts parted, and the vessel fell over on her broadside ; it is impossible as yet to ascertain the extent of damage done to the ship, but it is feared it will be very serious.

The arrivals via the Suez Canal have been the Amboto, from London, and Olympia from Hamburg on the 17th, Avenir from London on the 21st, and Glenroy from London, and Ajax from Liverpool, on the 24th. The only departures have been the steamers Cawdor Castle on the 16th, and the Gordon Castle on the 21st, for London, and Russia on the 23rd for Odessa, from Hankow ; and the Glenearn on the 22nd, and Braemar Castle on the 24th, from Foochow, for London—all with tea cargoes.

Advices have been received by the Colonial Secretary from Penang stating that the Attorney-General, accompanied by Mr. Swettenham, had returned from an official visit to Perak, where they were well received, all the chiefs looking forward with satisfaction to the inauguration of the new arrangements.

The Messageries Maritimes steamer Tanais, Capt. Reyners, which arrived from Marseilles, left for Hong Kong. This vessel has been sent out to fill the place of the ill-fated Nil on the Hong Kong and Yokohama route. We understand that the Messageries Company's steamer Peluse is also expected here, to take the place of the Neva on the Batavia line ; the latter vessel, which is about twenty-one years old, going to Saigon, to the Company's lifting dock there, for general repair and to get in new boilers.

Commenting on the speech of Lord Stanley, on Perak and Laroot, the Straits Times has the following :—In accusing this Colony of a desire to annex the territories of the native chiefs, he has cast upon us a most undeserved imputation.. All that has been done with respect to Perak [and Laroot has been to endeavour to effect a reconciliation between contending parties, whose quarrels had thrown those countries into anarchy, seriously crippled the trade and endangered the peace of Penang, and encouraged aggravated piratical depredations in the immediate neighbourhood of that settlement, which even the presence of Her Majesty's ships failed to prevent.

As pointed out by Earls Carnarvon and Kimberley, the new treaty with Perak was strictly in accordance with the desires of the chiefs themselves ; it is, in fact, but an authoritative confirmation of the views of previous rulers of the country. The assurance given by the noble Earls is emphatically corroborated by the results of the visit of the Hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Braddell), with Mr. Swettenham, who have just returned to Penang from Perak, where they were favourably received, and found the chiefs looking forward with satisfaction to the inauguration of the new state of affairs. In reply to the statements of Lord Stanley, regarding the dealings with Salangore, we have only to say that all that was done was in strict accordance with the existing treaty ; and considering that the Sultan's own sons were believed to have been implicated in the crime of the prisoners who were delivered up to the Sultan by this Government for trial, it will be apparent that Sir Andrew Clarke could not have done less than to demand the fulfilment by him of a treaty which has been faithfully observed on our part.

PENANG.

The present mail's advices extend to the 30th June; the P. and O. mail from London 29th May arrived out on the 25th June. The following is from the Penang Gazette:—

As the Puisne Judges of Singapore and Penang objected to being burdened with the trial of cases up to $10, as required by the Courts Bill Amendment Ordinance, the Colonial Government have settled their objection by increasing their salaries by £300 and £160 per annum respectively.

The necessity for the appointment of a Public Prosecutor for Penang is becoming daily more apparent, and it is to be hoped that Sir Andrew Clarke will not be misled into sanctioning the amalgamation of that office with the Solicitor Generalship.

It is rumoured that Mr. Braddell, the Attorney General, is to undertake the duties of Secretary to Government in the Political Department, in addition to those performed by him at present.

We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Koh Teng Choon, who for upwards of thirty-eight years was Chinese interpreter in the Supreme Court here.

The Government have received official information that cholera has ceased its ravages in Batavia. Clean bills of health are now granted to all vessels leaving that port.

A rifle match took on the 25th June between six officers of Her Majesty's ship Charybdis and six members of the Penang Rifle Club, the latter winning by forty-six points.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

Yokohama.—As usual at the season of this year the market had continued very quiet. In Cotton Yarn the business done had been small, and rates had further declined: the relative quantity of 28 to 32 sold had, however, been rather larger than usual. There had been more doing in Grey Shirtings, chiefly 9 lbs., at the low rates ruling. Velvets had attracted some attention, but the demand for Turkey Reds appeared to have been satisfied. In Woollens and Mixtures generally the stagnation continued. No improvement is reported in the market for Metals.

Hiogo-Osaka.—The import trade was still in an unsatisfactory position, and although at closing some articles were enquired for, a decline in value had generally been established. Cottons.—Yarns: The demand for good chops had improved, although no sensible advance was quoted. Grey Shirtings were entirely neglected for some days, and a decline took place, which, although at the close a better feeling existed, had not yet been recovered. The demand for Turkey Red Cambrics had fallen off, and rates were lower. Victoria Lawns were still saleable at a slight concession. T-Cloths had found buyers to a small extent. Worsteds and Woollens.—Black Orleans continued saleable at somewhat weaker rates. The demand for Mousselines was less active, and former quotations were with difficulty maintained. Lastings were in moderate demand. Nail Rods were saleable at former rates.

Hankow.—During the first half of the fortnight under notice, there continued to be a fairly active demand for Cotton Piece Goods, especially Grey Shirtings, but towards the close it had somewhat subsided, and in some instances a decline had taken place. There had not been much of interest passing in other goods.

Shanghai.—There had been little or no improvement in the general position of Piece Goods. Advices from the interior and outports, coupled with dear money among the natives, had not encouraged the dealers to operate beyond their immediate orders, consequently the demand had been very limited. A few Plain Cottons had been in request at better rates, but as a rule the market had been quiet in the extreme.

Foochow.—The following sales had been made, viz.:—650 pieces 8¼lbs. Grey Shirtings, $2.53 to 2.72½ per piece; 800 pieces 7lbs. T-Cloth, $1.85 per piece; 500 pieces 6lbs. T-Cloth, $1.65 per piece 1,800 pigs Lead, $8 to 8.25 per picul.

Hong Kong.—The market for Piece Goods and Yarn remained in much the same position as last reported, viz., quiet, with weakening prices for most articles.

Canton.—Lead was being sold in retail parcels at last quoted rates. Common brands were quoted $7.70, and W. B. $7.75 to 7.80 per picul. Quicksilver was quoted $189 to 190 per picul.

Batavia.—The market for Cotton manufactures had been extremely quiet. There had been rather large arrivals of Dutch staples, and requirements appeared to be almost satisfied; late unseasonable rains had retarded a revival of general demand, and values had a drooping tendency, though there was little material change in quotations.

Singapore.—There had been a downward tendency in rates for most descriptions of Grey Goods; the lower prices accepted by holders had caused dealers to buy more freely; a moderate business had been done; the market closed quiet and weak. There had been no change in dyed or printed Cottons, Woollens, or Metals.

Penang.—There had continued to be a moderate enquiry during the fortnight, and a fair business had been done at previous quotations.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

Yokohama.—Business had continued on an extensive scale, and the easier tendency recently reported had entirely disappeared. Arrivals were coming forward in quantity, and began to show a marked falling off. Settlements since June 4 had amounted to 9,500 piculs, consisting chiefly of medium to fine grades, the former of which were relatively dearer than the better classes. Total settlements from May 1 to date estimated about 21,000 piculs. Heavy supplies of the lower grades were looked for towards the close of July, and prospects of a large second crop were considered as very favourable. The P. M. steamer Alaska on June 6 took for New York 201,938 lbs., for San Francisco 31,322 lbs., and for other ports 49,723 lbs.

Hiogo-Osaka.—After the departure of the Pacific Mail steamer on May 18, arrivals began to come forward more fully, and there was a slight reduction in price while buying for the China Trans-Pacific steamer Vancouver was going on. Purchases for that steamer being over, a sudden drop in prices of fully $5 per picul took place, and the market had since gradually but surely grown weaker. The Teas on offer were much better in quality than at first, though the finest grades had been very scarce. Settlements estimated at 9,500 piculs, and Stocks at 700 piculs. Shipments to Yokohama 1,674 boxes for the month.

Hankow.—Messrs. Evans Pugh and Co.'s Circular, dated June 9, says:—During the fortnight that has elapsed since we issued our report on the 26th ultimo a large business has been transacted, settlements of about 122,000 chests of Oopack and Oonahm teas, and 68,000 half-chests of Ningchows having been reported. Large as these operations may appear they are somewhat less than usual of late years at this period. Since the date of our last report a considerable amount of business has been done from day to day, at prices which have in most cases shown a decline. Ningchows, for which most extreme rates were paid at the opening of the market, have declined since then Tls. 6 to 8 per picul. Oopacks, especially the lower qualities, are Tls. 3 to 4 lower, so are Oonahms. The first settlements of Oonfas were made at Tls. 36½ per picul, for by no means choice chops. Since equally good teas have been bought at Tls. 30, and the lower classes are relatively cheaper. These teas are not of very good quality, being mixed in leaf; they are however strong and useful. Prices may now be considered on the whole to be about the same as they were at this date last season, while the average quality of the crop is better than it then was. From the figures given below it will be noticed that the total Export to date is much on a par with what it was last year, the deficit from the Oopack and Oonahm districts being made up for by the excess of Kew-kiang Teas Total shipment to London 14,664,140 lbs., against 11,523,813 lbs. last year; per steamer Russia for Odessa 2,200,682 lbs., against 2,012,757 lbs. last year; shipments to Shanghai 3,463,868 lbs., against 6,983,254 lbs. last year. Making total export to date 20,328,690 lbs., against 20,518,824 lbs. last year. The total export includes re-export of 4,969,438 lbs. of Kew-kiang teas, against 3,340,330 lbs. last season.

Kiukiang.—Black Teas: About 1,800 half-chests had been settled here at Tls. 38 for Ningchows and Tls. 34 for Kiukiang packed. Total arrivals, 75,269 chests. Stock, 3,000 chests.

Shanghai.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer and Co.'s Report says:—Black Tea: The business of the season was opened on the 7th instant by the settlement of two chops Hohows at Tls. 25.2.5. Oonams have realised Tls. 18.0.0 to 23.0.0, Hohows Tls. 22.5.0 to 26.5.0, Oanfas Tls. 25.2.5 to 28.5.0, and Ningchows Tls. 31.0.0 to 37.0.0, one parcel of very choice bringing Tls. 47.0.0 per picul. Since the opening of the market to time of writing but little has been done. Buyers show great disinclination to operate at rates asked by teamen, total settlements to date being only 950 chests and 10,100 half-chests, against 3,500 chests and 18,360 half-chests for the same number of days last year. The Oonam Oopack, and Oanfar Teas offering here are of common to medium quality, all the fine chops from these provinces having been secured in Hankow. Of Ningchows there are a few fine parcels on offer, but the bulk of the fine and all the finest of this class have also gone forward direct from the up river ports. We make rates current here for Oonams, Oopacks, Oonfas and Hohows about Tls. 1.0.0 to 2.0.0 over last year's opening rates and Tls. 1.0.0 to 2.00 under latest Hankow quotations, whilst Ningchows, if we can quote from the few settlements made, are Tls. 1.0.0 to 2.0.0 dearer here than at Hankow or Kiukiang. In regard to the quality of the crop we make the Ningchows very much superior to the yield of last year, which we then characterised as the worst in our recollection; the fine and finest chops from this district are really first class Teas. Oonfas are very inferior, being largely mixed with leaf from inferior districts. Of the Oonams and Oopacks, the only districts we rate up to last year's growth, are the Cheong-sow-kyes, Soong-yong and Tong-shau, and this rating merely applies to the early packed chops. Taken as a crop, excluding the Ningchows and perhaps the Hohows, we make it decidedly inferior to average. Stock is estimated at 11,500 chests and 30,000 half-chests, against 16,000 chests and 20,000 half-chests same time last year. Settlements 950 chests and 10,100 half-chests, against 3,500 chests and 18,360 half-chests. Reshipments 13,500 half-chests, against 3,494 chests and 11,670 half-chests. Export to date 14½ million, against 13½ million pounds same time last year. Green: A few chops of Shanghai packed will most probably be offered in ten days. Musters of the first Ping Suey are expected at about the same date. The only steamer on the berth is the Deucalion; but the Canton and Glenroy are expected. There are one or two sailing vessels waiting for tea, up to the present buyers have preferred steamers in order to place their teas on the London market before large supplies from this port or Foochow.

Foochow.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—The first purchases of Country Teas were made on this market on the 9th June; since that date a good business has been passing, and settlements for the week aggregate 75,000 chests, of which nearly 20,000 are for Australia. Opening rates for low Country Teas are 2 to 3 taels above last season, Suey Kuts especially being in good request for the Colonies. The Ching Wos and Fock Oans, although costing about 4 taels per picul more than the past year, are relatively of good value when compared with the bulk of the crop. The opinion expressed in the last impression about the Siew Miew can be confirmed, the appearance is not good, but the liquor fine. Common and low grades are bringing extreme rates for Australia. Buying has been general, but the market closes easier for medium and fine grades. Souchong: A few chops have been shown, the quality seems poor; one parcel has been taken, but no price reported. Oolongs: The last opinion can be confirmed, the leaf being fair, but the water poor: a fair demand has existed, and prices are about 3 taels over last year. Flowery Pekoes: The colour and make of the Teas at present on show are poor, but the liquors fair. Scented Teas: A few parcels have changed hands for the first steamers at very full rates; an advance of 4 taels over last season's opening rates is noticeable; present supplies are very much wanting in scent.

AMOY.—Oolongs: Arrivals had come in rather freely, 120 chops in all being now represented; about 20 chops from the Ning Yong district had been shown, and so far were reported very favourably upon. Teamen stated that the crop this year would be upon the whole better than last. Congou: Buying commenced on the 10th June, when about 1,500 half-chests were settled for the Australian market; rates were about $2 to $3 per picul over the opening of last year. A further quantity of about 4,000 half-chests had since been settled at same rates; these Teas had been principally bought for the s.s. Legislator, now in port, and after her departure prices were expected to decline. The later arrivals in some cases showed an improvement, a few chops turning out a very fair liquor. Formosa Oolongs: Upwards of 8,200 half-chests were to go forward from Hong Kong for New York by the steamer Vasco de Gama, and by other steamers 2,000 to 3,000 half-chests had already been shipped.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon and Co.'s Circular says: With home advices by telegram announcing the unsaleability of Canton Teas, and continued reports of drooping priced, buyers here have naturally become reluctant to continue operations. The business since last mail has been moderate, and mostly transacted in the early part of the fortnight, the market at the close being decidedly quiet. Congous: Settlements reported have been nearly all for special packing, and not for shipment to London. In Macao there has been some business at lower prices. Scented Teas: Of Capers, though occasional parcels have been picked up at cheap prices, the purchases have been chiefly on a basis of Tl. 1 per picul under last mail's rates; quotations are, Tls. 18½ to 22 for fair to medium, Tls. 24 to 27 for good medium to fine, and as high as Tls. 31 for finest fancy lots. In Orange Pekoes no material change in value is noticeable, Tls. 16 to 17 have been paid for clean fairly scented "new-makes," and for medium to good medium long-leaf Tls. 20 to 27 continue the current figures; small fancy parcels of approved merit have fetched Tls. 30 to 31 per picul. In Canton Greens there are no settlements. The following is a summary of the fortnight's business:—Congou, 1,200 packages at Tls. 16 to 23 per picul; Scented Orange Pekoe, 6,000 boxes at Tls. 16 to 31 per picul; Scented Caper, 15,000 boxes at Tls. 18½ to 31 per picul.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The actual settlements of the fortnight had not exceeded 50 bales, and allowing for about that quantity short shipped at the date of last advices the figures of the total were left unchanged. Quotations were considered more or less nominal; dealers were offering their remaining parcels, mixed Hanks and Medium Oshus, at from $425 to $475 per picul, but met with little notice. Some coarse parcels had been returned to the interior, which helped to further reduce stocks. First arrivals of new Silk were expected shortly.

SHANGHAI.—Previous to the departure of the French mail of the 6th June only 150 to 200 bales of new Silk had been received; but on the 5th June the first purchasers of about 100 bales were made, comprising No. 5 Tsatlee at Tls 255 to 260; No. 3 Gold Lion at Tls. 315 to 320; No. 4 at Tls. 295 to 300, and Blue Elephant at Tls. 320. Since that date about 1,000 bales had arrived; but owing to the very discouraging reports from the markets of consumption, and the larg increase in the crops both here and in Europe, buyers had been unwilling to continue purchases on the same basis, while on the other hand the Chinese had been unwilling to give way more than Tls. 10 to 20, and until two days before the close business remained quite at a standstill. Towards the close, however, a small business of 100 to 200 bales was reported, consisting of a few bales each of various descriptions, not admitting of any quotations, but marking a decline of about Tls. 20 on previous prices. Settlements for the fortnight, Chinas, 300 bales. Total settlements since 1st June, 300 bales; against 1873-74, 1,500 bales; 1872-73, 7,000 bales. Comparative unsold Stock on this market on the 12th June, 1874, 1,000 bales; 1873, 3,500 bales; 1872, 4,000 bales.

CANTON.—Messrs. Deacon's Report says:—London advices regarding this article continue to be of an unsatisfactory and disheartening nature. It would seem that the fact of the more than abundant European crop is likely to prove inimical to the market value of "Cantons," and even a lower range of prices than those now ruling at home is expected to be the result. Here we have had a fortnight of very limited dealings. For last French mail only 95 bales of Tsatlee reel were taken, and no purchases for outgoing mail steamer is reported to have been made. Chinese would submit to some reduction on last quotations, but unfortunately their ideas of value do not keep pace with the retrograde movement on the other side. Loongkongs in stock are only of fair and middling classifications, which are not appreciated. Long-reels: No settlements have yet transpired, but some purchases for Bombay are likely to be made before the close. Re-reels continued neglected, and ready reeled silk is not in stock. Some few musters of second crop staple have arrived on the market, and as far as colour and general quality are concerned, are a decided improvement on the former yield. The stock is estimated at 200 to 300 bales Tsatlee, 100 bales Loongkong, and about 200 bales of inferior sorts. Settlements of new seasons waste are 500 to 600 bales No. 2, at $60 per picul.

NEW SEASON'S TEAS.

We have advices of the sailing of the steamer Cheops from Foochow on the 22nd ult., and the Mongomeryshire is expected to leave in a few days. The latest telegrams report the Foochow market firm, and that the first and second crops are expected to exceed last season's by 5,000,000 lbs., chiefly common kinds. Freights are quoted 60s., but expected to decline. The Gordon Castle (str.), which left Hankow on the 7th June, with 2,083,838 lbs., has been lost. The total export of new season's Teas up to the 23rd ult. was 55,750,000 lbs.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

LOSS OF THE "GORDON CASTLE."

LISBON, JULY 28.—The Gordon Castle, steamer, from Hankow to London, with a cargo of new season's teas, went ashore on the Berlingas, but was got off, badly damaged. She made for this port, and was run ashore at Cascaes. The crew and passengers were saved. The water extinguished the fires; the ship filled, and settled down in six fathoms water. She is a total wreck. Weather permitting, some cargo might, it is thought, be saved, but saturated with water.

CASCAES, JULY 29.—The steamer now lies on a flat ledge of rock, and shows no sign of straining. Endeavours are being made to lighten her by working at low water and stripping her aloft. Experienced divers are expected from Oporto by the 31st inst. If the weather continues fine there is a possibility of raising the vessel.

LONDON: TUESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1874.

THE JAPANESE EXPEDITION TO FORMOSA.

The Japanese have got themselves into an awkward position in this matter, and it is difficult to understand how they can possibly retreat from it without considerable loss of national dignity and prestige; in point of fact, the whole affair promises to end in a ridiculous fiasco. Much as we should like to see a more satisfactory state of things existing in Formosa, we cannot say that we shall feel much sympathy for the Japanese in their humiliation, for, looking at the question from a European point of view, they have by all accounts undoubtedly put themselves in the wrong by despatching troops to attack an integral portion of the Chinese Empire without making a formal declaration of war; and we are the more surprised at this when we consider the eagerness which they have displayed during recent years to imitate all the customs, political and social, pertaining to what they have been constrained to admit to be a higher civilisation than their own. We should have thought that the experience gained by their embassies abroad and by their statesmen at home, who have now so long been in constant contact with foreign diplomatists, would have taught them to pursue a more wary course of action.

At the outset they professed to contemplate undertaking the expedition on grounds which would have made it somewhat reasonable, had they first endeavoured, without effect, to obtain redress through the ordinary diplomatic channels, for their ostensible object was to punish the barbarous tribes of Formosa for their ill-treatment of Japanese who had been shipwrecked on the inhospitable shores of that island. There can be no doubt, however, that this was a mere flimsy pretext, and that the clamours of the war party in Japan, impatient at the prospect of having to turn their swords into ploughshares, have been the real cause of the whole imbroglio. The expenditure once resolved upon, we heard that "great preparations were "made; all the available steamers were taken up for the "conveyance of troops, and many of them had already "taken their departure for Nagasaki, where the expedition "was to rendezvous, when suddenly, on receiving informa-"tion that China was sending troops to Formosa, the Go-"vernment issued orders countermanding the whole affair." One would have thought that the matter would have ended here, but the troops had not been consulted, and it seems that they declared positively that they would go, coute qui coute, and refused to obey all orders to the contrary! The Government found itself compelled to give in (for a portion, at least, of its mutinous soldiery had started on their own account from Nagasaki), and adopt the responsibility of the expedition, in order to prevent its ships from being looked upon as piratical. The troops eventually landed on the coast of Formosa without meeting with any opposition, though shortly afterwards they had a slight brush with the natives, in which some fifty of the latter were killed and wounded. By the last advices from Japan we hear "that "the plan of the campaign in Formosa is upon a somewhat "novel basis; the troops are to do nothing for the next "six months, unless they should be attacked, but are to "await instructions from Tokio. Meanwhile negotiations "are to be set on foot to crave permission from the "Chinese Government to allow hostilities to be gone into "against the Formosan savages!" Whatever the authorities at Peking may say in reply to this somewhat comical request, the Viceroy of Fohkien does not see the matter from the same point of view as the Japanese do, and we find that he maintains "the right of China to the whole "island, without distinction of inhabitants, whether civil-"ised or savage. Any acts of violence," he says, "against "passengers along the coast can be settled by reference to "the Chinese Government. . . . What right, then, has "Japan to send an army to invade the place?" The Viceroy clearly has got a better notion of the obligations imposed by international law than the Japanese have, but while quite sympathising with his natural indignation at the unjustifiable raid which has been made upon his master's territory, we must take leave to doubt the efficacy of any appeal to the Chinese for the punishment of the aborigines, over whom they have literally no control whatever, and we trust the present difficulties will teach them a lesson and induce them to set that part of their house in order.

The complications of the whole of this business have been varied and rather puzzling to follow at this distance from the scene of action, but we believe that we have sketched them with tolerable accuracy. What will be the precise ending of the matter, and how the Japanese will retreat from the absurd position in which they now find themselves, we cannot pretend to say. The last phase in the affair is the opening of some negotiations at Shanghai, whither, as we learned by last mail, the Provincial Treasurer had repaired from Ichow to meet a Japanese Envoy, who is reported to have said that the troops were sent to Formosa merely "with the view of remaining a short time to overawe the "aborigines, and that it does not at all follow that there "will be any fighting." We should think not, but we doubt if the Chinese will consider that a sufficient explanation of and apology for the violation of their territorial rights in Formosa, though, after all, there is no accounting for the eccentricities of Asiatics in general, and the Celestials in particular, and it is just possible that, if the Japanese quietly evacuate the island, the Peking Government may be willing to accept that solution of the difficulty without further ado.

Lord Stanley has put a question to Lord Derby in respect to the Consulate at Saigon. Our readers may remember that Mr. Consul Caswell in 1871 recommended the Home Government to appoint a special Consul from the Foreign-office. In his report Mr. Caswell, in a very candid and praiseworthy manner, pointed out that the large increase of British tonnage trading to the port of Saigon had caused such an extension of Consular duties that it was quite impossible for a merchant to discharge those duties satisfactorily. At the time this report reached the Foreign-office an inquiry was going on as to the Consular Service generally, and the matter was consequently shelved. Mr. Caswell tendered his resignation, but the Foreign-office requested him to continue in office, and to appoint some one to act during his absence from Saigon. This has been done by Mr. Caswell, and the gentleman who now holds the office is an American engaged in a mercantile business. But considering that the importance of the place both politically and commercially has largely increased since 1871, we must urge on Lord Derby the importance of at once appointing a special Consul who can report on all matters occurring in Cochin China as well as discharge efficiently the ordinary duties of the Consulate. This is rendered the more necessary as it is very doubtful if Mr. Caswell will return to Saigon, he having resigned his business connections with the place.

A deputation of merchants and others has waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., to urge the expediency of an increase in the speed of the P. and O. Company's steamers carrying the mails and merchandise from England to India and the Far East. Sir Stafford Northcote promised attention to the views of the deputation.

The alterations in the Post-office contract with the P. and O. Company will be submitted for approval to the House of Commons this evening.

Mr. Benjamin P. Avery, the newly-appointed American Minister to Peking, was to leave New York for San Francisco on the 28th July.

The Governor of Labuan, Mr. H. E. Bulwer, has been appointed a member of the Second Class of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

THE EXPEDITION TO NAN-CHANG.

The report of Mr. Mayers on his visit to the Governor of Nan-chang to obtain some explanation of the insults offered to Mr. Baber, of the Consular Service, has been published by the Foreign-office. Mr. Mayers, accompanied by Mr. Brenan, proceeded from Shanghai up the Poyang Lake, in H.M.S. Ringdove, Captain Pitman, and thence by a steam launch. This river was found to vary in depth from twelve to twenty-five feet. On announcing his arrival Mr. Mayers received an invitation from the Governor to visit him, which was carried out in company with Mr. Brenan and Captain Pitman. The necessary escort and three chairs were sent by the Governor. After the usual delay customary at Chinese receptions, but very tedious to foreigners, Mr. Mayers was able to broach the subject, upon which the Governor detailed his view of the outrage committed on Mr. Baber. This of course did not lead to any practical or satisfactory result, and Mr. Mayers availed himself of the first opportunity to ask :—

What security was there against the recurrence of a similar outbreak on the next visit of a foreigner to Nan-chang? To this the Governor replied most vivaciously—"Oh! if you ask about security, I can't put my name to any bond! The Treaty requires us to afford efficient protection, and this 'shall be done in the amplest manner!" I now sought to ascertain from the Governor in what sense he defines protection, but his replies were purposely vague. On my making use of the expression, "t'an-ya" (to keep in order) he said—"You, who have been so long in China, must know that, with a population so turbulent as that of Nan-chang, it is a case of 'not-to-be-kept-in-order' (t'an-ya pu chu)." To this I replied—"That is a remarkable admission on your Excellency's part, for granting it to be correct, what can we think of the usefulness of the officials? If people will not be 't'an-ya' by fair means, they surely must and can be put down by force." His Excellency rejoined that Mr. Baber had very naturally made the same remark, but that he had also admitted himself to be perfectly well aware of the difficulties that environ the Chinese authorities, and his Excellency appealed to me to confess my own knowledge of this fact. In reply, I declined to recognise any difficulty in the matter; and with regard to the disposition of the people, it occurred to me to suggest that a practical test might be applied at once if Captain Pitman and Mr. Brenan were to take a walk through the town. This proposal seemed for an instant to disconcert the Governor, but he quickly recovered himself and approved the suggestion, saying: "By all means; the people will be perfectly quiet; they know, in fact, that you are friends of mine,—it is not as if it were a case of French missionaries making their appearance. Everybody knows that there is no harm about the English, Americans, &c." I took no immediate notice of this remark, and the Governor, addressing the Prefect, who was seated opposite to his Excellency throughout the interview, directed him to see that some official attendants should accompany the two gentlemen, and should let the people know that they were not Frenchmen. Upon this I interrupted the Governor, and begged him for his own sake to give no such directions as these, submitting that he was wrong to distinguish between the subjects of different foreign powers, and that a Frenchman might appear the next day at Nan-chang with a passport, and lay claim to equal immunities with ourselves.

The Governor replied that I was undoubtedly right to speak in this way from a foreign point of view, but that he had his own duties to perform. The Prefect, however, made a gesture from which I gathered that his Excellency's directions were not to be strictly fulfilled, and after a slight delay Captain Pitman and Brenan proceeded on their walk, remaining absent about half-an-hour. Mr. Brenan informs me that on issuing from the Governor's courtyard they were attended by upwards of 100 official retainers, who fended a way for them through the vast crowd which was gathered outside, and escorted them through several of the principal streets. The crowd followed in their rear, with much disorderly whooping and pressure, but no molestation was offered. Several shops were entered in the main street of the city, and no unusual excitement was shown beyond that caused by the mob of idlers who brought up the rear. During the absence of the two gentlemen I continued my conversation with the Governor, and his Excellency was finally brought to undertake that a proclamation should be issued, warning the populace against offering any annoyance to Europeans during future visits to Nan-chang. On my suggesting that the readiest means to secure the end in view would be to hold the district magistrates personally answerable for breaches of the peace, the Prefect loudly exclaimed that this was not to be thought of, but I demurred from his view.

With reference to this subject, I may sum up by remarking that the impression I have carried away from the interview is that the inclination traceable in the disposition of the Nan-chang authorities to discourage the visits of Europeans to the city is mainly, if not altogether, attributable to the hostility which Governor Lin scarcely seeks to conceal with regard to the Roman Catholic Missionaries. The people themselves have shown no inclination to annoy or molest us, and I attach no importance to the disorderly behaviour of the crowds of ragamuffins assembled under the unwonted excitement of the occasion. That even this concourse could have been dispersed at a sign from the Governor I have not the slightest doubt; but it was plainly his desire that we should receive an opposite impression. He referred more than once to the annoyance caused a short time previously to the literary examiner (Chuk'ao) on his arrival at the city, when his chair was surrounded and actually stopped by the throng. While protesting in the most emphatic manner that he was prepared to "afford the most efficient protection" (pao-hu shih li che che), the Governor yet sedulously repeated, time after time, the observation that "unforeseen accident" was not included within the scope of his promise. This phrase he illustrated by references to the murder of the Governor, General Ma, at Nanking, in 1870, and that of Lord Mayo, of which he had read an account. It was easy to perceive an undercurrent of suggestion on his part that, while the officials would nominally exert themselves to prevent serious harm befalling a foreign visitor, Europeans must not look for a welcome reception on their part at Nan-chang; but I, at the same time, believe that the earnest manner in which I pressed the obligations of the Treaty on his Excellency's notice, in the Prefect's presence and before a large crowd of underlings, will have left an impression for good upon his mind. To his remarks, more than once repeated, about unforeseen accident, I replied by observing that his Excellency must well know how to distinguish between exceptional and ordinary circumstances, and that, every precaution being taken, we may look with greater confidence to the event.

A very long conversation followed with reference to the questions of taxation on teas, and of obstructions to import trade under transit passes. I found the Governor perfectly au fait in respect of both these questions, and with regard to the impost on teas he simply repeated the views expressed in his correspondence already in my hands. Impressed as I was with the conviction that to urge this point to an issue would be impolitic, I said no more than was necessary, in my opinion, to show his Excellency that the attention of Her Majesty's Minister was fixed upon the subject, expressing no opinion, and making no complaint. I laid greater stress upon the grievances which are alleged with reference to the stoppage of trade inwards under transit passes, owing to the obstructiveness and exactions of the barrier officials. To my remarks on this subject the Governor opposed, as might be expected, a general denial, and he refused to accept as trustworthy the statements of the Kiukiang merchants, either native or foreign. He claimed credit for exceptional leniency in dealing with the constantly occurring cases of petty smuggling, and challenged me to bring forward any case of real hardship. In reply, I mentioned the confiscations which took place last year at Wu-ch'eng, but these the Governor was quite prepared to justify. I persisted, however, in urging that, if not with his cognisance, yet in some underhand manner, the barrier officials must give grounds for the apprehensions I had found, by careful inquiry, to prevail at Kiu-kiang, and I suggested that a proclamation might be issued to repeat in a public manner the Governor's assurance that no molestation would be offered to legitimate trade. This his Excellency undertook to have done.

The interview was drawn out to an inordinate length by the Governor's prolixity, and in order not to weary by too minute recital I have given but a faint outline of what passed between us. My object throughout was to leave an impression that his Excellency's conduct was narrowly observed, and in this I believe that I succeeded. After upwards of three hours' uninterrupted conversation the Governor allowed me to bring the interview to a close, and we withdrew to our chairs. A crowd of forty or fifty young men still lingered (although it was now past seven o'clock, and quite dark) outside the Governor's yamên, and Commander Pitman, who by some accident was delayed for a few moments behind Mr. Brenan and myself, informed me afterwards that the mob pressed rudely about his chair, and that but for the official attendants there would have been some danger of the chair being upset by the crush. I saw and heard nothing of this; and on learning the facts I did not think it advisable to take notice of the occurrence, which appeared to me devoid of significance. On reaching the river bank we entered our boat amid a large concourse of lookers-on, but no crowding or shouting was observed.

THE ORDEAN STABLE.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

Sir,—"Δ" does not improve. Indeed, he only makes bad matters worse. He began by blaming Lord Stanley of Alderley for asking for an inquiry into the conduct of the late Governor of the Straits. It would "savour of less than fair play," he says; and yet he had, himself, no scruple in reiterating, circulating, and accrediting all the worst things said of that unhappy official. Let us shout murder and thief by all means, but let us have no inquiry into the guilt of the fugitive against whom we are raising the hue and cry; delicacy forbids! Such are "Δ's" notions of "fair play," and they are very nice. Passing from his moral code, let us see how he deals with facts. Gaily shutting his eyes to such awkward customers, he finds a second cause of quarrel with Lord Stanley for not having backed the Straits Association when, "from 1868 to 1872," they clamoured at Lord Kimberley's door for inquiry into the late Governor's doings. Now there was no such clamour later than May, 1870; Lord Kimberley had not then become Colonial Minister; the Straits Association never applied to Lord Stanley for any backing; and that noble lord, who did not succeed to his peerage until the middle of 1869, could hardly have been warm in his seat in the House of Lords when the last echo of the last clamour of the Straits Association was dying away in the precincts of Downing-street. In short, every fact, material and immaterial, is misrepresented; not intentionally, of course, for "Δ" is evidently well-meaning. But he should know that when a writer sets up to criticise and censure the conduct of public men he undertakes a highly responsible office, and he must not be surprised if his qualifications for it are examined. They ought to include at least sound moral principles, habits of reflection, and accuracy as to facts. But "Δ" writes faster than he thinks. He gives himself no time to collect either his wits or his facts, and so he comes to grief.—I am, &c.,

THE JAPANESE EXPEDITION TO FORMOSA.

("TIMES'" CORRESPONDENT.)

NAGASAKI, JAPAN, JUNE 1.

By the steamer Takasago-maru (formerly P. and O. steamer Delta), just returned from Formosa, we have news of the progress made by the Japanese Expedition up to the 27th of May, the particulars of which will probably be interesting to your readers. But before entering upon these details it will not be out of place to refer to the earlier stages of this Expedition, to the troubles which beset the Japanese at its commencement, and to the opposition thrown in its way by the foreign Ministers, which at one time seemed likely to be fatal to the undertaking and to the newly-acquired credit of the Japanese with Western Powers.

During a seven years' residence in this country I have seen many astounding changes, some improvements, but several undoubted failures. For such failures as have occurred the Japanese alone have suffered, and continue to suffer, without, probably, very much foreign sympathy; but in the matter of this Formosa Expedition the censure heaped upon them appears to me to have been ill-deserved. So far from meeting with diplomatic opposition, they should receive moral, if not material, support from all civilised countries in their present Expedition to avenge the murder of several of their subjects by savages who on former occasions, as well as now, whenever they get the chance, murder every shipwrecked foreigner cast upon the south coast of Formosa. One of the objects of Soyeshima's Embassy to Peking last year was to demand redress for the murder of some fifty Japanese sailors shipwrecked on the south-east coast of Formosa. The reply given him was that the Chinese had no control over that part of the island, and that any demands of the Japanese in that quarter should be made direct. Since then the Expedition has always been a likely contingency, and with an adviser so well acquainted with Formosa as General Le Gendre, it was not probable the matter would be lost sight of, nor that the necessary preparations would be incomplete. At the same time it should be no matter of blame against the Japanese that, until actually ready to start, they should have kept their intentions secret, and even allowed rumours of a Corean expedition to take the place of the one they actually intended. Unfortunately, the rising in Saga found occupation for the Government forces early in the spring of this year, and until that ill-judged and worse-executed insurrection was quelled nothing could be done regarding Formosa. But after the suppression of the rebellion, a still greater incentive must have been felt for carrying out the original plans, since no better employment could be imagined for disaffected subjects than an expedition against a foreign enemy. The only cause for regret must have been that the season had advanced towards an unhealthy time of the year for a climate like that of Formosa; that the favourable monsoon for landing at the Southern end was passing by, and that the typhoon season in its worst district would probably be upon them before the work could be completed. However, the Japanese decided to carry their plans out, and in April they began to concentrate their forces here as the nearest port of departure for Formosa. But here their difficulties commenced, and from a source they could hardly have anticipated. Foreign Ministers, not satisfied with the statement that the Chinese had repudiated any control over the Formosan savages—although such disclaimers had formerly only too often been made to British and other Powers when they had to demand similar redress from the Chinese for murders committed in the same place—started the difficulty of a possible complication between China and Japan, and demanded the authority upon which Japan was acting in defence of her own people and of her own honour in a case where other Powers would have summarily acted without any notice whatever. The result was that both the British and United States Ministers issued a prohibition against subjects of either nation taking part in the coming Expedition, which in the case of the latter nationality was of a nature to cause the withdrawal of the principal foreign advisers—General Le Gendre, formerly United States' Consul at Amoy, and well known in Formosa, and Lieutenant Cassell, admittedly one of the smartest officers in the United States' Navy. This ministerial prohibition was further felt in the cancelling of the first two charters of foreign steamers made by the Japanese for conveying their troops to Formosa—the steamers Yorkshire and New York. Added to this, one of their own transports was found unseaworthy on arrival here, and the Japanese, even before leaving their own coasts, had every prospect of a complete failure. Fortunately, the officials in charge of the Expedition, notably Okuma, the Minister of Finance, and General Saigo, commanding the forces, were equal to the occasion; and, in spite of hesitations in the North, carried out the work put in their hands. In fact, when instructions actually reached them to delay the Expedition they were able to telegraph that it had already started. The difficulty of transport was surmounted by the purchase of two steamers—the Shaftesbury and the Delta—and the General himself left in the latter on the 17th of May, together with 1,200 troops. The first departures from Japan were made on the 3rd of May, when three Japanese transports, a corvette, and a small gunboat left for Formosa.

The rendezvous had been previously arranged in the Bay of Liang Kian on the south-west point of Formosa, and the first vessels arrived there about the 10th and 11th of May, the men-of-war having previously called at Keelung for coals, which they obtained without any difficulty, and the transports having called at Amoy, where supplies were not so readily given. At the latter port a pilot was threatened by his Consol with imprisonment if he rendered any assistance to the Japanese! A landing was safely effected at the village of Sha-lian, and a camp formed upon the beach, the neighbouring Chinese willingly rendering every assistance for the very handsome pay given by the Japanese for boat hire. Nothing of importance seems to have occurred until the arrival of General Saigo in the Delta; but his ship had hardly anchored on the 22nd of May when a Chinese corvette made her appearance, accompanied by a gunboat, the former with guns out, men at quarters, and everything prepared for immediate action. The few Europeans on board the Delta, seeing the preparations made, were in momentary expectation of being fired upon, and from the size of the Chinese man-of-war they could see it would be in her power to capture the whole of the Japanese fleet then in the bay. However, the corvette came quietly to an anchor and the troops on board the Delta were at once landed. The Mandarin in charge of the corvette, who had been sent by the Viceroy of Fohkien from Foochow, requested an interview with the Japanese Commander-in-Chief; but General Saigo declined to receive him until the following day, when he could meet him on shore. An interview was held the next morning in the Japanese camp, the General surrounded by a guard of four hundred soldiers and in front of his tent, under the Japanese flag. The Mandarins approached with every sign of diffidence, chin-chinning their politest salutations, which were met by the General with a free European salute, a proffered hand, and an invitation to enter his tent. So far as transpired, the purport of this interview was that the mandarin asserted the claims of China to the whole island o Formosa, and asked the cause of the Japanese Expedition, to which General Saigo replied that any such questions would be fully settled by his Government at Peking with the proper Chinese authorities, but that meantime he had come for a special mission intrusted to his care. No promises or engagements regarding the ultimate course of the Expedition were made, but the result of the interview was most friendly, and a proclamation was issued by the mandarin ordering all Chinese to render every assistance to the Japanese. The two corvettes then saluted the flags of each country, and the Chinese men-of-war at once left the anchorage. The question regarding Chinese opposition was thus readily settled. Had the Chinese wished to oppose the landing they were there in sufficient strength to have taken the whole of the Japanese fleet, together with some 2,000 troops and a large quantity of treasure afloat at the time of the corvette's arrival; but, whatever their object in arriving prepared for action, it is clear they had no intention of fighting.

Meantime the Japanese had met their enemy on shore, and a first skirmish with the savages had occurred. A few young soldiers strayed from the camp unarmed, and were suddenly fired upon from an ambush. One was killed on the spot, the others returned hastily to the camp and called out their comrades to recover the body. It was found decapitated. Some fifty soldiers were called out the next morning and a hundred on the following day; and both parties chased all the savages they could see. These fired so long as a good distance intervened, but fled as soon as the Japanese closed in upon them with their native swords. The Japanese gave no quarter, and during these two days brought back sixteen heads as trophies to the camp. From the evidence of foreigners who have seen fighting in all its aspects, the Japanese dash in these small encounters is admirable. No men could have fought better, their only fault being that all were too eager to be in the front. Before the Delta left Liang Kian sixteen tribes out of the eighteen composing the population of that part of Formosa had sent in their submission to General Saigo, and volunteered every assistance towards subduing the remaining two. Of the latter the Bootangs are the acknowledged culprits in the case of most of the atrocities committed upon shipwrecked men; they have become the common enemies of mankind. Up to the 27th of May no advance in force had been undertaken by the Japanese, but plans were being matured for completely surrounding the Bootangs, and the next advices from Formosa will probably bring the result of the intended movement.

The arrival of the Japanese in Formosa has been welcomed by all the so-called Chinese villages in the South, the inhabitants of which are, however, mostly half-castes. They acknowledge no allegiance to China; they receive no protection from China, but exist in a constant state of warfare with the savages, to whom they pay blackmail. One village alone of a thousand inhabitants offered to support as many Japanese soldiers as General Saigo could send to occupy their district and protect them from the constant inroads of the savages.

Up to the time of the Delta's departure the Japanese casualties amounted to nine killed and some twenty or thirty wounded; their camp was healthy, only ten being in hospital; but the water was scarce and bad, and the temperature in the shade stood ninety-five deg. Climate will doubtless tell upon the Japanese severely before the summer is over, and the inevitable typhoon will cause much damage to their shipping in the very insecure anchorage they have now got. But we foreigners must acknowledge the energy of those who have undertaken this Expedition, and we should cordially wish them all success. It is true that Formosa may be a good outlet for many turbulent and disaffected subjects; but the cause is one to be taken up by the whole civilised world, whereas so far our only action has been one of obstructive neutrality.

Departures.—July 31, from London, for Singapore, China, &c., Glenartney (str.); for Colombo, Letty Gales; 20, from Greenock, for Java and Singapore, Hope; 29, from Cardiff, for Galle, Costani; 31, from London, for Colombo, &c., Colombo (str.); Aug. 1, from London, for Cardiff and Hong Kong, Marco Polo; July 31, from Cardiff, for Anjer, Benedicte.

Casualties.—Lisbon, July 30.—Tug returned from Birlings reports that the passengers of the Gordon Castle (str.) were taken off the island on the night of July 28 by the Galeed (str.), bound to Falmouth; took ship's papers with them, including manifest. Lisbon, July 31.—A telegram announces that about 300 packages tea, ex Gordon Castle (str.), damaged by salt water, had been picked up by coastguards. Cascaes, Aug. 3.—Made attempt to raise Gordon Castle (str.) with such pumps as were available. Reduced water 2 feet 8 inches below level outside, but tide filling, overflowed the ship. Confidence is felt that with powerful steam pumps the vessel could be raised at next spring tides. The Gazelle, Lauer, from Java to Falmouth, which arrived at St. Helena, July —, states that she was struck by a heavy sea, during which she lost bulwarks and rail from fore rigging to the quarter deck on port side, and a portion of bulwarks on starboard side; she also had upper seams of the stanchions, covering boards, and waterways started, which caused her to make water; the vessel will remain a few days to repair damages. Advices from St. Helena, July 11, state that the Tennyson, McKinlay, from Batavia to Queenstown, arrived there, 4, leaky.

Woosung, Aug. 3.—The Messageries steamer Meikong, with the Shanghai mails of Aug. 2, got aground; expected to come off after discharge.

Spoken.—Mary (Dutch ship), Egmont to Samarang, June 13, 2 S., 29 W.; L.N.W.F. (English ship), for Singapore, June 13, 39 N., 16 W.; Gerard Pieter Servatius, Newcastle to Sourabaya, July 27, off the Hook of Holland.

Miscellaneous.—At Port Said, July 27, Prince v. Oranje (str.), from Nieuwe Diep, for Batavia. The Hankow (str.), which put back after being in collision, has nearly completed her discharge; cargo not damaged; will probably be despatched again in ten days.

Vessels Passed the Suez Canal.—July 31, Deucalion, from China, &c., for London; August 2, Muriel, from London, for Singapore, &c.; Sultan, from London, for Colombo; Sirius, from Foochow, for London.

The report of the Peking Hospital for 1873 is a very satisfactory one. The favourable impression produced by the numerous cases of remarkable cures has tended to make the benefits of the hospital more generally known. The entire number of patients prescribed for has been 18,300. There have been four new commemorative tablets erected by grateful patients.

The Queen's Advocate of Ceylon.—In our last issue we announced that the Queen had granted the dignity of Knighthood upon Richard Francis Morgan, Esq., Queen's advocate of the Colony of Ceylon. Sir Richard Morgan was admitted an advocate of the Supreme Court of Ceylon in 1846, and in October 1856 became District Judge of Colombo. For a short time in 1857 he acted as Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of that Colony, and in the same year became acting Queen's Advocate. In November, 1858, he was called to the English Bar, by the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn, and in 1860 he became acting senior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Ceylon. In the same year he was appointed District Judge of Colombo, and became acting Queen's Advocate a second time in April, 1861. In the following November he resumed his duties as District Judge of Colombo, and was finally confirmed as Queen's Advocate on the 1st January, 1863, since which date he has held that appointment. It may be mentioned that this is the first instance of the law officer of the Crown in any of our eastern possessions receiving knightly rank, which is mainly conferred upon the Chief Justice or similar judicial functionary.

A parliamentary paper, just published, gives the number and value of the Post-office orders issued to seamen at home and foreign ports and paid in the United Kingdom during 1873. Shanghai sent eighteen orders, Hakodadi (Japan) one.

The French steamer Sarthe has just returned from Cochin China. She made the passage from Toulon to Saigon in twenty-eight days, not including detention at ports of call.

The catalogue of Chinese books in the British Museum, compiled by Mr. Douglas, and printed by Mr. Austin, of Hertford, is making steady progress. About one-third of the work is done; when completed, it will contain as many as 15,000 articles.

The China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vancouver arrived at Hong Kong 31st July from Yokohama and San Francisco. Experienced a typhoon off the coast of Japan.

Monetary and Commercial.

A new joint-stock company has been registered, with the title of "The Woosung Road Company (Limited)." The capital is fixed at £100,000, and the company is formed "For the purpose of constructing a line of road, tram or railway, between Shanghai, Woosung, and Pootung, and to aid in the development of undertakings in China." The subscribers (who take twenty-five shares each) are Alexander Matheson, 3, Lombard-street; R. Jardine, 3, Lombard-street; H. B. Gibb, 72, Old Broad-street; J. Macandrew, 3, Lombard-street; H. M. Matheson, 3, Lombard-street; F. B. Johnson, 3, Lombard-street; H. B. T. Farquhar, 9, King William-street; and John Pender, M.P., 18, Arlington-street.

The report of the Merchant Shipping Company (Limited), presented on the 30th inst., recommends a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, leaving, after an addition of £16,721 to the insurance account of £5,000 to reserve, a balance of £7,251 to be carried to depreciation account. At the corresponding period of last year the dividend was of similar amount. But for the casualties of that year, which have now been written off, and which have necessitated a replenishing of the insurance account, the directors, it is stated, would have felt justified in recommending an increased distribution.

The directors of the London and County Banking Company have decided on paying a dividend for the half-year ended the 30th of June at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum, carrying forward £29,279. At the corresponding period of last year the dividend was of similar amount, and £20,189 was carried forward.

The bankruptcy of Mr. E. H. Pollard, Q.C., of Hong Kong, which was lately gazetted, has been annulled.

Lord Romilly, as arbitrator in the European Assurance Society case, has made a call of £5 per share on the contributories of the Wellington Reversionary, Annuity, and Life Assurance Society, payable in two instalments—on the 31st of August and the 30th of September next. Interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum will be added from the above date until payment.

The failure is announced of Messrs. S. B. Gaskell Brothers, cotton merchants, of Liverpool. According to a statement of their affairs, the liabilities amount to £96,000, of which £70,000 are stated to be secured, and the assets to £24,400.

Mr. S. Appleton, of Liverpool, has devised an Anglo-American Exchange Table which will convert sterling into dollars, currency into gold, and the converse. It will also give the currency rate of exchange, together with the English equivalent for New York prices in stocks, cotton or produce, or vice versa. The use of this table will save an immense deal of time and labour, and its accuracy is unquestionable.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Geelong, which left Southampton July 30, was, in gold, to Galle, £3,000; in silver, to Singapore, £3,000; to Shanghai, £4,970; total in gold, £3,000; in silver, £7,670.

Bar Silver has again declined to 58½d. per oz., and the market cannot be considered firm even at that rate, the demand being comparatively slight. Mexican Dollars are in but little demand for China, and a decline from the price which was obtained for the last arrivals (56¾d. per oz.) may be looked for.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The market during the week has not been active, yet a fair amount of business has been done in new season's Teas, two more ships having arrived, whilst the loss of the Gordon Castle with over 2,000,000 lbs. tea on board, made known on the 28th ult., has somewhat strengthened the market for good medium to fine kinds. Superfine Chops meet with a ready sale for export at very full prices. In public sale 19,480 packages have been offered without reserve, the whole of which were sold; a large proportion, consisting of new-make Canton Congous, Scented Capers, and Orange Pekoes. The deliveries for the week as compared with last year are as follows:—

Coastwise	555,000 ...	649,000
	3,026,000 ...	3,162,000

Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Old season's siftings have sold, at public sale, from 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb. Broken leaf kinds show no change. Fair common has sold from 10d. to 11½d. per lb., good common from 1s. to 1s. 0½d. per lb. In fair to good and fine Kaisows there have been but few sales, the supply in first hands being very small, whilst the first of the new season's are hourly expected. Pak Lin kinds: Further arrivals have been placed on the market, but they meet only with a slow sale from 2s. to 2s. 3d. per lb. Black leaf kinds: Old season's have been sold, at public auction, from 10¾d. to 11½d. for fair to good common, and 1s. to 1s. 2½d. for fair to good medium kinds. In new sales have been made in good medium kinds from 1s. 5d. to 1s. 7d. per lb., fine from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 10d., finest from 1s. 11d. to 2s. 4d., and superfine from 2s. 6d. to 3s. per lb., showing but little alteration on last week's prices. New make Canton kinds: Common to fair have sold from 1s. to 1s. 1d., good from 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 3d. per lb. In Souchongs, Oolongs, and Flowery Pekoes business has been very limited, prices showing no material change. Scented Teas: Canton Capers have been sold, at public auction, from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. per lb., being much about previous prices, and leaving heavy losses to importers. Privately they have been difficult to move. Orange Pekoes, Canton kinds: The Macao kinds have been sold to a fair extent at rather lower prices; the long leaf kinds have been dull of sale, several parcels, at public sale, sold from 1s. 2½d. to 1s. 7d. per lb., and fine at 2s. In Foochow kinds, both of Orange Pekoe and Caper, there has been no change to report. Green Teas: The demand continues limited, and business doing is on a very small scale, but prices remain much as before.

Messrs. Goddard and Co.'s Circular says:—Since our last the arrivals have been 5,500,000 lbs., making a total of nearly 15,000,000 lbs. of new season's tea from Canton and Hankow, some of which will have been in transit. Privately the market has shown some steadiness, although the tendency has been in buyers' favour (until the news of the loss of the Gordon Castle), at prices ranging up to 2s. per lb. The finest and choice qualities are not in large supply; the latter are looked at by exporters, and occasionally taken at very high rates, but the demand and the taste is somewhat fitful and uncertain. The dealers still continue to supply themselves very sparingly, whilst importers are fairly firm. Auctions have occurred, but the quantity offering has been small. Old black leaf Congou has been sold "without reserve," at a drop of 1d. to 2½d. from April rates. Scented Teas show no reaction from previous low prices. Green Teas in somewhat better demand. Deliveries from London, from 1st to 27th ult. inclusive, or twenty-three days, 11,509,276 lbs., against twenty-three days, 1873, 11,760,302 lbs. Imports, deliveries, and stocks in London, from 1st Jan. to 30th June:—

Imports.		Deliveries.		Stocks.
56,107,602	44,551,359	81,478,011	80,275,576	64,128,722	53,573,346

SILK.

There is no change to report in the market; business is confined to the events of the moment, and prices are unaltered. Deliveries are satisfactory, being since the 1st inst.:—3,061 Chinas; 532 Cantons; 729 Japans; and 350 Bengals; total, 4,672 bales.

COFFEE.—A good demand has prevailed, and large supplies of Plantation Ceylon have been taken at 6d. advance upon last week's prices, Native Ceylon realising fully previous rates. Closing prices are:—Plantation triage and ordinary, 90s. to 105s.; small to low middling, 110s. to 118s. 6d.; middling to bold, 119s. to 129s.; peaberry, 129s. 6d. to 133s.; Native garblings, 54s.; small to low good ordinary, 85s. to 91s.; fine ordinary to bold, 93s. to 96s.; peaberry, 102s. to 106s. per cwt.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The demand for Ceylon has slightly improved, and 60 tons have been sold at £35 per ton.

HEMP.—Of 2,100 bales Manila offered, 500 bales sold; mixed, £33; white, £47 to £47 5s. per ton.

Digitized by Google

PEPPER.—The public sales have passed off quietly, and holders being firm, the bulk of the supplies was bought in; 1,773 bags Black were catalogued, and about 120 bags sold at 7¼d. for good Singapore and good greyish Alleppy; Penang was retired at 6⅞d. White Pepper was also quiet, and 1,036 bags were chiefly bought in; a small quantity of good bright Singapore sold at 9¾d. per lb.

RICE.—The business of the week has been extremely limited in extent. On the spot nothing has been done, an offer of 16,223 packages Japan in auction being bought in at 9s. 6d. to 10s. per cwt. Afloat two cargoes of Rangoon (2,100 tons), now due, have been sold at 9s., and a cargo of Saigon, 680 tons, April sailing, per Charity, at 8s. 9d. Continental terms.

SUGAR.—A quiet tone has again characterised the market, and business has been confined to West Indian kinds.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: Of 240 boxes broken China offered 50 boxes sold at 9d. per lb. Cassia Lignea in sale went rather dearer; 90 cases good unworked sold at 57s. to 58s.; 100 boxes bought in at 58s. per cwt. Mace: Good qualities are in firm request, and steady in value. Ordinary sorts are dull. Of 44 cases Penang offered a few lots sold at 3s. 6d. for good bright, 3s. 2d. to 3s. 3d. for fair; the remainder, consisting chiefly of common red and chips, withdrawn without bids; 1 case Singapore withdrawn. Nutmegs are firm, and small supplies at sale brought firm prices; 14 cases Penang sold—fine brown, average 66 nuts to the lb., at 4s. 5d., 75's at 3s. 8d., 80's at 3s. 7d. to 3s. 8d., 116's at 3s. 5d., defective at 1s. 11d. to 2s.; 3 barrels Dutch limed bought in at 1s. 9d., and 1 case shrivelled at 1s. 3d. per lb.

SAGO.—500 bags sold in public sale; fair small, 17s. to 17s. 6d.; good large, 18s. 6d.; and privately 400 bags, at 18s. 6d. per cwt.

TAPIOCA.—Pearl quiet; 309 bags extra large bought in at 22s. to 23s. per cwt.; 309 bags flake sold, dull but bold Singapore at 2d. to 2⅛d., and small at 1⅞d. to 1⅞d. per lb.

TIN.—At the periodical sale held at Amsterdam on the 29th inst. 22,058 slabs Banca were offered and sold, opening at fl.55½, closing at fl.57, making an average of fl.56½, equal to £97 laid down here; result being better than anticipated. A slight improvement has since been observable in the market here, and closing quotations are Straits on the spot and afloat £95 to £96, Banca £98, Billiton £94 per ton, showing an advance of 20s. in Straits.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

METALS.

SPELTER.—Silesian, £21 10s. to £22.

QUICKSILVER.—In bottles of 75 lbs. each, £22.

Messrs. French and Smith report:—Iron.—Manufactured, unchanged. Glasgow Pigs have realised higher prices during the week.—Copper.—Advices from Valparaiso up to the 20th inst. state the charters since the 2nd inst. as 3,000 tons, upon which the market drooped, and Chili Bars changed hands at £75 10s. To-day, however, an important business has been transacted up to £77.—Lead steady.—Quicksilver advanced from £19 15s. to £21, at which only a small quantity was obtainable; £29 has to-day been paid.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

A quiet feeling has ruled in the market, and the demand for both Yarns and Goods has been of a limited character; quotations, however, have in most cases remained unaltered, but where any change has occurred buyers have had the advantage. In the lower qualities of goods, where producers have run out of orders, some pressure to sell has been manifested, but for the good and better makes prices are fairly maintained, a considerable part of the production being still well under contract. The same remarks will apply to Yarns.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.—JULY 18.

COFFEE.—The Brazil market is in a stagnant condition, there being no disposition either to buy or sell. The quietness extends to mild descriptions—although prices are fairly supported. Java remains firm. We quote as follows:—Java (Government bags), 23½c. to 26½c.; Java (mats), 27c. to 28c.; Singapore, 20c. to 21c.; Ceylon, Native, 19c. to 22c.

CORDAGE.—Prices are as follows:—Manila Cordage, sizes above 12-thread, 16c.; do. 6-thread and 9-thread, ¼ in. and 5-16in. diam., 17c.; do. 12-thread, ⅜ in. diam., 16½c.; do. Hay Rope, 16½c.; do. Cordage, Bolt Rope Yarns, 18c.; do. 6-thread and 9-thread, 19c.; Tarred Manila, 15½c.

HEMP.—There is no demand, and the market is very dull.

INDIGO.—The demand continues light. We notice sales of fourteen to fifteen cases Manila at 75c. to 80c., and seven to eight chests Madras at 85c. to 90c., currency.

RICE.—The market is very dull, and prices favour buyers.

SUGAR.—This market is less animated, and prices have receded upon holders showing a disposition to sell.

SPICES.—There is a fair jobbing demand at following quotations:—China Cassia, 23½c. to 24c.; ditto Batavia, 20c. to 25c.; Mace, $1.16 to 1.25.

TIN.—Straits Tin is quoted at 23c. to 23½c., and Banca 26½c.

SILK.—Messrs. O'Donoghue and Co.'s report says:—Since the issue of our last circular the market has continued in much the same state of inactivity as then reported. Prices have gradually drooped on those descriptions of silk which are in largest supply, as Re-reeled Cantons and Haineens. Buyers do not appear to be tempted to enter the market except to cover their most pressing wants, and there is an entire absence of anything like a speculative feeling. Manufacturers complain that fashions are quite adverse to the silk interest, and we notice that the consumption of Raw Silk in this country for the season just closed has been a little over 3,000 bales less than that of the previous season. We commenced this season with an unsold stock of 2,535 bales, consisting of 1,700 Canton re-reels, 760 Chinas, 48 Japans, and 27 Grege, which shows an increase of about 800 bales upon the stock at the same time last year. This stock, taken in connection with the probability that it will shortly be largely supplemented from the new season's silk, and the comparative dulness of general trade, will most likely prevent buyers from anticipating their wants to any extent, and we do not therefore look for any marked improvement in values in the near future.

TEA.—The market, on the whole, has a rather quieter tone. New Japan continues somewhat irregular, with more sellers than buyers. Oolong is quiet, and without movement of note. Some new Formosa is to hand, and sales have been made of about 300 packages. Green is quieter than early in the week, though prices cannot be called any different, as holders are not pressing their goods for sale.

CASUALTIES.

The Idella Berry, Berry, which arrived at New York, July 12, from Batavia, reports having encountered very heavy Westerly gales, lasting twenty-two days, off the Cape of Good Hope, during which she split sails, &c., and sprang a leak, which necessitated the constant employment of one pump.

Manila.—(Hong Kong, July 25, 5.10 P.M.)—The Carlicks (? Carricks) (ship), hence to New York, with sugar and hemp, is reported ashore off Catalatass reef, Luzon.

Cascaes, July 28, 5.40 A.M.—The Gordon Castle (s.), from Hong Kong to London, struck on the Birlings, and afterwards ran ashore here; vessel full of water and a total wreck; salvage difficult.

Lisbon, July 28, 9.45 A.M.—The Gordon Castle (s.) has filled with water and settled down in six fathoms; total wreck; weather permitting, some cargo may be saved, but saturated with water.

Lisbon, July 28, 3.50 A.M.—The Gordon Castle (s.), from China to London, with tea, went ashore on the Birlings, but was got off, badly damaged, made for this port, and was run ashore at Cascaes; crew and passengers saved; the steamer and part of the cargo will also be saved.

Lisbon, July 28.—[Another account.]—The Gordon Castle (s.), from Hankow to London, with tea, is ashore Cascaes; steamer and greater part of cargo saveable.

Liverpool, July 29, 2.55 P.M.—1.30 telegram just received from Lisbon, says:—"Fore compartment of Gordon Castle filled immediately on striking Birlings; supposed when she was beached holes made in other compartments; at low tide water flush with rail aft; vessel being stripped and lightened as fast as possible; weather continues fine. A telegram states that engineer is coming out; steam pumps and suction hose had better come also on chance of being available." It is, therefore, contemplated sending from here by to-morrow's steamer Chisholm, two steam pumps and divers.

Genoa, July 25.—Advices from Alexandria, dated July 15, state that the Lidia, Dodero, hence to Singapore, with coal, stranded near Port Said. Attempts made to get her off by the Voltai (French corvette), and the Vittor Pisani (Italian corvette), were at first rendered unsuccessful by a violent N.W. gale, but the vessel was at length got afloat, and towed into port.

London, July 28.—The following has been received from the master of the Hankow (str.), dated off Dover, to-day:—The Hankow (str.) was in collision with the Millbanke (str.), of Sunderland, off the Ness, at 2.15 A.M.; latter vessel sunk; fifteen lives lost. Hankow's stem split open right down—collision bulkhead has saved the vessel; will require to discharge cargo and go into dry dock at once; safety of vessel depending on the collision bulkead holding on.

Blackwall, July 29. [Recd. at 2.55 P.M.]—The Hankow (str.), for China, has put back to the South West India Dock, this morning, with damage to bow by collision with the Millbanke (str.).

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEBIG COMPANY'S EXTRACT OF MEAT

is "stock" for beef-tea, soups, made dishes, and sauces; gives fine flavour and great strength. Invariably adopted in households when fairly tried.

CAUTION.—Genuine only with Baron Liebig's facsimile across label.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

AND PILLS.—JAUNDICE, DISORDERED LIVER.—A good flow of bile is absolutely necessary for digestion; when the secretion is interrupted or depraved disease immediately sets in, and sallowness or jaundice marks the cause to be in the liver. This important organ, so liable to disorder, can always be regulated by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. The former, rubbed on the right side over the region of the liver, upon which it exercises the most salutary influence, without harassing the stomach or the bowels, a matter frequently of vital importance, confers on this remedy an advantage over any other form of medicine in the pharmacopeia. When assisted by the Pills, every disease is speedily subjected and effectually banished.

TANJONG PAGAR DOCK COMPANY

VICTORIA DOCK, SINGAPORE.

This Company's Granite DRY DOCK, 450 feet in length, 65 feet width of entrance, and 20 feet depth of water on the sill, was OPENED on the 17th October, 1868. In the high tides of the North-East Monsoon there is a foot to eighteen inches more water.

In connection with the Dock is a complete range of workshops, fitted with steam machinery, driving all descriptions of engineers' tools required in the construction and repair of vessels and machinery, and a foundry for iron and brass castings.

The Company's extensive Wharves and Godowns for receiving and storing cargo immediately adjoin the Dock.

Having an efficient European staff in each department, the Company is in a position to guarantee the best workmanship, executed with every possible despatch, as well as low rates of charges.

These advantages, and the great facilities which the proximity of the Dock to the town offers for the transport of materials, &c., enable this Company to adopt a very low scale of charges for ships' work of all classes.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

Our advices from the Japan ports by the present mail are of no later date than those received by Pacific mail on the 3rd inst., and published in our last issue. The steamer Altona arrived at San Francisco on the 28th ult., bringing Yokohama dates to the 4th ult. The subjoined summary of news has been telegraphed to the New York Press:—

The news from Formosa is to the effect that the Japanese are driving the Aboriginese from the coast. The Japanese war vessels were still on the coast of Formosa. The tribes have come to terms with Japan, and accepted the flag of that country. The comet had been observed from Japan, and was looked upon by the natives as a favourable omen in connection with the war.

The Japanese steamer Tai Omiru was lost on the 15th of June, on the west coast. Twenty-seven lives were lost.

A Greek church has been opened by the Russian missionaries at Hakodadi.

CHINA.

KIUKIANG.

A correspondent of the North China Herald writes as follows:—

In your last letter from this port some remarks were passed on the indifference shown for the import trade of Kiukiang; but just as little attention appears to be given by your Shanghai Chaaszes to the export trade in tea; for, instead of buying at this port, they seem to prefer paying much higher prices at Hankow for the same leaf offered here at reasonable rates. May they reap the profits they deserve! There is abundant proof that the Kiangsi dealers were most anxious to sell at Kiukiang, could they have found purchasers, as they had paid such high prices inland that a reasonable offer would have been willingly accepted; but as there were no Chaaszes to make offers, they sent their produce to Hankow, where, to their glee, they found numerous asinine speculators willing to pay from Tls. 10 to 11 a picul more than was asked for the tea at Kiukiang.

The U.S.S. Ashuelot made a brief stay here last week. Rumours were current that she was going to Ichang, but whether in connection with the future opening of that port it is impossible to say. It would really seem of little use opening more ports when the old ones are abandoned. The great cry of the merchant has been to get nearer the producing districts, and to open up a field for our imports. Now steamers could hardly get nearer the tea districts of Fychow, Moyune, Ningchow, and Hankow than Kiukiang is situated; yet, as has been observed, tea-tasters prefer going to a dearer market than making one at the nearest port to the producing districts. And as regards imports, there can scarcely be a better field than Kiangsi if properly worked. The water communication is not inferior to the Grand Canal districts which consume such vast amounts of cotton. All we need here is more foreign capital and energy.

The China Merchants S.N. Company have stationed a hulk at this port, to facilitate the landing and shipment of cargo. Their vessels seem to get full cargoes, and the low rates of freight at which they carry goods is certain to develop trade in bulky and coarse merchandise, which has hitherto gone in junks, owing to heavy freights.

The Roman Catholics have had a disturbance at An-jen-hsien, in the department of Jao-chow, in which a chapel was burned and some converts lost their lives. It is said that the Bishop at once addressed the Footai, who seemed incensed at the liberty taken, and referred the writer to the Kiukiang Taoutai. One would imagine a Bishop or any other foreigner had perfect right to address a governor in cases of great emergency; and in the present case we conclude that the Bishop must have couched his letter in terms of equality—which an official of the rank of Footai would not tolerate—to have met with such a rebuff. The officials look upon a bishop as merely one of the gentry; and in spite of the official pretensions a bishop often assumes, he will never be recognised as holding a higher position. The feeling against the Catholics seems very strong in this province.

The weather is very warm, but the river is so low that we hope to escape a flood this year.

SHANGHAI.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 21st June; the French mail from London May 8 arrived out on the 19th June. The following summary of news is from the North China Herald:—

In the Supreme Court on the 17th June the Chief Judge gave judgment in the cause the Shanghai Race Club v. the Shanghai Cricket Club. The judgment occupied over an hour and a half in delivery. His lordship first dealt with the preliminary objections raised by counsel for defendants. Considering that there were no special rules applicable to the case in the Supreme Court Procedure, he had to fall back, not upon the technical procedure of the Court of Chancery in England, but upon a course of proceeding which would be most in accordance with the practice of an Equity Court situated as the Supreme Court (sitting as a Court of Equity) is situated, and most likely to enable substantial justice to be done between the parties. Passing next to the facts, he reviewed the connection of the institutions involved—the Recreation Fund, Race Club, Race Course and Cricket Club, first giving the undisputed facts and then the versions put forward by the Race Club and Recreation Fund. After examining the ground upon which plaintiffs based their claims for perpetual injunction and upon which that application was resisted by the defendants, his Lordship went on to consider which was the more probable of the two statements of facts and the most conclusive of the two sets of arguments. His conclusion here was that the only facts consistent with truth, with the objects the respective parties had in view, and with their acts as disclosed by the evidence, were that the Race Club purposely burdened the land with the obligation not to build, and that the Recreation Fund Trustees knowingly bought it with the burden upon it.

He then went into the question (1) of who sold the land to the Fund and of whom they bought it; (2) the double payment for the thirty mow; and (3) the circumstances under which the Cricket Club asked for and obtained permission to erect first a matshed and then a pavilion on the ground leased by them from the Recreation Fund. From an analysis of documents, minutes of meetings, reports and other evidence, his Lordship came to the conclusion on the first point that the Recreation Fund bought from the Chinese, remarking that the Race Club could have had no object in buying and selling the land at one and the same moment, unless to free it of an obligation which they had so shortly before taken much trouble to impose. On the second point he found that the weight of evidence was entirely against the assertion of a double payment—the main objection being that the land was originally supposed to measure 466 mow, while the Recreation Fund only bought 430, though they founded the assertion on the nature of their boundaries. On the third point he again reviewed the letters and other documentary evidence adversely to the defendants. His Lordship alluded to the argument of the "deliberate and tremendous fraud" upon the Chinese, and showed that the trustees did at the time entertain the intention upon which their counsel now based it—to preserve the land solely for recreation and never to build. He then referred to the law as summarised by Dart, and concluded by saying that he had not only taken a legal view of the rights and obligations of all parties, but he had taken that also which accorded with truth, with proof, with justice, and above all with honour. The Cricket Club having failed to disburden themselves of the obligation in equity attaching to the land which their lessors purchased, he had no alternative but to grant the perpetual injunction prayed for, with costs.—The verdict was received with applause by a large number of the public who had assembled in court.

There are rumours of an intention to appeal, but we have not heard that notice has been given. The decision is in thorough accordance with the popular view of the question, and had public opinion been consulted the case would never have gone into court. Public feeling was adverse to the litigation in principle, and adverse to the waste of money entailed. We sincerely trust we have now heard the last of it, for any proposal to appeal would, we are sure, be heard with still greater regret.

A meeting of intending shareholders in the North-China Insurance Company was held on the 16th June. The Chairman, Mr. Lavers, explained that the term of the present company expires on the 31st December next, so it was necessary to set about reconstitution. The character of the business had altered of late. The company had now always large lines on a number of ocean steamers leaving all together at the beginning of the season; and this necessitated a larger capital. It was proposed to raise the capital to Tls. 2,000,000, of which Tls. 600,000 shall be paid up. There was a chance, also, of obtaining an order in Council extending the provisions of the Joint-Stock Companies' Act to Shanghai, and thereby enabling them to register as a company, limited or unlimited. It would be necessary to insert in the new deed a clause enabling the company to take advantage of that order if it be promulgated. Mr. Drummond explained at considerable length the disabilities under which companies here, being merely big partnerships, labour; and the difference between limited and unlimited companies.

After a good deal of desultory conversation a resolution in favour of reconstituting the company, proposed by the chairman and seconded by Mr. Wood, was carried:—

That a company, to be called "the North China Insurance Company," shall be formed for a further period of three years, commencing on the 1st day of January, 1875, and terminating on the 31st day of December, 1877.

The following resolution, proposed by Mr. Francis, and seconded by Mr. Purdon, was also carried:—

That the present Court of Directors be elected to act as a provisional committee, with power to add to their number, for the purpose of drawing up a prospectus, receiving applications for and allotting the shares.

Considerable discussion followed as to the desirability of limiting or unlimiting the future company, if it should be registered. It was decided to put off the question for further consideration.

The Registration section of the Order in Council is being carried out, we hear, with all strictness. A fresh batch of over sixty summonses have been applied for; and those to be favoured with this courteous official recognition include, we are told, many who have recently arrived in Shanghai from trips home or as new residents. The first paragraph of section 114 requires residents to register themselves in the month of January of each year; the second ordains that "every British subject * * shall, within one month after his or her arrival, register himself or herself, * * but that no such person shall be required to register himself or herself more than once in any year, reckoned from the 1st day of January."

The first number of a new Chinese newspaper was published on the 16th June. We should more readily welcome this addition to the native press if it had been started more independently. The general impression is that the Che-hsien and his countrymen are launching it in opposition to the Shunpao, on account of the tone taken by the latter regarding the Yang Yeh-liu case. However, it is satisfactory in any case to find that the press is enough appreciated by the Chinese to induce them to start a purely Chinese paper.

Minutes of the two first meetings of the Committee of the Chinese Reading-room have been issued. Several names have been added to the list of members, and the scheme has met, thus far, with fair support. We doubt, however, whether the Committee are not rather sanguine in thinking of buying land and building a house at a cost of Tls. 2,500. The first Tls. 1,000 is proverbially the easiest to collect, and this amount seems to have been pretty readily obtained among foreigners. It remains to be seen how the Chinese list will compare. We are glad to learn that the Taoutai has given the liberal sum of Tls. 200 towards the funds for the institution.

A proclamation has been issued by the Chefoo Taoutai, in regard to the Che-meh riot, and bonds have been entered into by the villagers to keep the peace and to refund the value of Mr. Corbett's property. The proclamation seems a sensible one. An address of thanks has been presented to Mr. Sheppard by certain of his countrymen in Chefoo and the neighbourhood for the firmness and discretion he has shown in pushing through the case.

A meeting of the Asiatic Society has been held, to hear a paper by Mr. E. C. Taintor on "The Aborigines of Northern Formosa." All that relates to the island and its aboriginal inhabitants having a special interest under existing circumstances, the meeting was well attended. Mr. Taintor illustrated his subject by the exhibition of articles of savage manufacture and use.

The report presented at a meeting of the Working Committee of the Sailors' Home discloses an unsatisfactory financial position. Only 189 men entered the Home during the six months ended 31st March last, against 336 during the corresponding period of 1872-3. The result has been that the receipts have not sufficed to cover working expenses, and the Superintendent asks to be recouped $1,341 which he is out of pocket. A reduction in the staff was decided on, and another meeting is to be held in July, to see how the home has gone on during the succeeding three months.

The Municipal Council have refused an application from a Chinese family for permission to perform certain noisy funeral ceremonies at midnight, in terms that have given general satisfaction. We believe in giving the Chinese reasonable license to follow their ways and customs, but we could never see that firing crackers at midnight was a necessity, and we are glad to find the present Council intend firmly to stop the practice.

HONG KONG.

Our advices by the present mail extend to the 27th June; the P. and O. mail from London May 15 was received on the 22nd June. We take the following items of news from the Daily Press:—

With reference to the Japanese expedition to Formosa a correspondent writes under date Takow, 20th June, as follows:—

The Japanese have made considerable progress at Langkiaou, and now seem inclined to rest on their oars for a time. Of the eighteen tribes or villages between Langkiaou and the south point sixteen have come to some terms, and have been given each a Japanese flag with an inscription saying that they are friendly and are not to be molested. The villages of the Bawtans are held by the Japanese. The Bawtans themselves have disappeared entirely, and it is not known what has become of them. The Japanese have occupied Hongkang, the next Chinese village north of Langkiaou, and distant from it about five or six miles. Hongkang is like Langkiaou, a detached village not under regular Chinese Government, and without safe land communication with the north. The inhabitants sent to ask the Japanese to come and protect them against the savages, and offered to find food for the detachment which should take care of them. A camp has been formed on the east coast about opposite to Langkiaou. The island is only eight or nine miles broad there, and the men marched to the spot overland. A very small Chinese village at the extreme south of the island has been occupied. The Delta has lately returned with a large quantity of stores from Nagasaki, but with no more troops.

Two Chinese of rank named Shin and Pan, with Messrs. P. Giquel and Segonzac, have just arrived at Taiwanfoo. Shin bears the rank of Chin-chai, or Imperial Commissioner, and was formerly connected with the Arsenal at Foochow. These two Chinese officials are said to have been sent to inspect certain fortifications. It was generally understood that they were coming to treat with the Japanese, and very probably they have their credentials in their pockets, to be used as circumstances should require. There is a general opinion that the Japanese do not intend quietly to give up the land they have occupied. This, however, is only conjecture, as they have not announced their intentions in any way. It is said that they will be willing to retire when they have settled accounts with the savages, if the Chinese will pay the expenses of the expedition. Whether the Chinese will agree to those terms or not is beyond even the limits of guessing. The Japanese ought to be delighted to get away on such conditions. The land must be perfectly worthless to them. What can the value be of a few square miles of hilly ground with the valleys already occupied, and no decent harbour? To retire without incurring any expense would, after having effected the punishment of the savages, be a most successful termination to a successful undertaking.

It will be observed from the above letter that Mr. P. Giquel, formerly of the Foochow Arsenal, has accompanied the two Chinese Commissioners who have proceeded to that place in reference to the war between Formosa and Japan. The object of the Chinese Commissioners' visits is variously stated as being to inspect certain fortifications and to negotiate with the Japanese Commander-in-Chief. It is hardly necessary to point out that these two objects are widely different in their character, and (what is immediately to the point to which we desire to draw attention) in their bearing upon Mr. Giquel's position in accompanying the mission. If the Chinese officials are mere Commissioners for a civil purpose, there is no absolutely legal objection to his position—although even in this case there are some very grave reasons to object to it upon general grounds—but if it be the fact that the object of the Commissioners is in any way of a warlike character, then Mr. Giquel's mixing up in the affair is a distinct breach of neutrality, and ought to be objected to by his Government. The position which the so-called Commissioners occupy, that of Chin-chai, would be more properly described as that of Ambassadors—the term being the same as that which is applied to the Foreign Ministers at Peking; and if this is their position it is open to grave question how far they ought to be assisted by a foreigner. The scientific knowledge which a skilled European can bring into play in regard to the best mode of taking fortresses and the like matters may be quite sufficient to turn the scale in a war between two such nations as China and Japan; and it is, therefore, somewhat extraordinary to see Mr. Giquel giving his aid to the Chinese under the existing circumstances. It is indeed very unfortunate that we have arrived at a period of our relations with China when Europeans are somehow liable to get mixing up in a very undesirable manner in political affairs.

The Foochow Herald of the 18th June states that Shun-paou-chen, the Chinese official authorised by the Peking Government to negotiate with the Japanese Commander-in-Chief with a view to inducing him to withdraw the troops from Formosa, had taken his departure. The above paper also says that the Japanese forces are much superior in discipline to the Chinese.

The case of Howard v. Curtis has been tried in the Supreme Court before Chief Justice Smale and a special jury. It was an action brought by Mr. Thomas Howard, merchant, Hong Kong, against Mr. Curtis, proprietor of the Hong Kong Times, for damages alleged to have been sustained by plaintiff by the publication of a communication in that paper on the 7th of April last.

The Attorney-General, in the course of his opening statement, said that although the plaintiff claimed damages to the amount of $20,000, he did not expect the jury would give a verdict for that amount; but he hoped they should receive at their hands such a verdict as would justify the action plaintiff had taken, and would deter defendant and others similarly situated from publishing communications reflecting on the good name of anyone.

Mr. Howard was then called, and gave an outline of his connection with the Hong Kong, Singapore, and Borneo Company. In the course of his evidence he said, that when projecting the company he valued the good-will and property at $45,000. Upon this his lordship asked if witness, who was both a buyer and a seller, meant to say he valued it himself, and he said he did. His lordship then remarked that it was a most illegal proceeding, and that that was the way so may joint-stock companies were got up and ruined. Some sharp firing ensued between the bench and bar upon the point, the counsel for plaintiff stating that such a question had nothing to do with the case, and that whether plaintiff had acted properly or improperly in that instance, was really outside the matter altogether. Subsequently his lordship said that plaintiff had always borne an excellent character, and that he did not blame him for doing what he had done, for hundreds of others had done the same, but such an inequitable proceeding, coming under his (his lordship's) notice, he could not let it pass without remark.

Mr. Kingsmill having addressed the jury in mitigation, said that if it met with his lordship's view he would consent to a verdict for plaintiff, and suggested that the damages should be fixed as low as possible. His lordship having assented, a verdict for $25 damages and costs was agreed to.

The case of A. Heard and Co. v. Thompson has also been heard. The action was brought against the captain of the steamship Duna for compensation for injuries done to a buoy in the harbour, which had been placed there by the plaintiffs. After hearing the evidence on both sides his Lordship said it was evident that the anchors had been dragged by the Duna, and he gave a verdict therefore for $170.

The weather has been stormy, and some heavy squalls have been experienced, as broken windows and shutters in various parts of the city testify. In many European houses there are also broken windows, through the carelessness of servants not properly fastening them. In Wyndham-street, close to Peddar's Hill steps, a large tree has been toppled over the bank by the force of a squall, and some damage has been caused to palings in College pathway. A large boat was capsized near the Police-chop, but by the timely aid of the police all the crew were saved.

The British steamship Amoy, which had left this port for Melbourne, put back from Foochow in consequence of a stabbing case which occurred twenty-one miles distant. A fireman named Chun-a-loi stabbed another named Ho-a-sing in the chest with a knife.

Mr. Mitchell, the Postmaster-General, has left by the P. and O. steamer Behar, for Yokohama, on a tour of inspection to the ports. He will visit, in addition, Hiogo, Nagasaki, Shanghai, Hankow, Ningpo, Foochow, Amoy, and Swatow. He will probably return to Hong Kong about the end of July.

Mr. J. Simpson retires from the Post-office service on the pension recently granted to him. We understand that he has some hope of obtaining an appointment under the Japanese Government.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings advices from this port to the 6th July; no later mail from London had been received. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times:—

A curious fact has been brought to our notice with respect to the rewards given to informers under the Gaming Houses Ordinance,—the share usually given being one half the fines inflicted. We erroneously supposed that the provision as to reward extended only to the actual raids on the gambling establishments, and that if unsuccessful and no prisoners were taken the informers would have nothing to get. It appears, however, that it is sometimes more profitable to the informers should no prisoners be taken, as then the owner is usually proceeded against, perhaps fined heavily, and half the fine given to the persons who gave the information against the house, in compensation for having got nothing in the first instance. No information is laid against the owner, he being usually easily traced and served with a summons, and we are surprised to hear that in one case recently, where the police arrested no gamblers in the first instance, half of the $1,000 levied on the unfortunate owner was handed over to the informer; and though the house-owner in question has petitioned Government for a remission of the fine, it is very doubtful if, even in the event of a favourable reply from the Governor, he would ever be able to get his money back. Under an arrangement so favourable to informers, it may be questioned whether they will trouble themselves much to secure the arrest of the real offenders, the gamblers themselves, or tax their ingenuity to discover the actual keepers of the establishment, their pecuniary interest naturally lying in the opposite direction. If it be true that members of the police force in some cases reap the benefit of handsome rewards like this for giving information which it was their bounden duty to give, and are better paid through not arresting the actual offenders than if they had done their duty, then a great public scandal has arisen which calls for immediate action on the part of the Government and the police authorities.

The judgment given by the Chief Justice in the appeal of Hadji Arshad against the decision of Captain Walshe, police magistrate, coincides with our own views on the injustice of the Gaming Houses Ordinance. The decided opinion given by the Chief Justice against this law will no doubt operate to produce its speedy amendment, lest its continued administration produce a greater catastrophe than the mere reversal of a magistrate's decision. In the case under notice there was nothing to show collusion on the part of the owner with the acts of his tenant—his collector did not even go to the premises for the rent, that being paid at the place of business of an agent of the absent tenant—and yet he was mulcted in the heavy sum of $1,000, for which the only satisfaction provided him by the law is the ejectment of his tenant, after the magistrate shall have "declared" it a gaming house.

A few nights since a detective police officer observed a Chinaman offering some coffee for sale at the Kling eating houses in South Bridge-road, at the very low price of fifteen cents per catty, and on questioning him as to how he got possession of it, deemed it advisable to take him into custody. The coolie protested that he had only taken the coffee from his friend's godown, but further inquiry elicited the fact that the prisoner had previously disposed of several other small parcels in the same way, amounting in the aggregate to thirty or forty catties, all of which was taken to the Central Police-station. The coffee is of excellent quality, and has probably been pilfered from a godown. Perhaps an inspection of some of our merchants' stocks might reveal the loss of a much larger quantity.

The following were the resolutions passed at the annual general meeting of the Singapore Exchange, held at the Exchange Room on the 29th June. Proposed by H. Buchanan, Esq., seconded by W. Allen, Esq., "That the accounts of last year be approved and passed." Carried nem. con. Proposed by H. Wood, Esq., seconded by R. I. Harper, Esq., "That the telegram from Saigon for the departure of the homeward French mail be resumed." Carried. Proposed by J. B. Caldbeck, Esq., and seconded by the Hon. W. R. Scott, "That the thanks of the meeting be given to Mr. Brasier for his kindness in furnishing telegraphic information of the departure of the French mails."

The fourth of July being the ninety-eighth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence by the United States of America, the American vessels in harbour dressed ship in honour of the occasion, and the U.S. Consul entertained a number of his countrymen and the residents at tiffin at the Hotel d'Europe.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

Hankow.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer, and Co.'s Report, dated 16th June, says:—Settlements of Tea since 9th inst., the date of our last, although showing a considerable falling off as compared with the previous week, have still been rather large, amounting in all to 23,151 chests, 46,575 half-chests, and 4,042 boxes, particulars of same being, 1,799 half-chests, at 2s. 9d. to 2s. 11d. per lb.; 2,541 half-chests, 603 boxes, at 2s. 5¾d. to 2s. 8¾d.; 3,114 half-chests, at 2s. 2½d. to 2s. 5½d.; 6,067 half-chests, 934 boxes, at 1s. 11½d. to 2s. 1½d.; 2,853 chests, 15,853 half-chests, 225 boxes, at 1s. 8½d. to 1s. 11½d.; 15,295 chests, 11,769 half-chests, 2,000 boxes, at 1s. 5d. to 1s. 8d.; 5,003 chests, 5,432 half-chests, 280 boxes, at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4¾d. The above settlements still show a high range of price, seeing that we are now getting towards the end of the first crop. The last day or two there has been better value obtained in Teas ranging from Tls. 20 to 25, but we do not think these kinds up to the average of last year, and they will require a good market to bring them out. Some better parcels of Ningchow have again found buyers from Tls. 40 to 48, second quality realising Tls. 31 to 36. The best value for this kind has been obtained in the lower grades, which have ranged from Tls. 23½ to 29. Good Hohows have sold up to Tls. 29, common selling at Tls. 19 to 20 per picul. Hankow Teas have ranged from Tls. 15 to 29, one or two parcels realising up to Tls. 33. For the various districts prices paid are:—Oonfars, Tls. 20½ to 28.10 per picul; Cheong-sow-kais, Tls. 20½ to 29½; Soong-yong, Tls. 21¼ to 29; Toong-shans, Tls. 18 to 27½; Young-low-toongs, Tls. 24 to 26; Low-yongs, Ping-kongs, Wun-kais, &c., Tls. 17 to 23; Lee-lings, Tls. 15½ to 29¾; Ko-kew and Nip-car-sees, Tls. 15 to 18½; Shun-tam, Tls. 15.

Shanghai.—There had been a considerable business done in Black Tea during the week. In some cases prices had been slightly under those of last mail, but the market was firm at the close, and no general decline was quoted. Hohows and Ningchows had been most in request, the stock still affording but a poor selection of Hankow Teas. Settlements for the week, 20,069 chests; Re-shipments, 3,567 chests; Total, 23,636 chests; Stock, 27,200 chests.

Foochow.—Messrs. Westall, Galton and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—A large business has been passing in this market since the opening, and prices for all kinds, excepting good medium and fine Congous, have been well supported. The first crop is expected to be short of last year. Arrivals and settlements for the week are:—Congous: Arrivals, 49,300 chests; Settlements, 85,703. Souchong: Arrivals, 4,800 chests; Settlements, 1,300 chests. Oolong: Arrivals, 8,130 half-chests; Settlements, 1,078 half-chests. Flowery Pekoes: Arrivals, 1,700 chests; Settlements, 732 chests. Scented Teas: Arrivals, 7,000 boxes; Settlements, 8,100 boxes. Congous: Buyers havs operated freely, the good medium and fine grades are cheaper, but the common and low kinds have been eagerly taken by Australian buyers, good flavoury dust bringing Tls 9 to 9½ short; the market closes steady. Souchong: A few chops of choice have been taken at 2 Taels over last year's rates; with few exceptions the crop is poor. Oolongs: The settlements made are at rates about on a par with opening prices. Flowery Pekoes: Some 700 chests have found buyers; prices are fully up to last year. Scented Teas are in good demand, and fine parcels have realised extreme rates; most of the Teas are still very deficient in scent. The Export to Great Britain, the Continent of Europe, and the Cape of Good Hope is 8,230,396 lbs., against nil. To America, nil., against nil. To the Colonies, 496,860 lbs., against nil. Freights: To London:—£4 per ton for steamers. No sailing vessels on the berth. Exchange: On Lond on six months' sight, credits, 4s. 4½d. On Hong Kong, fifteen days' sig ht private, ¾ to 1 per cent. discount. On Shanghai, Tls 72½ to 73 pe $100.

Naval and Military.

Captain C. K. Brooke, 15th Regiment, proceeds out to China as Brigade-Major, vice Captain Walker, 99th Regiment, lately returned to England. Captain Brooke joined the Army in 1862, and purchased his company in 1870. He passed from the Staff College in December last.

Mr. James Campbell, paymaster, has been appointed to the Princess Charlotte, receiving-ship, at Hong Kong. Israel Harding (first-class gunner), Messrs. Edwin Wingate, Thomas Kirby, and William Richards (second-class gunners), Mr. Joseph Larkin (first-class boatswain), Messrs. John Cullinane, John Allen, and F. J. Gurney (second-class boatswain), and Mr. James May (second-class carpenter), have been appointed to the Victor Emanuel, at Hong Kong. Mr. John Albert Mahoxey (second-class boatswain) has been appointed to the Swinger, gunboat, on the China station.

The following officers, whose last period of service was on the China station, have received appointments as under:—Lieutenant G. A. Ellis (in the Princess Charlotte from March 22, 1872, to 1873), to the Hector, coastguard ship, in Southampton Water; Lieutenant C. W. Sleeman (in the Zebra from June 12, 1871, to 1873), to the Pallas, screw corvette, Mediterranean.

The Audacious, 14, double-screw iron ship, armour-plated, 6,034 (3,774) tons, 4,021 (800) horse-power, fitting at Chatham as flag-ship for the China station, will be ready for the pendant in a few days. Last week a seaman employed in rigging this ship accidentally fell from aloft into the dock, a distance of fifty feet, and was picked up dead.

Capt. Richmond, lately returned from the Gold Coast, is under orders to embark for Hong Kong to join the 80th regiment, on promotion from the 50th Regiment.

THE CONVEYANCE OF THE MAILS.

The amended contract between the Government and the P. and O. Company for the conveyance of the mails to and from India and the Far East, whereby the Company obtain permission to make use of the Suez Canal in return for the surrender of £30,000 in their annual subsidy, has been issued. The alterations which have been made affect the 8th, 11th, 19th, and 20th clauses of the contract, and these clauses as amended stand as follows:—

Clause 8. The Company shall convey the mails from Brindisi to Bombay in 422 hours, and from Bombay to Brindisi in 424 hours, and from Brindisi to Point de Galle in 472 hours, and from Point de Galle to Brindisi in 488 hours, and from Brindisi to Shanghai in 965 hours, and from Shanghai to Brindisi in 1,008 hours, and from Southampton to Bombay in 677 hours, and from Bombay to Southampton in 666 hours, and from Southampton to Point de Galle in 727 hours, and from Point de Galle to Southampton in 730 hours, and from Brindisi to Calcutta in 646 hours, and from Calcutta to Brindisi in 663 hours, and from Bombay to Shanghai in 618 hours, and from Shanghai to Bombay in 611 hours, and from Hong Kong to Yokohama in 170 hours, and from Yokohama to Hong Kong in 170 hours, and each of the periods of hours, hereinbefore specified is to be reckoned as exclusive of stoppages for the purpose of the delivery and reception of the mails. And the arrangements for determining and recording the exact time of the arrival and departure of the vessels at and from the several places above named, and the period of every delay which shall take place on any voyage, shall be under the exclusive regulation of the Postmaster-General, whose decision upon all questions relating to those matters shall be final.

Clause 11. In the event of any vessel of the company whilst passing through the Suez Canal in the performance of any of the services hereby agreed to be performed becoming unable, by reason of the stranding of such vessel in the said canal, or of any other difficulty or obstruction incident to the navigation thereof, to complete its passage through the canal in due course, the company shall use their utmost endeavours to prevent any delay in the delivery of the mails, and with that object shall employ in the subsequent conveyance of any mails on board such stranded or impeded vessel to their destination any other vessel belonging to the company which may be at Suez, Port Said, or Alexandria, and available for the service.

Clause 19. If on any homeward voyage from Bombay, Calcutta, Shanghai, or Point de Galle to Brindisi the company shall fail to deliver Her Majesty's mails at Brindisi for twelve hours or more after the time at which the same ought to be delivered according to the provisions of this contract, which shall for the time being be in force, then, and in every such case the company shall forfeit and pay to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the sum of £200 for every complete period of twelve hours during which the delivery of such mails shall be delayed beyond the time at which the same ought to be delivered as aforesaid. Provided always that the payment of any such penalty as aforesaid shall not be enforced against the company if it be shown by them to the satisfaction of the Postmaster-General that the delay has arisen from damage to the vessel or the machinery thereof.

Clause 20. If on any voyage from Hong Kong to Yokohama or from Yokohama to Hong Kong, or from Bombay to Shanghai, or from Shanghai to Bombay, the company shall fail to deliver Her Majesty's mails at Yokohama or Hong Kong, Bombay or Shanghai, as the case may be, for twelve hours or more after the time at which the same ought to be delivered, according to the provisions of this contract which shall for the time being be in force, then and in every such case the company shall forfeit and pay to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the sum of £100 for every complete period of twelve hours during which the delivery of such mails shall be delayed beyond the time at which the same ought to be delivered, as aforesaid, provided always that the payment of any such penalty as aforesaid shall not be enforced against the company if it be shown by them to the satisfaction of the Postmaster-General that the delay has arisen from damage to the vessel or the machinery thereof. Provided always, and it is hereby declared, that, during the prevalence of the south-west monsoon, ninety-six additional hours shall be allowed for the voyages from Bombay to Southampton, from Bombay to Brindisi, or from Calcutta to Suez, and from Shanghai to Bombay, and, during the prevalence of the north-east monsoon, ninety-six additional hours shall be allowed for the voyage from Bombay to Shanghai, and twenty-four additional hours shall be allowed for the voyage from Hong Kong to Yokohama.

The alterations in these clauses may be summed up thus:—In Clause 8, the number of hours to be allowed for the carriage of the mails over several of the routes omitted in the first contract are inserted in the second. In Clause 11, the provisions with respect to stranding in the Suez Canal are made applicable to voyages out and home. In Clause 19, the penalties imposed for failure to perform within the appointed time the voyages from Bombay or Point de Galle to Brindisi are extended, by the second contract, to the voyages from Calcutta or Shanghai to Brindisi, and the amount of such penalty is in each case quadrupled. Further, the penalty is made absolute. Clause 20 in the second contract applies to the routes between Hong Kong and Yokohama, and between Bombay and Shanghai, the same quadruple penalty which is fixed with reference to other routes, and makes the penalty absolute.

FRANCE.

In the sitting of the National Assembly on the 4th inst. the Government Bill on the treaty concluded at Saigon in March last between France and the kingdom of Annam came on for discussion. M. l'Amiral Jaures demanded urgency. This was agreed to, and the House was about to vote when M. Georges Perrin rose to make a few remarks about the colony of Cochin China. He said that in the beginning the proposal to create a naval and military establishment had not been questioned. Events had led to the formation of a colony, which it was necessary to conserve, although this might be done without drawing the sword. The draft of the treaty obliged the House to give to the King of Annam the necessary support to defend him against all attacks, and to destroy the piracy that desolated a part of the coast of his kingdom. This was an engagement which it would be impossible to keep. Moreover, the influence of the Catholic missions on French politics had led to this unhappy expedition. Now the article 9 of the treaty accorded to the missionaries important prerogatives, and the political action of these missionaries would create grave complications. It would be necessary, in order to execute the treaty, to have recourse to costly and ruinous expeditions. It would be a war of religion which would be introduced into the kingdom of Annam. As for the occupation of Tonking, with the view to establish a great French Empire in the extreme East, it would be a chimerical undertaking. If the House did not wish to reject the treaty, it would be right to submit it to the progress of the three readings (lectures). M. l'Amiral Jaures answered that as a considerable establishment existed in Cochin China it was our duty to keep it. The treaty confirmed the French in the possession of three new provinces, and the receipts of the colony were augmenting every day, but it was necessary to maintain order. The King of Annam knew the advantages of French protection, and he was disposed to execute the treaty. As for the missionaries, they only asked to be enabled to preach the Gospel, and not to mix in politics. From a commercial point of view there were considerable advantages to gather from this treaty, not only for France, but for Europe. The closing of the discussion was then voted, and the Bill was adopted.

HOLLAND.

AMSTERDAM, AUGUST 5.

We are still waiting for a complete Cabinet. The list which I have already sent you seems correct, except that the portfolio of the Naval Department will continue to be held by Mr. Taalman Kip, who was appointed only a few months since, when the Ministry asked for their dismissal. It is stated that the list has been forwarded to Montreux, where the King resides, for approval. Of course the approval will come, for there is no other choice. It is a great objection that the Minister for the Foreign Department should be a clerical, which it seems he is, although it is asserted that he is a Roman Catholic à la Van der Maesen. It is, however, of no use to anticipate. It is said that we shall not have a decision before the 20th inst.

Mr. Verspyck has arrived in the Hague, but he was wise enough not to accept any manifestation of popular feeling. He has started for Brussels, and some papers say that he will for the future reside at Arnhem, while others assert that he prefers the Hague. His behaviour is applauded by all the parties, except by those who hoped to make political capital out of his reception.

It seems that it is impossible to find in Holland a staff of medical men for our army in Java. The most attractive conditions are now offered to German doctors who may volunteer for the service.

The official report upon the colonies for 1874 has been published, so far as regards Java. It contains sixty pages. The Minister has hastened its publication because the members have for several years expressed a desire that the report should be printed at the same time as the Budget is examined in the sections. The report extends to the 1st of June. The following statements are made regarding our territory, which has been extended over a district which was formerly called the independent northern part of Sumatra. Whilst our authority has been established in Grand-Atjeh by means of a military occupation, the Dutch sovereignty has been acknowledged by most of the Atjeh States on the west coast, and by several on the northern and north-eastern coasts. The island of Bengkalis, opposite the mouth of the Siak river (East Sumatra), has been yielded by the Sultan of Siak for a consideration of f.8,000 a-year. This island has a surface of twenty-three geographical miles, is most favourably situated for the trade, is very fertile, and it promises to become a most important possession. Statements of a political and general character are given regarding our relations with foreign powers, especially concerning our war with Atjeh. The Java Government, in its intercourse with the Straits Settlements, has experienced the utmost goodwill. The Governor of the Straits has warned the inhabitants by means of a proclamation against the intrigues of the Mahommedans, whose aim it is to excite a revolt in Java. A British man-of-war was despatched in July, 1873, to ascertain whether the blockade was effective. An appeal being made that legitimate trade should not be hindered by the measures which were taken against Atchin, it was answered by a declaration that under existing circumstances a rigid blockade was thought to be absolutely necessary. The Consulates at Singapore and Penang, however, were authorised to furnish licenses to those vessels which were bound for Atchin, in order to convey produce on which money had been advanced. A great many ships were provided with licenses, but privilege was revoked when the Government was convinced that all the merchandise had been transported. It was permitted to the Japanese Government to send a chief officer of the medical service in Japan with the expedition. In consequence of the messages which were forwarded by the Sultan of Atchin to Constantinople, in order to ask for the protection of the Turkish Government, some diplomatic notes were exchanged with that Government, by which our friendly relations were maintained. The request of the Government of Queensland for permission to engage Javanese to work in the sugar plantations could not be granted because no satisfactory stipulations for the protection of emigrants exist. According to a statement appended to the volume the following States have already submitted to our authority, viz., on the West Coast, the States of Troemon and Waylah, Loong and Lepong, those States between Waylah and Loong, remaining unsubdued. On the East Coast are submitted: Gighen, Endjoeng, Pasei, Kurti, Edi, Soengei Raya, Temiang. Not submitted: Merdoe, Salamangan, Pasangan, Kloempang Doea, Telok, Samawe, Simpang, Olim, Perlak, and Langsar. When the Commander-in-chief left Atjeh the Resident Kroesen and the First-class Controller R. W. Tadema had joined Colonel Pels in the management of political affairs. According to an instruction handed to Colonel Pels he was directed to use all possible friendly means to engage the chiefs and the population of Great Atchin to submit themselves and to maintain friendly relations with the already submitted States; as to those who refuse to listen to friendly proposals, they must be compelled to submission by a rigorous blockade. He was advised not to undertake military operations during the rainy season unless they were required to defend his positions and to protect our friendly chiefs. In a proclamation of the 23rd of April the Commander-in-Chief announced to the population of the three Sagies that he had left Atjeh with all the troops which could be spared, that Atjeh would be occupied "for ever," that it was not the intention to organise a direct Government, but that a native chief would govern the three Sagies under the control of the Dutch. The report gives further particulars about the endeavours of a committee at Penang (the so-called Council of Eight), consisting of four Atchinese, two Arabs, and two Klingaleses, which excited the opposition in Atchin and endeavoured to create revolts in other parts of Java. These endeavours were unsuccessful, as we were too vigilant and the British Government helped us. The merchants at Penang waited with impatience for the raising of the blockade, and as soon as the trade with Gighen could be opened this was done. When the Kraton was taken endeavours were made to engage Chinese merchants from Penang and Java to establish themselves in Atchin and to open a trade, but without success. In the meanwhile all that is possible will be done to encourage trade with Atchin.

On the Bourse things are still very dull, and scarcely any transactions take place. There is plenty of money, but no means of investing it. Our colonial produce market is somewhat firmer, expecially for Coffee, which is in fair demand at 59c. to 59½c.

FOREIGN COMPETITION IN SILK MANUFACTURE.

The Coventry ribbon trade has for some time past been in a very depressed condition, from what cause has never been satisfactorily ascertained; but, on the other hand, so far as can be learned, the Continental manufacturers have been doing a good trade, and are at present abundantly supplied with orders. Among the weavers of Coventry, however, there has lately arisen an anxious desire to know the actual position of their Continental rivals. A committee, formed of representatives of both political parties, met together, and after discussion resolved, if the necessary funds could be procured, that a deputation of weavers should visit the principal centres of the Swiss ribbon trade, obtain what information they could, and report to the general body. From their report it appears the members for the city (Mr. H. W. Eaton and Mr. H. M. Jackson) were communicated with, and they agreed to render every assistance, and each promised to pay half the expense. A deputation was formed, which, after visiting Mr. Jackson, started for Basle, where they visited a Basle factory belonging to a gentleman named Borkings. This was the only place to which they could gain admittance. The arrangement of the looms is different from the English arrangement, and they are, as a rule, splendid pieces of machinery. They are worked by a hole along the front, unlike the Coventry looms, which are turned by a wheel at the end. The silk is much superior, and a finer ribbon is produced, in addition to a greater quantity of work being made than by the Coventry weaver. The price paid at Sissah for making a 24 dy. Oriental black ribbon in a 14-shuttle loom was 96f., or £3 18s. in English money, for the whole set of warps, measuring 160 yards. In nearly all the houses they saw a filling machine, which filled four or six quills at a time, effecting a great saving of labour. At Pucken some ribbon was seen in course of manufacture very similar to some which has lately been made at Coventry. The deputation, after making some further inquiries, started for England, and reached Coventry last week, having been absent ten days. The deputation think it right that the weavers of Coventry should know their real position, and they believe the outdoor weavers of Switzerland are their chief competitors. This opinion is confirmed by the fact that they were all well employed, whilst the Coventry weavers were idle. They consider the Coventry weavers are equal, if not superior, to those of the Continent, but think the machinery of the latter is far superior. They wish to draw attention to the fact that all the looms, filling machines, &c., belong to the manufacturer in Switzerland, that everything is found for the weaver, that the warps are all cleared, "picking up" being dispensed with. Then, again, the weavers have longer lengths, never less than 160 yards, and they never "cut out" till the "warps are down." The deputation think that something should be done to make the competition a little more equal; and, indeed, it is their opinion that if something is not done Coventry will eventually lose what little trade she now possesses. They therefore hope the manufacturers and weavers of Coventry will take the matter into their serious consideration.

CONSULAR CHAPLAINS.

The select committee which has been appointed to inquire into the circumstances attending the withdrawal of the allowances granted to consular chaplains have agreed to their report. They say: "It appears from Lord Granville's circular of July 31, 1873, that the Treasury do not sanction grants to any new Church Establishments at consular ports, and the grants have consequently become confined to certain particular places. The inquiry of your committee has, therefore, been exclusively directed to the expediency of continuing the Government grants to those in existence at the date of that circular. These, with one exception, are situated at seaport towns. Your committee has inquired into the circumstances attending the withdrawal of grants to consular chaplains, and is of opinion that in some cases hardship will be inflicted by such withdrawal, which it is desirable to remove or alleviate.

The Pacific Mail Company.—A correspondent of the New York Times at San Francisco writes as follows:—The splendid steam-ship Colima, of the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, is lying in the roadstead, trim and sharp as a racer, ready for its course. On the night of the 18th anchor was weighed, and our course directed out of the bay into the Pacific. The Colima is one of the finest iron ships of the line, and is a staunch seaworthy craft of 3,000 tons, built at Roach's yards, at Chester, Penn. The engines are compound, and of 2,000-horse power; and the ship has accommodation for nearly 200 cabin passengers and 300 steerage. It is gratifying to learn of the immense business and deserved popularity of the Company. Its fast ships are the admiration of the people here. The Granada, of this line, has just arrived, having made the fastest trip on record, and bringing the time between Yokohama and San Francisco down to seventeen days. The Colima, will take out Gen. Van Buren, the recently-appointed Consul at Yokohama, and also Gen. Wm. Myers and Col. Lyford, United States Army. The two last named gentlemen go out as special commissioners of the United States to his Imperial Majesty, the Tenno of Japan, and bear valuable presents from this Government to the latter.

With reference to the wreck of the steamer Gordon Castle, from Hankow, a telegram from Lisbon states that considerable progress has been made in stripping the vessel of all top weight and lightening her of cargo, but operations are rendered difficult by the fact that the holds can only be worked at low tide, and that, in consequence of the tea being swollen with water, the chests are jammed so tight as to render it at times necessary to use a crowbar to start them. As soon as the forehold has been cleared of cargo it may be necessary to build up a strong wooden bulkhead from the main to the upper deck, so as to keep the water confined to the fore compartment. The cargo is so much damaged by salt water that it is believed to be valueless. The slightest westerly breeze would bring in a heavy sea and break the steamer up.

Postage of Newspapers to the Far East.—The Gazette contains a Treasury Warrant, which will come into operation on the 1st of September, regulating the rates of British postage on registered newspapers posted in the United Kingdom or in Gibraltar or Malta, and addressed to British India, China, Japan, Ceylon, or the Straits Settlements. The rates of postage upon newspapers not exceeding four ounces in weight via Southampton is reduced to one penny, and it is notified that newspapers which are found to exceed the regulation weight but which bear a penny stamp will be forwarded and the deficient postage will be charged on their delivery. The rate of postage via Brindisi remains unaltered.

The Nederland Company's Royal Mail steamship Prinses Amalia has just completed her first passage to the East, making the run, we believe, in the shortest time ever recorded. Her dates are as follows:—Left Southampton 19th June, arrived at Naples 27th June; left Naples 28th June, arrived at Port Said 3rd July; left Port Said 5th July; left Suez 6th July, arrived at Padang 23rd July; being thirty-four days' voyage from port to port, of which thirty-one only were steaming days, and three days stoppages.

The Java Steamship Company's screw steamer Java, Captain J. D. Gollards, sailed from Southampton yesterday (9th inst.), taking the Dutch mails, troops, thirty-seven passengers, specie, and a full cargo of general merchandise, bound for Padang, Batavia, Samarang, Sourabaya, and Macassar.

MR. MAYERS' MISSION TO NAN-CHANG FOO.

Mr. Mayers' official report of his expedition to Nan-chang foo in October of last year is now before us, and we are bound to say that the result is not so satisfactory as it should be, for it contains unmistakable evidence of the continuance of our fatal shilly-shallying policy in dealing with the shortcomings of the Chinese Government and its officials. Considering that Mr. Mayers was deputed by Her Majesty's Minister at Peking to confer with Lin Kwen-yih, the Governor of the province of Kiang-si, on certain matters of grave importance relating to the undoubted Treaty rights of British subjects, it seems very extraordinary to find him naïvely confessing that, during the interview, he "bore steadily in mind the absence of any definite instructions," and that he only believed himself justified in saying this, that, and the other. We were aware that Mr. Wade has a singular way of dealing with all questions that arise in regard to our Treaty rights in China, but, had not Mr. Mayers told us so himself, we could hardly have believed it possible that Mr. Wade would despatch an officer on such an errand as Mr. Mayers' without very definite instructions indeed. Our grounds of complaint against the Chinese officials and others in the province of Kiang-si are perfectly simple, and admit of no argument, and it was Mr. Wade's duty to demand and insist upon having immediate redress. Be that as it may, Mr. Mayers tells us that the purpose of his visit to Nan-chang was to discuss with Lin Kwen-yih three matters of great importance to British merchants and travellers in that part of China, viz., the treatment of foreigners at Nan-chang, the question of inland transit duties, and that of the I-ning chow tea duties. As to the last-named item, Mr. Mayers observes that "in consequence of the information which he had obtained at "Kiu-kiang . . . and of his own strong conviction that "any urgent pressure on this subject would be harmful "rather than beneficial to mercantile interests, he "deemed it expedient to keep it in the background." During the discussion which ensued on the first point, Mr. Mayers very properly declined to recognise the possibility of the authorities finding any difficulty in keeping the populace in order, although Governor Lin appealed to his long experience of the Chinese to confirm his assertion of his own powerlessness; and on the principle, we presume, of fiat experimentum in corpore vili, Mr. Mayers suggested that Commander Pitman, R.N., and Mr. Brenan should forthwith take a walk through the town, in order to put the disposition of the people to a practical test. Having on the previous day sent word to Mr. Mayers that, as the military examinations were then in progress, and 6,000 students with their followers were in the city, "he would advise their abstaining from going on shore," the Governor was not unnaturally disconcerted by this proposal, but, as an astute Chinese official always does, "he quickly recovered himself and approved the "suggestion, saying,—'By all means; the people will be "'perfectly quiet; they know, in fact, that you are friends "'of mine—it is not as if it were a case of French mis-"'sionaries making their appearance. Everybody knows "'that there is no harm about the English, Americans, "'&c.'" The gentlemen accordingly made the experiment, and it is clear that they owed their return without injury not so much to any kindly disposition on the part of the populace as to the fact of their being "attended by upwards of 100 official retainers, who fended "a way for them through the vast crowd which was gathered outside, and escorted them through several of the "principal streets." During their absence Mr. Mayers eventually induced the Governor "to undertake that a "Proclamation should be issued, warning the populace "against offering any annoyance to Europeans during "future visits to Nan-chang," but apparently he would not promise "to hold the district magistrates personally answerable for breaches of the peace," and as that is the best possible, if not the only, means of ensuring the preservation of order in a Chinese town, we are afraid that the Proclamation will very soon become a dead letter. Until the Chinese Government be treated with much greater firmness than at present, and, indeed, until they have been taught a very severe lesson on the subject, we fear that troubles on this score will constantly arise, and we doubt not that the day will come, sooner or later, when some power will find itself absolutely compelled to take the remedy into its own hands. The words which we have placed in italics in the Governor's brief speech, quoted above, show unmistakably that "the inclination traceable in the disposition "of the Nan-chang authorities to discourage the visits of "Europeans to the city is mainly, if not altogether, attributable to the hostility which Governor Lin scarcely "seeks to conceal with regard to the Roman Catholic missionaries;" and Mr. Mayers was quite right to take the opportunity of pointing out to him that "he was wrong "to distinguish between the subjects of different foreign "powers," when he heard him give orders to the Prefect that some runners should go with Commander Pitman and Mr. Brenan, "and should let the people know that they were not Frenchmen."

What may be termed the commercial portion of Mr. Mayers' mission seemingly occupied but a very small part of his three hours' interview with Lin Kwen-yih. On the question of the I-ning chow tea duties (true to his determination alluded to at the beginning of this article), he "said no more than was necessary, in his opinion, to show "his Excellency that the attention of Her Majesty's "Minister was fixed upon the subject, expressing no opinion, and making no complaint." With regard to the transit pass grievance, after a short and inconclusive discussion, the Governor undertook to have another Proclamation issued "to repeat in a public manner his assurance that no molestation would be offered to legitimate trade." In view of the future opening of the rivers and lakes of China to the navigation of foreign vessels, the most satisfactory part of this expedition to Nan-chang is that Commander Pitman was enabled to complete a survey of the surrounding country and the channel of the Poyang Lake, and the "result of his labours is the important discovery "that a vessel drawing even as much water as H.M.S. "Ringdove (ten feet) might with safety ascend the river "as far as Nan-chang itself, except, of course, during the "winter season."

THE TRADE OF VENICE.

We have in these columns more than once called attention to the actual state of trade and navigation at Venice. Upwards of a year since we noticed the able and elaborate report issued by the local Chamber of Commerce for the year 1872, and from the extracts and the observations made thereon our readers will have seen that a most favourable impulse had been given to commerce, and that progressive improvement might be considered certain. The report of the same Chamber on trade and navigation for the year 1873, not less elaborate, not less able, but more satisfactory even than the preceding one, is now before us, and while we cannot but lament the almost utter absence at Venice of those means and appliances for facilitating and encouraging trade with which modern art develops and completes natural advantages, we nevertheless rejoice at the results of the past year, and we are led to hope that, with the facts and figures which we are about to present before them, some among our great capitalists, our men of energy and enterprise, may deem the field there opening worthy of their attention.

A glance at these tables is sufficient to show that the commerce of Venice is essentially one of transit, and in fact, her position at the inmost extremity of the great Adriatic Gulf renders her not only the natural port of the Lombardo-Venetian territory, but also of Switzerland, South Germany, and the North of France, and when the new direct line of railway by the Val Sugana is opened, and the Saint Gothard tunnel is completed, those countries must and will turn to her in preference to Genoa and Marseilles, and she will thus eventually and most certainly become the great maritime entrepôt and market for Central Europe and the Far East. We have already more than once alluded to the want in Venice of accommodation and of those general arrangements which attract commerce and facilitate operations. It is a fact, stranger than even fiction, that while Genoa, Trieste, Marseilles, &c., abound in local companies and ship-owners, and send forth their own steam vessels to every part of the world, Venice does not possess even one. Neither has she a single dock for the reception or repairing of vessels, and bonding warehouses for the storage of merchandise which such vessels might bring are as yet unknown. Steamers arriving with grain, for instance, not finding storage room available for their cargoes have been known to leave again and take them to Trieste, and the visitor to the Custom-house may sometimes see bags of coffee or sugar lying out in the rain, unavoidably so exposed owing to the want of a roof to protect them.

Energetic attempts have been made to remedy such a state of things, but in the wrong traditional direction; Government aid and interference is expected; public money is waited and waited for to do that which there ought to be, as it is elsewhere, done by private enterprise and initiative. Meritorious efforts are being made to form a local steam navigation company to run a line of steamers properly adapted to meet the requirements of Central European-Oriental traffic; and could this really be effected the results would be incalculable; not only would trade be increased, but a constant supply of raw material would create and develop industrial enterprise, and private fortunes and public prosperity would be alike benefited. Neither goodwill nor capital are wanting in Venice; but practical experience, energy, and a general interest in and devotion to work are wanting. Mutual diffidence prevails. The workmen and the materials await the architect.

In our Parliamentary Intelligence it will be seen that the alterations in the P. and O. Company's contract have been approved and passed by the House of Commons. In the discussion on the subject some of the members who opposed its acceptance treated the contract as if it were entirely a new one, instead of alterations on the one already existing and having some six years yet to run.

His Excellency Sano Tsounetami, Minister Resident of Japan in Vienna, has entered upon the leave of absence granted him by the Japanese Government, and will, after spending a short time at Ischl, return to Japan. The Secretary of Legation, Hiromoto Watanabe, will remain at Vienna as Chargé d'Affaires.

EDUCATION IN JAPAN.

A Report on the present Educational System of Japan has been made by Mr. Watson, Her Majesty's Secretary of Legation. In forwarding this report to Earl Granville Sir Harry Parkes encloses with it four papers on the foreign and native teachers, the Japanese students, and the Japanese educational officials. The report says :—

It will be remembered that the Japanese Government decreed some eighteen months since that National Schools should be established throughout the country, and some of the principal provisions of this important Act were as follows:—The administration of learning in the whole country was to be directed by the Mombushô, or Educational Department, alone, and the whole country was to be divided into seven circuits, called High School Circuits, in each of which a High School was to be established. Inspectors were to be appointed to each district, to each of whom twenty or thirty schools were to be assigned. All subjects, whether nobles or peasants, who went to school were to report this fact to the Inspector, and if the younger members of a family did not attend, the reason for their not doing so was to be duly reported. The time of study was to be five hours a day for six months. The schools were to be divided into High, Middle, and Primary schools, and all teachers were to be qualified by diploma. In addition to a thorough provision for education at home a certain number of students were to be educated abroad at the Government expense. This educational law, although only promulgated in the middle of 1872, has been extensively carried into effect already, and Mr. Watson reports that according to the statement of Mr. Tanaka, the Vice-Minister of Public Instruction, 1,799 private schools and 3,630 public schools have been established, and at these schools there are under instruction 338,463 male and 109,637 female pupils, to which number may be added 30,000 in the higher schools, making a total of 480,000 persons, or one in sixty-eight of the entire population.

The educational establishments now actually in operation in Yedo are the following, namely, the "Dai Gakko," or University, which includes several separate colleges for the study of medicine, jurisprudence, philosophy, and mining, as also a polytechnic college. The veterinary, commercial, and agricultural colleges, as likewise the college of arts, have not as yet been opened. The "Go Gakko," a school for instruction in foreign languages; several private schools, destined likewise for imparting instruction in foreign languages; the "Shi Han Gakko," or normal school for the instruction of Japanese teachers; a principal female school, several preparatory schools, and certain establishments in connection with some of the public departments, which are designed for imparting knowledge of special subjects.

The course of instruction followed at the Naval College, as well as the discipline which is enforced, is similar to those observed at the like institutions in England. The cadets wear the usual naval uniform. As the Naval College was only reopened under the present direction in the course of the present autumn, a sufficiently long period has scarcely yet elapsed to admit of a well-based opinion being formed as to its probable results; but, so far, everything promises favourably as respects this establishment—an establishment from which Japan may derive more real advantage from a material point of view, than from any increase of her importance as a naval Power.

That the nature of the education in Japan is entirely secular will be gathered from the remarks of Mr. Watson upon the subject. He says :—"In reply to my inquiry, Mr. Tanaka said that it is the intention of the Japanese Government to make education in Japan, so far as the State is concerned, entirely secular, in as far as is consistent with the fundamental tenets of the Shinto faith. I have since learnt from a reliable source that the Government have resolved that, whilst they will not interfere with private missionary enterprise in Japan, no Christian divine will be employed even as a secular teacher in the Government's employ".

In alluding to the indirect agencies which are now in operation tending to the spread amongst the Japanese of the ideas which influence the conduct of Western nations, Mr. Watson gives a prominent place to steam. He considers the introduction of steam as a motive power to have had great influence on the habits and ideas of the people of Japan, and he predicts a like effect in the case of the telegraph. As a proof of the progress and the educational influences at work it may be mentioned that there are in Yedo eighteen newspapers, some of them published daily. The Nishinshinjishi has a daily circulation of 1,500 copies. There is a provincial press, a postal system, a system of lighthouses, and a mint.

In concluding his report Mr. Watson says :—I think I ought to point out that, whilst very many educational influences are at work, such as I have endeavoured to specify, yet it cannot reasonably be expected that the progress of newly introduced Western customs and ideas should work a revolution throughout an entire race in the course of even a few years. According to all experience a sufficient length of time must be allowed for at least one freshly-educated generation to arise before any radical, general, and lasting change may be expected to take place in the ideas and habits of the mass of a people.

The introduction of foreign manners, as that of foreign costume, which has come about in Japan is as yet mainly confined to members of the Court, or of the official classes ; the domestic and industrial habits of the bulk of the people remain as they were in former years.

The inclosures on the subject of Foreign and Native Teachers, Native Officials, and Japanese Students, are extracts from the Japan Mail.

BORNEO.

The report by Consul-General Bulwer on the trade and commerce of Borneo for the year 1873 is confined to the trade and commerce of the port of Brunei, for the trade returns of other districts are unobtainable. After reviewing the trade of Borneo Proper with China in earlier times, the report gives some details of the progress of British trade with the island. This trade has been almost exclusively carried on with the settlements of Singapore and Labuan, that of Singapore being confined to Brunei, while the trade of Labuan extends to other parts of the coast. The value of imports of Borneo Proper from Singapore and Labuan was as follows :—1857, £31,836 ; 1866, £43,701 ; 1872, £53,678 ; the exports being, 1857, £36,536 ; 1866, £46,681 ; 1872, £63,254. The principal obstacles to material progress in the country are a weak central Government, the character of the people, and the want of capital and enterprise. The mineral wealth of the country is in the hands of the Eastern Archipelago Company, a fact which is prejudicial to the interests of the country, and the extension of British trade.

JAVA.

The report by Consul McLean on trade, commerce, shipping, and general matters in Java for the year 1872 is very comprehensive. The new sugar law enacted in Holland has had a very beneficial effect on the island, while the establishment of the telegraphic system has proved highly important. With regard to the imports Mr. McLean says :—

Stocks at the beginning of the year were considerable, consisting chiefly of goods carried over from the past season, owing to the material decline in values at the close. For these importers were still unable to obtain covering rates, as the extended facilities by wire and steam of ordering and placing on the market within six weeks new and more suitable goods prevented the rise in values which had been anticipated. During the first six or eight months of the year a fair business as to amount of goods disposed of was done, but remunerative, or in many cases even covering, prices were with difficulty obtained. The scarcity of rice, which was most felt towards the close of the season, and the high prices demanded for this article of subsistence, left the natives no money to spend in clothes, and sales of piece goods became practically impossible, while the Chinese and Arab dealers had great difficulty in collecting their outstanding debts and meeting their engagements. Several failures of small traders resulted from these causes, and at the close of the year business generally was in a most unsatisfactory state, all demand for fancy goods being at an end, while staples were only purchased in small quantities in a hand-to-mouth manner.

Metals advanced considerably in value, owing to the increase in cost of production consequent upon the numerous strikes in all departments of the trade in England, and on stocks already in hand handsome profits were secured. Prices did not, however, rise sufficiently to admit of imports being made to any advantage at the high currencies ruling at home.

Coals.—During the year 22,600 tons English and about 4,500 tons Australian coals were imported. In consequence of the high prices ruling in England, values here were much enhanced, and English coals rrose from 16 fl. to 20 fl., while Australian ranged between 13 fl. and 20 fl. per ton.

The export statistics show a considerable increase in the amount of sugar shipped to Holland and the Channel as well as to America, and while to England apparently a less quantity was shipped than in 1871, it must be borne in mind that the destination of a very large part of the sugar shipped to the Channel for orders would undoubtedly be a port in the United Kingdom. Other ports, as a rule, receive their fair average.

Sugar.—Business in this article was very active at the commencement of the year, and large contracts were made for delivery out of the coming crop, principally of sugar deliverable at Sourabaya and other eastward ports.

Coffee was in strong demand throughout the season at gradually hardening prices.

Rice.—The partial failure of the crop and the consequent advance in the price of this article, to which the natives look as their chief means of subsistence, proved a hard blow to them, although mitigated eventually by the importations of foreign grain made from neighbouring ports, especially Saigon, Japan, and China.

The crop returns of Pepper proved more favourable than those of the preceding year, notwithstanding which prices continued firm at an average of about 32 fl. per picul. Nearly 10,000 piculs were exported in excess of 1871.

The cultivation of Tea continued to increase, and about 3,104,000 Amsterdam lbs. were exported in 1872. Java teas are attracting considerable attention in Europe and America, and the impetus thus given to the trade will no doubt lead to an increase in the present growing area before long.

The export of Banka tin by the Dutch Trading Company amounted to 90,602 piculs, against 53,016 piculs in 1871.

PROGRESS AND PEACE IN THE FAR EAST.

(PALL MALL GAZETTE.)

A striking illustration of the novel conditions under which the nations of Eastern Asia are now moving, and the new phase of national life on which they are entering, was afforded recently in the meeting of the Japanese and Chinese naval forces at Formosa. Japanese and Chinese have alike, as we know, been eagerly engaged for some years past in building arsenals and docks with a view to the creation of a fleet capable of bearing comparison, if not of actually measuring their strength, with those of Europe. Both have fairly succeeded, with the aid of European engineers, and the best machinery and plant which England and France together can supply—the Chinese with their fifteen war steamers, all turned out from their own yards, and the Japanese, with their Stonewall ram, purchased from America, and a respectable number of other vessels, some built by themselves and others purchased. Thus equipped the Japanese lately resolved to make a descent upon Formosa, which is Chinese territory somewhat loosely held. But, although the Chinese disclaimed responsibility for the acts of the savage tribes at the south of the island on the ground that they were not under control, they do not seem to have at all approved of the Japanese taking the law into their own hands. Accordingly, scarcely had the Japanese expedition arrived in Formosan waters, and before they could effect a landing, when a Chinese corvette and a gunboat steamed in, the former with guns out, men at quarters, and everything prepared for immediate action. The Japanese commander of the expedition, seeing from the size of the Chinese man-of-war that it would be in her power to capture the whole Japanese fleet then in the bay, only consisting of transports with two men-of-war, and cumbered with 2,000 troops, must have felt in a very awkward situation. Still his courage does not seem to have failed him. The mandarin in charge of the corvette contented himself with requesting an interview with the Japanese commander-in-chief ; but General Saigo declined to receive him until next day, and in the meantime proceeded to disembark his troops. The interview took place the next morning in front of the general's tent and under the Japanese flag. The mandarins approached with politest salutations, and these were met by the Japanese with what is described by the Times correspondent as "a free European salute," and an invitation to enter his tent. The result seems to have been peace or a truce. The Japanese were left to pursue their intention of punishing the savages who had murdered their shipwrecked sailors, and the Chinese mandarin steamed quietly away. Whether his head will remain firm on his shoulders when he gets back to Chinese waters may perhaps be a little doubtful. In the meantime, can anything be more strange than to see these two long-isolated Eastern nations fitting out European steam-frigates and gunboats to meet each other, not the foreigner, in hostile attitude, with guns run out, and ready to blow each other out of the water, with the help of the most approved inventions of Krupp and Armstrong! Henceforth, not only will Asiatics even in the Far East cease to wage war on each other with bow and spear, but they are plainly looking forward to a time when they will be ready to meet the Western Powers with armour-plated frigates and steam rams of the Stonewall Jackson type. There seems a chance, however, of their trying preliminary conclusions with each other, which, all things considered, may perhaps be just as well.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S CONTRACT.

(DAILY TELEGRAPH.)

Despite the opposition of some austere and disinterested economists, the amended mail contract which the Government has made with the P. and O. Steam Company was approved by an overwhelming majority. We cannot regret this result ; indeed, looking at all the facts, we feel bound to express an opinion that the Treasury has made a very good bargain for the national interests. The facts lie in a nutshell, and were stated with his usual business-like lucidity by Mr. W. H. Smith. By a contract made in 1867, and amended in 1870, the nation was bound to pay the Company £450,000 a year for the conveyance of the mails until 1880. Some time ago the Company, wishing to make use of the Suez Canal for its vessels carrying the heavy portion of the mails and cargo from Southampton, applied to the Treasury to modify the contract, which in its original form bound them to land the mails at Alexandria, whence they were carried by rail to Suez, and there reshipped. Negotiations followed, and ultimately the Treasury agreed to concede the point, on the Company abandoning £20,000 a year of the subsidy, with about £4,000 a year of minor sums—making in all an annual saving of £24,000—and at the same time engaging to perform the mail service outwards in twenty-four hours less time. Such is the substance of the new contract—an economy of £24,000 a year, and an acceleration of a day in the outward mails. But Mr. Rathbone and other representatives of the shipping interest think that the necessities of the company were such that the Government might have extorted a much better bargain had they stood firm. That is a matter of opinion; but we submit that the view of an outsider on such a point is worthless against that of the actual negotiators. The company were by no means in the position of despairing suppliants. They held a vantage-ground in that the nation was bound to pay £450,000 a year for six years to come, and the case was thus emphatically one for friendly compromise. Very likely the original contract might have been more favourable to the country—although those who remember that it was the outcome of long and exhaustive discussions will have some doubt even on that score—but this, as Sir Stafford Northcote said, is beside the question, since we are bound to the bargain, good or bad. Nor is it to the point to say that as the Company had previously accelerated the mails of their own accord the concession in the new contract is purely illusory. It is one thing to have a fixed legal limit, and another to let it be optional with the Company to deliver the mails or not within a certain time. Moreover, when such keen blades as Mr. George Anderson cut and hew at the clauses of the contract and the motives of the parties to it, it is surely worth recalling that the Peninsular and Oriental Company have carried out our mail service admirably, and that so great an association has undoubted claims on the nation for work done in the past. With all respect to the enterprising constituents of Mr. Rathbone and Mr. Eustace Smith, we do not believe either Liverpool or Shields shipowners are equally well qualified to perform the duties required; and the Government in the step it has now taken very fairly reflects the opinion of the mercantile community.

THE MAIL CONTRACT WITH THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

(Aug. 4th.) Mr. W. H. Smith (Secretary to the Treasury) rose to move that the contract entered into between the Postmaster-General and the P. and O. Company for the conveyance of the East India, China, and Japan mails be approved. This, he said, was a proposal to amend a contract under which the company had a right to convey the mails till 1880 for a yearly subsidy of £450,000. The original contract entered into in 1867 was modified in 1870, when it was not expected that the Suez Canal would be the enormous success which it had proved. It was the duty of the company to land the mails at Alexandria and take them up again at Suez, on the outward passage, and vice versâ with the homeward mails, but the extraordinary change which had occurred in the conditions of the trade with the East led the company in 1873 to apply to the Government for permission to pass their vessels through the Suez Canal. They represented the inconvenience caused both to passengers and merchants by the transhipment, and stated that their interests suffered much from the stringency of the provisions of the contract. The Post-office expressed a willingness to accept a change, but required an abatement of the subsidy by £30,000. To this the company objected, but they offered to convey the mails to Bombay, Calcutta, Shanghai, and Yokohama in twenty-four hours less time than under the then existing arrangements. The Post-office would not accede to this proposal, and the reason why no alteration was effected under the late Government seemed to be mainly that the reduction of subsidy to which the company was willing to submit was not sufficient. When he came to consider the matter, after entering upon his present office, he was inclined at first to take the same view. The company seemed to have lost a large part of their revenue by the transfer of a portion of their other business to other companies and shipowners, and it was thought that their object was to regain that business by means of a change in the provisions of the mail contract. On making inquiries, however, it was found that the advantage to be gained by the company would not be so great as had been supposed. In one respect, no doubt, there would be an advantage, inasmuch as the company would not be obliged, as it seemed it had sometimes been, to land the mails at the port on one side of the Isthmus and pass the steamer as quickly as possible through the Canal in order that, at the port on the other side, she might take up the same mails. The present Government took the matter into consideration, and while he was as anxious as any one to save the public money wherever it was possible to do so, he submitted that the arrangement which had been entered into was fair and reasonable. There was a subsisting engagement with the company which would entitle them to come to the Government and say, "We are willing to make such and such terms to the public advantage provided certain conditions be relaxed in our favour." Well, he was of opinion that it would not be for the public benefit that the company should be put into a position which would be hard on any contractor who endeavoured fairly and honestly to carry out his contract. (Hear.) If it were a new contract he confessed he would desire to put it up to competition and to alter the terms; but we had now to consider the position in which we found ourselves, and under these circumstances he submitted to the House that a fair proposal was made. An entirely new trade had sprung up within the last few years, owing in a great measure to the fact that the P. and O. Company had been excluded by the terms of their contract from the profitable use of the Suez Canal. Those who objected to the contract—and their representations deserved the most serious consideration—had alleged that there was no gain in time, but an absolute loss in the proposal now submitted to the House. But those gentlemen lost sight of the fact that the Post-office under successive Administrations had thought it right and necessary to prescribe certain times of stoppage during the period of the voyage from England to the extreme East, a circumstance which had not been taken into account by the objectors to the new contract. Under different time-tables sanctioned by different Postmasters-General for the last six years there had been stoppages of twenty-four hours at Aden on the outward voyage and twenty hours on the homeward, twenty-eight hours at Galle, six hours at Penang, and other stoppages of a similar character, amounting to the difference between the estimate made by hon. gentlemen of the proper time for the service and the time in which it was to be performed, which would justify his statement that there would be an actual saving of twenty-four hours on the passage outwards to India and China, and of fourteen hours on the passage to Australia. But if the House refused to sanction this proposal there would be no acceleration of the mails beyond the extent which his right hon. friend opposite endeavoured to secure in February last, and which was limited to ten hours. We should lose the small sum which the company undertook to surrender from their subsidy of £450,000, and also the great advantage of the penalties for delays, whether occasioned by stress of weather or other causes and from shipwreck. Under all the circumstances of the case he did not hesitate to recommend the acceptance of the contract as one fully justified, and as tending largely to the advantage of the mercantile community.

Mr. Rathbone, in moving that this contract be not confirmed for the present, for it was delay that was sought, wished to say that he and those who agreed with him felt no want of confidence in the Secretary to the Treasury; they acknowledged his anxiety for the public purse and his desire for the promotion of trade. The hon. gentleman had met the representations which had been addressed to him in a candid spirit, he had withdrawn one contract and accepted modifications in another, and the very fact that he had done so showed how necessary it was that when a question of such difficulty, of such wide bearings, and important consequences to the trade of the country was proposed, there should be no undue haste, but that ample time should be given for its consideration. The original contract was made on the 9th of November, 1867, before the Government had time to receive representations on the subject of the great improvidence which was being shown. It was made for twelve years at a period when the greatest improvements were being effected in the construction of steamers, and when there was every prospect of the mails being carried with increased celerity. When the contract was made the main sources of revenue contemplated by the company and the Government were the mails and passengers. The quantity of goods carried was small, but the opening of the Suez Canal made an enormous difference in that respect. It was notorious to every one acquainted with the shipping trade that if such a contract had to be made now it would be made at enormously reduced rates. The company had got largely overpaid for the work. Would the hon. gentleman who said "No" stake his reputation on the assertion that if this contract were abrogated it would not be taken up at greatly reduced rates? He ventured to think that when the company asked to be relieved from the stipulations in order to be enabled to compete with private companies, the Government were bound to see that the country should obtain such a reduction in the subsidy as would be equivalent to the relaxation they might grant. If they relaxed the stipulations without reducing the subsidy, the taxpayer would be unfairly burdened, and the company would have a surplus fund which it could use to suppress competition. The Government ought not to hurry through at the end of the Session without sufficient consideration a contract which, while it did not give the public the benefits to which it was entitled, would inflict a great injury on the shipping interest. As to the argument that different Postmasters-General under different Governments had all taken the same course, it must be remembered that Postmasters-General were often not selected for their great knowledge of mercantile affairs, and were naturally at the mercy of the permanent officials of the department, whose bias had for years been far too much in favour of contractors, and far too little in favour of the public interest. The hon. member illustrated the want of vigilance and care shown on behalf of the public by the case of the West India and Brazil contracts, in respect to which a new contract of a most improvident description was precipitately entered into. A practical man of business had told him that he would have been glad to carry out for £12,000 the service for which the Government had given £32,000. With regard to the manner in which the P. and O. Company had done their work, the hon. member maintained that they could have done it a great deal better if they had chosen, and that they ought to have gone faster considering the great improvements which had been made in connection with steamboats. They had been beaten in the most extraordinary way by private traders. The private trade were unable to see what were the full bearings of that contract until further time was given for its consideration; and the Government ought not to make a contract and tie it round their necks for another five years and a half without more carefully going into the subject. Marseilles, Trieste, and similar places had become more than heretofore the centres of trade; and it was only by the enterprise of our active traders that so large a portion of the traffic through the Suez Canal had been retained for this country under great disadvantages. Those men very fairly said that before a contract was made which would enable a large monopoly greatly to injure if not to ruin them, the Government ought to obtain for the country some commensurate advantage. He hoped the Government would withdraw the contract till next Session, or, at all events, that it would only be allowed to run till the 1st of March, in order to give time to the commercial interest to ascertain its true character and effect. He begged to move that the contract be not confirmed.

Mr. Anderson seconded the amendment. It was most unlikely that the P. and O. Company would propose to sacrifice £20,000 a year of their subsidy without receiving some greater advantage to themselves. If the Government consented to a change in the contract, they should have stipulated for a much larger concession from the company. He hoped the Government would not press forward the contract this Session.

Mr. Samuda thought the only course open to the House was that recommended by the Secretary to the Treasury. It had been said that the subsidy alone was sufficient without the carriage of mails and passengers. But to disprove this it was only necessary to state that the P. and O. Company had never paid more than 6 per cent. since they entered into this contract, while last year and on a previous occasion they paid only 5 per cent. Statements of that kind were most misleading. He wished to call attention to another fact which appeared to be lost sight of—namely, that it was not proposed that any variation should be made in respect of the carriage of the mails between this country and India. The only alteration suggested had reference to slow or water-borne traffic; but, whether as regarded the fast mails or the slow, the proposal made to the company would confer a great advantage on the public. It should be borne in mind that the existing contract was one which must last for six years. What was asked was that while the really valuable portion of the service should be carried through Egypt, as it now was, permission should be given to carry the heavy portion of it through the canal, instead of, as heretofore, by railway, not a single passenger, however, being prevented from travelling overland if he thought fit to do so. The company went further, they offered to accelerate the mails and to make concesions in the matter of fines. If they were deprived of the contract after serving the country for twenty-five years, the result would be that having received only 5 or 6 per cent. for their expenditure their property would be depreciated in value to the extent of the dividends they had paid for over twenty years. He hoped that on the recommendation of rivals in the trade a course such as that suggested, which would be at once short-sighted and unjust, would not be adopted.

Mr. Dodson had no feeling for or against the P. and O. or any other Steampacket Company. His only anxiety was that that should be done which was best for the public service. The hon. member who had just sat down had spoken of the advantages to accrue from the proposed contract, but he thought they ought to be very cautious before they came to the conclusion that the country would derive any advantage under it. The right hon. gentleman proceeded to criticise the present contract, and pointed out what, he contended, were omissions in it, remarking that the advantages which the P. and O. Company professed to give the country in exchange for the relaxations in their favour in the new contracts were insufficient. It was not in the power of the Government to terminate the existing contract until the year 1880, but the Treasury had the power, and he contended it was their duty to make the best terms possible with the company at a time when they asked for a concession which would in no way facilitate the carrying of the mails, for which purpose the subsidy was granted.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer regretted that the Postmaster-General was unable to be present. The right hon. gentleman had declared that there were fourteen grave blunders in the contract. It had been remodelled, and he would admit that there was an improvement in the form in which it now stood. The Government acknowledged the fairness with which the hon. member (Mr. Rathbone) and others had called attention to the necessity of some changes, but when the right hon. gentleman spoke of certain omissions in the contract he wished to remind him that they would have been cured by the time-table. This was a contract by which Parliament was bound for five years. During that time the mail service was secured by contract with a respectable and responsible company. It was a question, no doubt, whether, if they were going to enter into a new contract at the present time, the Government could not obtain better terms, but this was beside the question, because the Government were bound by the existing contract. The position of the company was this, that whereas it formerly relied on its ordinary trade, its passengers and cargo, to enable it to make its profit, the company now found itself so hampered by its contract that it could not avail itself of the natural and more advantageous route which it would prefer to take. Although some of the company's ships went through the Canal yet others were bound to go by way of Alexandria. The company were told by hon. gentlemen opposite and those whom they represented that the company were asking for a favour to themselves, and that they ought to give the State a share in the advantage. The company rejoined that they did not desire to take all the benefit, and that they were ready to give some advantage to the public. They were ready to undertake that the voyage, or a portion of it, should be made in a much shorter time than at present. They were also ready to undertake that the mail service outwards should be performed in twenty-four hours less time. Lastly, they undertook to accept a reduction of something like £20,000 a year from what they now received. There were also some small further sums of about £4,000 a year which they were willing to give up. The company, therefore, said, "Relieve us from the disadvantage that now presses upon us and we will give you an accelerated service and accept a reduction of £24,000 a year in the amount now payable for the remainder of the term during which the contract has to run." It was difficult to see why the Government should refuse this offer. The owners of private steamers represented that this change would place them at a disadvantage, because the company were thus the better enabled to compete with them. That was an argument which it appeared to him was difficult to maintain in that House. Another argument was that the Government were asked to give the company so much that they ought to get more from them in return. Looking at the matter from the point of view which he had endeavoured to lay before the House, he did not think they ought to look upon the company's difficulty as the public opportunity. The terms on the whole were, in his opinion, the best which the country was likely to get, and, therefore, he hoped the House would assent to the decision at which the Government had arrived.

Dr. Playfair (the late Postmaster-General) pointed out that the mail steamers had precedence over all other vessels passing through the Suez Canal, and that the effect of any undue preference in the case of the P. and O. Company would be to drive all the light and fast ships out of the trade in that direction up to 1880, and to substitute for them slow and heavy vessels. He also contended that while the contract of 1870 gave security that the whole of the journey from Brindisi to Alexandria would be performed at the rate of eleven knots an hour, there was in the present no security for the average rate of speed, while that of the original contract had been decreased. They were allowing the mails to lag behind cargo, and giving the preference to cargoes and passengers. The contract was made upon the understanding that the company was not to use the Canal. He intended to vote in favour of the delay, because the request was a reasonable one, because the contract was not thoroughly understood, and because it was presented in an imperfect form.

Mr. Goldney said that the P. and O. Company offered to accelerate the mails by twenty-four hours, and to give the public £24,000 a year on the condition that they should have the same trading facilities as other companies. The request was one which he could not but consider as perfectly reasonable.—Mr. Muntz believed the question to be a very simple one; it really amounted to this—whether for twelve months at all events, and possibly for five years, the public should suffer a loss of £24,000 and the mails be delayed twenty-four hours simply because some private companies might otherwise be interfered with.—Mr. E. Smith said that the question was really whether an entirely new trade should be thrown open to the P. and O. Company, and whether in carrying on that trade they should receive aid and subsidy from the Government. Under the present contract they might, if they liked, use either London or Liverpool instead of Southampton, and he did not, therefore, regard the compensation offered by the company as anything like adequate to the advantage they would receive.—Mr. Childers, while admitting that the original contract was an improvident one, thought that, as there was a distinct assurance that there would be a saving to the public of between £20,000 and £30,000 a year, the arrangement now proposed ought to be approved of by the House.

The House divided, and there voted:—

SUEZ CANAL.—IMPORT DUTIES ON COAL.

(5th.) Mr. Bourke, in answer to Mr. D. Jenkins, said that the Government had received information that the Egyptian Government had, without official notice, levied a duty of 8 per cent. on all coal landed at Port Said and Suez, intended for consumption by steamers passing through the Suez Canal. The Government were advised that the Egyptian Government could legally enforce the payment of the tax.

Monetary and Commercial.

Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on the 5th inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were —To Calcutta, £454,600; Bombay, £44,400; and Madras, £1,000. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 9⅞d. will receive about 10 per cent.; above in full. These figures exhibit a fresh falling off in the demand for remittances to the East.

The Italian "Lloyd's" has been constituted. The five companies which are to form the Association are those of Rubattino, Florio, Trinacria, Peirano, and Lavarello, and they count on the support of the National Bank and the Credito Mobiliare. The new society would have, like the Lloyd of Trieste, its own dockyards for the building and repairing of vessels, and acquire for this purpose the ship engine manufactories of Ansaldo, at Sempierdarena, and of Orlando Brothers at Leghorn. Without neglecting the Levant and the United States of America, the Society would develop its principal activity on the African coast from Alexandria to Algiers, frequent South America from Pernambuco to Buenos Ayres, also the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean, and establish a regular direct line by steamers from Genoa to Singapore, Hong Kong, Yokohama, Calcutta, and Bombay, in the hope that the German goods, which are sent now by Trieste to India, Japan, and China, will take in future the way of Genoa.

The Egyptian Government has for some time back been showing signs of a wish to impose a duty of 8 per cent. on all coals landed at Port Said and Suez for the use of steamers going through the Canal. The duty is now actually imposed, and, in consequence, all the coal agents have determined to add this duty to their price of coals.

At the meeting of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce last week it was agreed to support the action of Captain Sprye in obtaining the completion of the survey of the route between the port of Rangoon and Western China.

The Great Northern Telegraph Company's traffic receipts for the month of July were, this year, f.410,501; last year, f.271,873. The total traffic receipts from January 1 to July 31 were, this year, f.2,499,909; last year, f.1,722,112.

The market for Bar Silver is weaker, and prices have again declined, fine bars having been sold at 58⅛d. per oz. Mexican Dollars lately arrived have been disposed of at 56⅝d. per oz., showing a decline of ⅛d. per oz.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

Owing principally to the continued absence of speculative inquiry the Produce Markets have been devoid of animation, and prices in many instances are lower. On the other hand, Sugar has been in more request and firmer rates have been paid, and Coffee has been in good demand, and prices have followed an upward movement throughout. Tea has been depressed, and except for finest qualities, prices of all new season's have further declined. The value of Rice has descended to a still lower point, which has induced larger purchases. Sago has been rather dearer, but the market closes quietly. The speculative activity in the markets for Black and White Pepper has subsided, and prices have slightly given way. In other Spices only a moderate business has been done. Other articles show no alteration of importance.

TEA.

Messrs. Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—The chief feature during the past month has been the arrival of the new season's Teas from Hankow and Foochow, which has imparted some interest to our market, and resulted in a fair amount of business at fair to full prices. The quality of the Hankow Teas we consider about equal to that of last year, but the Foochow Teas are inferior.

Hankow Teas.—The first steamer arrived on the 16th ult., and early sales made of good medium to fine kinds were at very high prices, say from 1s. 9d. to 1s. 10d., and 1s. 11d. to 2s., finest kinds selling from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 5d. With further arrivals, and some anxiety to realise, there was soon a decline of 2d. to 3d. per lb. on good medium kinds, and 1d. to 2d. on fine, finest remaining very firm, whilst superfine chops were taken for export from 2s. 7d. to 3s. per lb. The loss of the Gordon Castle has imparted a firmer tone to the market, and there has been latterly a rally of ½d. to 1d. per lb. in the good medium to fine knds. Foo Chow Teas : A few thousand boxes of Pak Lin Teas arrived by mail steamer on the 23rd ultimo, and although the quality was inferior to last year, sold from 2s. to 2s. 3d. per lb., subsequent arrivals have, however, been sold at lower rates from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 2d. per lb. The first direct steamer arrived on the 31st ultimo, and a fair amount of sales have been made at full prices considering the quality ; common to fair kinds have sold from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 5d. per lb., good from 1s. 6d. to 1s. 9d. per lb., fine from 1s. 10d. to 2s., and finest from 2s. 1d. to 2s. 4½d. per lb., but it is not easy to get on at these prices. Oolongs : Some 1,500 boxes have been sold from 2s. to 2s. 2d. per lb., being full rates. We do not hear of any sale of Souchongs. Orange Pekoes : About 2,000 boxes have found buyers from 2s. to 2s. 2d. per lb. for fine quality. Old Season's Teas : Business has chiefly been confined to sales at auction, at rather under previous prices. Siftings from 4½d. to 6d. per lb., broken-leaf 9d. to 10d., fair to good common 11d. to 1s. 0½d., fair 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2d., fine Kaisows, to close invoices, at 1s. 7d. to 1s. 8d. per lb. Black-leaf kinds : Common 10¾d. to 11½d., and 1s. to 1s. 2½d. per lb. for fair to good medium kinds. Canton Teas.—Congous : Sales have been made to some extent from 1s. to 1s. 1½d. for fair, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. for good, and fine 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 6½d. per lb., being ½d. to 1d. per lb. lower. Scented Capers : Several thousand boxes have been sold, at public auction, from 1s. to 1s. 4d. for fair to good quality, showing a further decline of 1d. per lb. Orange Pekoes : Long-leaf kinds have sold from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. for fair to good kinds, showing a reduction of 1d. per lb. The Macao kinds have been saleable, but at lower prices. Green Teas.—Business has been limited, prices showing no material alteration; the quantity brought to auction has been small.

The stock in the United Kingdom on the 31st ultimo was estimated at 61,664,000 lbs., against 69,573,000 lbs. last year, and the quantity afloat (advices by letter) at 5,738,000 lbs., against 5,529,000 lbs. of China Tea, and 1,115,000 lbs., against 735,000 lbs. of India Tea.

SILK.

Messrs. Waithman, Hogg and Co.'s Circular says :—The improvement in the position of the Silk market, which commenced with the public sales, was only of short duration, and throughout the greater part of the past month we have had a very quiet market. China Silk sold freely during the earlier part of the month at full rates, but the requirements of the trade were soon satisfied, and as the demand subsided prices became weaker, and are now fully 6d. to 1s. per lb. lower. Canton Silk has not attracted any attention, and transactions have been on a very small scale. Japan Silk was in fair demand during the first half of the month, and prices were well maintained, but latterly sales have been more difficult, and a decline of 6d. to 1s. per lb. has taken place. There is no special feature to notice in Bengals and Italians. The deliveries are 5,094 bales, against 4,199 bales in June, and 3,424 bales in May.

Japan	6,764	5,775	3,693	5,222	4,595	4,823

Messrs. Durant and Co.'s Circular says :—The deliveries show favourably in comparison with preceding months, although scarcely in proportion to the first two or three weeks, and our total stocks are rather smaller than at this time last year, but importers seem to feel it will require all this increase of delivery to meet the expected importations, and so continue to press their old silk. On the other hand, consumers do not care to add to their stocks, although they must, almost universally, have reduced them to the smallest possible proportions.

Cocoanut Oil.—Ceylon has been in more demand, and has found buyers at £34 15s. to £35 for pipes, and at £35 to £35 10s. for middling to very fine in hogsheads.

Coir Goods.—At the last sales there was a steady demand for good qualities of Yarn, and firm rates were paid, but common kinds were rather easier. A small quantity of Fibre sold at previous rates.

Camphor has been very firmly held, but a sale has been effected of 200 cases China at 72s. 6d. per cwt.

Cutch.—There has been a moderate inquiry at steady prices, and about 1,000 boxes Pegue have been sold, fine at 22s. 6d. to 23s., SMandCo. (in papers) at 23s. 6d. to 24s.

Dragon's-blood.—A few cases fine Singapore lump have been sold at £7 10s. per cwt.

Gambier continues in fair demand, and about 800 bales block have been sold on the spot at 25s. 6d. to 26s., closing at the latter, and for arrival 150 tons near at hand at 24s. 9d. to 25s. Privately fine free cubes have been sold at 42s. 6d.

Galls.—The market for China is firm ; 200 cases afloat and 100 cases on the spot have been sold at 52s. per cwt., but that price is now refused by holders.

Gums.—Benjamin : Sumatra steady ; Siam steady ; 18 cases offered and retired. Copal quiet ; small sales at previous value ; of 172 cases at auction a few sold at 21s. for good hard. Damar very dull, but fairly held ; rather large stocks. Gamboge quiet ; 32 cases offered and sold at £10 to £10 10s. for middling and fair partly run.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

Berth rates of freights to the Eastern ports continue inactive, and outwards business is very dull, both for ships and steamers. Orders from the rice ports are still in the market for suitable vessels, but there is less inquiry from Manila. Coal freights for Singapore, Penang, and Galle are somewhat lower.

Current Rates of Freight for Vessels on the Berth.

Per Steamers via Suez Canal.—To Yokohama: 60s. weight or meast. To Hiogo: 70s. weight or meast. To Nagasaki: 70s. weight or meast. To Shanghai: 50s. weight, 40s. meast. To Hong Kong: 50s. weight, 40s. meast. To Singapore: 50s. meast. To Penang: 45s. weight, 40s. meast. To Colombo: 45s. weight or meast. To Foochow: 85s. meast. To Chefoo: 90s. meast. To Manila: 85s. weight or meast. To Batavia: 50s. meast. To Cheribon: 60s. meast.

Per Sailing Vessels.—To Yokohama: 35s. weight or meast. To Hiogo: 40s. weight or meast. To Shanghai: 32s. 6d. weight, 25s. meast. To Hong Kong: 30s. weight, 25s. meast. To Singapore: 25s. weight or meast. To Penang: 30s. weight or meast. To Colombo: 35s. weight, 25s. meast.

CASUALTIES.

Bahia, July 18.—(Lisbon, Aug. 4).—The Solent, from London to Singapore, with general cargo, has put in here leaking badly, and will discharge for repairs.

Cascaes, Aug. 3.—Made attempt to raise Gordon Castle (str.) with such pumps as were available. Reduced water 2 feet 8 inches below level outside, but tide filling, overflowed the ship. Confidence is felt that with powerful steam pumps the vessel could be raised at next spring tides.

Lisbon, July 31.—A telegram announces that about 300 packages tea, ex Gordon Castle (str.), damaged by salt water, had been picked up by coastguards. Advices from St. Helena state that the Gazelle, Lauer, from Java to Falmouth, which arrived there July —, reports that she was struck by a heavy sea, during which she lost bulwarks and rail from fore rigging to the quarter deck on port side, and a portion of bulwarks on starboard side; she also had upper seams of the stanchions; covering boards, and waterways started, which caused her to make water; the vessel will remain a few days to repair damages.

Advices from St. Helena, July 11, state that the Tennyson, McKinlay, from Batavia to Queenstown, arrived there, 4, leaky.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hankow (str.), which put back after being in collision, has nearly completed her discharge; cargo not damaged; will probably be despatched again in ten days.

At St. Helena.—June 23, B.K. Leglise, from Panaroekan, and sailed, 24, for Falmouth; July 2, Charity, Taylor, from Saigon, and sailed for Falmouth; Cato, Vuijk, from Batavia, and sailed, 4, for New York; Jonge Jan, Etz, from Batavia, and sailed, 5, for Rotterdam; 4, Kosmopoliet II., Huizer, from Batavia, and sailed, 5, for Rotterdam; 5, Robertus Hendrikus, Hagevaats, from Macassar, and sailed, 6, for Rotterdam; 9, Maria Elise, Van Deursan, from Batavia, and sailed for Amsterdam; Gazelle, Laeur, from Java, and sailed for Falmouth.

Off St. Helena.—June 27, Labrador, from Batavia, for Rotterdam; Jason, from Java, for Rotterdam; July 2, Medea, from Batavia, for Philadelphia.

At Ascension.—July 5, Lady Cecilia, Wilkinson, from Colombo, and sailed for London; 13, Petronella, Vliadorp, from Batavia, and sailed, 14, for Amsterdam.

Off Ascension.—July 15, N.B.C.F. (A.M.E.), from Batavia, for Amsterdam.

A telegram from Rotterdam announces that the Ortelius, Duinker, which arrived at Texel Aug. 2, from Java, reports having encountered heavy weather, during which she sprung a leak.

A telegram from Shanghai, Aug. 4, announces that the Meikong (str.), ashore at Woosung, had been got off undamaged and proceeded.

AND PILLS.—NOTABLE FACTS.—Intense heat augments the annoyances of skin diseases and encourages the development of febrile disorders; wherefore they should, as they may, be removed by these detergent and purifying preparations. In stomach complaints, liver affections, pains and spasms of the bowels, Holloway's ointment well rubbed over the affected part immediately gives the greatest ease, prevents congestion and inflammation, checks threatening diarrhœa and incipient cholera. The poorest inhabitants of large cities will find these remedies to be their best friend when any pestilence rages, or when from unknown causes eruptions, boils, abscesses, or ulcerations betoken the presence of taints or impurities within the system, and call for instant and effective curative medicines.

Summary of News from the Far East.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

The dates by this mail are to the 28th June. The London mail of 15th May arrived out on 27th June. The following summary is from the North China Herald:—

A rumour is current that a Chinese gunboat had left Shanghai with troops for the South. It appears to be due to the fact that two gunboats went down river, one of which returned after saluting the Japanese vessel, while the other presumably went on to join the three war vessels anchored at Woosung. At the city yamens it was reported that they were all under orders for the south, but we have been unable to get the report confirmed.

Some excitement has been caused by the arrival of the Japanese man-of-war Nisshin-kan, a barque-rigged corvette. This vessel is said to have come from Formosa via Amoy, and to have brought as passengers four officers of high military and naval command, who are on a mission to China in connection with the situation in Formosa. Thus much we have been able to gather indirectly; for the Japanese themselves, both on board the corvette and at the Consulate, decline to give the slightest information even as to whence the vessel has come. The head of the Mission holds rank as Admiral, and appears to be second to Saigo, the commander-in-chief of the expedition; and his principal coadjutor on this visit is the Japanese Consul at Amoy. The Japanese Minister is still in Shanghai, and the Taoutai and Mixed Court Magistrate called at the Consulate to exchange civilities. A Chinese gunboat also went down river and anchored opposite the Nisshin-kan, when salutes of twenty-one guns were fired by each. It is difficult to know what the object of the present Mission can be, since no reply, it is said, has yet been received to the Tsung-li Yamen's despatch to Yedo, requiring the withdrawal of the Japanese forces, and asserting the rights of China over the invested territory, and since a Chinese Commissioner has only just reached Formosa accredited with powers to treat for their retirement.

We have received a copy of a special report addressed by the French Municipal Council to the electors, regarding the late riot. It gives a history of the Ningpo Pagoda land, and of the streets which were the subject of dispute. In the French Settlement, as in this, Chinese cannot hold property. The Ningpo Guild, therefore, own the Josshouse by tolerance only. The land was once registered in the name of M. Victor Edan, and during his nominal ownership the streets were marked out. He subsequently gave it up, and the guild have been allowed to remain in possession; but the Council contend that they cannot resist appropriations formally made during M. Edan's ownership. Further, the Council had two especial reasons for declining the request to close the roads. One was a desire that, on principle, the guild should remove their dead to a cemetery without the concession; the other, an apprehension that, if the Ningpo guild's request were admitted, similar claims might be put forward by the Fohkien Guild, who used to have a Josshouse near the French Municipal Hall. The latter apprehension seems rather far-fetched; at any rate, the answer might have been sufficiently decisive to prevent a second reference. The principle that cemeteries should be removed as far as possible from habitations is, of course, sound; but it is so long since interments have been made in the Ningpo burying ground that it may be doubted whether there would be any sanitary gain from the removal of the existing relics. The legal right of the Council to the roads was never in question, so much as the discretion of insisting on an unpopular line of road that was really not essential, when a good alternative line was proposed.

We are glad to see that the Wind Instrument Society purpose continuing, this season, in the Public Garden, the entertainments to which they have now for several years accustomed us to look forward. The first performance was given on Wednesday evening. There was some fear that the qualifying clause, "weather permitting," in the programme would render all the rest inoperative; but though a little rain fell about seven, and a thunderstorm seemed imminent, that not unwelcome visitation was postponed sufficiently long to permit the enjoyment of the promised treat. The night was hot and oppressive, and urged many to seek the cool promenade by the river, so that the Gardens were well filled. The music was excellent, particularly the operatic selections; and the concluding "Hongkew Tramway Galop," a gay and effective composition, brought down—the rain. The elevation of the Band Stand a few feet appeared to be an improvement acoustically as well as æsthetically, while we believe it adds to the comfort of the performers—no small consideration, seeing we are so much indebted to them.

The absence of a few of the intended recipients, and the paying up by the remainder, reduced the sixty-one summonses issued against unregistered British subjects, to the odd "one," on the day they were made returnable. And even this "one" proved a blunder. The defendant, Mr. How, did not appear, and the case was adjourned for the evidence of H.M. Consul. In the meantime, it was discovered that Mr. How had paid the tax on Saturday; but that, owing to some inadvertence, the payment was not made known at the Registration office, or the proceedings of Monday would have been avoided.

Mr. D. M. Henderson, the Chief Engineer to the Customs, left for Chefoo, and will at once go on to the Shantung Promontory in the Feihoo, to forward the work of the lighthouse. He intends, as soon as possible after landing, to start a temporary light of the sixth order, which will show a fixed bright light, visible about seven miles in clear weather.

Our Peking correspondent notes the efforts of the Chinese to work back to the old system of repelling Foreign Ministers from Peking. The Austrian, Japanese and Peruvian treaties have all been negotiated away from Peking; and the Japanese Minister is at present detained at Shanghai, negotiating with provincial officials.

A new mission church has been opened at Tse-kee, near Ningpo.

The steamers Kiangsi and Ping On have been chartered by the Trans-Pacific Steamship Company to run between Shanghai and the Japan ports. The Ping On left Nagasaki on Tuesday night for Hiogo and Yokohama, taking freight in connection with the s.s. Altona for San Francisco, to be transhipped at Yokohama. The Kiangsi arrived here from Shanghai on Tuesdap morning and was promptly despatched to the same ports as the Ping On. She will connect with the Vasco de Gama, which arrived in Yokohama on the evening of the 5th inst. We hear the s.s. Shinking is intended to run the same route for the same company.

We believe that George Oxlade, lately a telegraphic agent here, whose hasty departure from among us naturally excited much comment, and whose non-capture by the police was explained by the idea that he had gone direct to Manila, to which there is no telegraph,—really made his exit from us via Yokohama. Thence he went to San Francisco, where he was met by a gentleman who knew him well in Shanghai. He had gone there, and was continuing to pass under an assumed name.

In his despatch about the Woosung Bar, Prince Kung quotes from the report of the Southern Superintendent of Trade, who had examined the Bar. This document runs as follows:—The foreign merchants now wish to dredge out a space of 1,700 yards long, by a hundred yards wide, so as to make a way for the heaviest steamers to get through. But seeing that the channel [in the Yangtsze], outside the Hwangpoo, is constantly silting up, making an obstruction like a bar put across a door, and that inside there is another too, it all plainly shows that, although we see such a broad expanse of river, still, as the big ships when they come to the spot are obliged to go in a tortuous channel like a thread, we may fairly call this bar a defence made by Heaven itself for our protection.

Since foreign trade has begun at our ports no foreign nation has tried to prevent our taking measures for our defence, and to place guard stations on the frontier. Each of our arsenals now make war steamers and military arms in all respects like those of the West, for since the treaties were arranged we put no hindrances in each other's way. If we proceed as has been done at Tientsin, then the forts at Shanghai should therefore also be repaired as soon as convenient, and placed as they once were; and this bank is a feature of the place of the utmost importance in this point of view, which it is not well lightly to disturb.

It appears, further, that, if we clear this passage, the places along each shore called Kan-hoi dyke, and Yu-chao embankment, will be all washed out and made utterly useless, and the tilled lands will receive much damage. Thus the disadvantages will not be confined to the shipping interests.

The Prince then says:—"On receiving the above report, I (the Prince) have myself examined Article 10 of the Trade Regulations wherein the distribution of lights, buoys, beacons, and the like, at all the ports, and their maintenance is provided for out of the tonnage dues; but no mention is made of dredging the channels. If this proposal was calculated to strengthen amicable relations and benefit trade, so that it was no detriment to either foreign or native shipping, or if it was neither an advantage nor a detriment to native shipping—then we might perhaps arrange how to do it. But this report from the southern superintendent of trade shows that the Woosung Bar is, after all, no great inconvenience to foreigners, while if it is dredged out many serious disadvantages will arise to China, the worst of which is that connected with the position as securing the entrance to the river. All nations governing their own country have the right to take measures to protect and guard it, and each must be the judge as to how it will use this right. Among the details of this right none are more important than self protection, and, in carrying this out, preparations of an army, raising up marines, and building forts, are very prominent. At the entrance of the Woosung river there used to be forts, and now the river has made itself a bank which may be regarded not only as like a bar in a gate, but as a defence placed there by Heaven, and to be taken in the sense of a protection."

HONG KONG.

Our advices from this port are to the 4th July. The French mail of 22nd May and the P. and O. mail May 29 had arrived out. The following summary is from the China Mail:—

News has reached this place that the mandarins at Foochow contemplate sending an official here or to your colony for the purchase of 100 bronze guns. The object for which they are to to be bought can be easily imagined. It is also rumoured that the Imperial gunboat Yung Po will be shortly despatched to Hong Kong from Foochow to buy gunpowder and other munitions of war. This will give merchants at your port some brisk trade. So you see nothing will give a greater impetus to trade than war. The Chinese are heart and soul against the Japanese, and if the two Powers come to a collision, the struggle will be severe. It is the opinion of many enlightened natives here that the Japanese may prove a very ugly enemy, especially in a naval engagement, a Chinese success in which is almost despaired of.

The Roman Catholic Cathedral was illuminated on the night of the 21st in commemoration of the twenty-eighth anniversary of the elevation of H.H. Pope Pius IX. In answer to a telegram sent to Rome by the Catholic community of Hong Kong, the following answer was received on the 21st:—"Rome, 20th June, 2.55 P.M.—The Holy Father glad at the thought of the faithful European and Chinese of Hong Kong gives them with effusion of heart the Apostolic Blessing.—C. Cardinal Antonelli."

The result of the opposition line of steamers between this port and China has been to materially reduce the price of passage and of freight charges. The last steamer hence of the Pacific Mail line is said to have carried freight at 40 cents per ton, against $7 and $10 per ton some months since. It is also said that the old line is now bringing Chinamen at $12 a head, against $40 heretofore charged.—S. F. Bulletin.

The storm which was blowing for the few days preceding the 26th did some damage. In many dwellings and hongs shutters were displaced and windows broken. In Wyndham-street a large tree was torn up at the roots and thrown across the road by the wind. A large junk was capsized near the Water Police boat last night, but fortunately all the people were saved by the police.

The only case before the summary jurisdiction of the Supreme Court on the 26th was a charge of "marine kidnapping" preferred by Messrs. Augustine Heard and Co. against the captain of the Duna. Mr. Hodgkins was called to prove that a buoy belonging to his firm had been carried away from its moorings, but the captain of the Duna strenuously denied that his vessel had dragged at all. Mr. Brereton appeared for plaintiffs, and Mr. Johnson for defendant. The case was decided in favour of the plaintiffs.

Our old friend the Ajax, which arrived here from Liverpool this morning, was six months at home receiving thorough overhauling of hull and engines, also new boilers.

There are eight of the P. and O. S. N. Company steamships, viz., Malwa, Venetia, Adria, Columbian, Madras, Bombay, Orissa, and Massalia, in this harbour at the present time, quite a fleet.

We do not desire to cause any needless alarm, but deem it our duty to note that typhoid fever is stated to be prevalent among the Chinese near West Point. We have heard that there are also several Europeans down with the disease. Prevention is always better than cure.

We extremely regret to learn that news has been received, by the mail just in, of the death of Mr. G. F. Buxey, for so long a time a well known and respected resident in this colony, his stay at this port and Canton extending over a period of thirty years. Mr. Buxey left about fifteen months since in a very poor state of health, and the fears of his friends have unfortunately been verified. He died at Bombay on the 15th ult., of paralysis, aged sixty-seven years. Mr. Buxey was a director of several local companies and an active promoter of all public measures. Amongst his co-religionists especially his loss will be deeply mourned, as well as by his many English friends.

The Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company are evidently in luck. The P.M.S.S. Colorado, of 4,000 tons, was this morning safely docked at Aberdeen, and the Japan and Vancouver will shortly follow suit. That vessels of such size can now be docked with absolute safety is mainly owing to the foresight of Mr. Duncan, the secretary of the company, he having induced the direction to consent to the Hope Dock being fitted with sliding bilge pieces, so as to save the strain hitherto cast upon vessels of the largest size under the old system of shores. There will be no excuse hereafter for our flagships giving Hong Kong the cold shoulder when repairs are necessary.

We are glad to learn also that the Whampoa Dock is, despite the croakers, well employed. The M.M.S.S. Donnai is now undergoing an overhaul there. The Cassandra, again, which vessel recently lost her propeller, is being refitted at Kowloong with a new one. Altogether the Dock prospects are "looking up."

The case of Whittall v. Bell and others was heard before Chief Justice Smale and a special jury. It was an action brought on account of misrepresentations made by the defendant as directors to the plaintiff concerning the business of the Hong Distillery Company (Limited) when acting for the China Sugar Refinery—an estate of which he was the receiver. After occupying the attention of the Court for three days the case was ultimately adjourned.

The following items are from the Hong Kong Times:—

Mr. James Russell (says the Government Gazette) has resumed his duties as police magistrate and assistant superintendent of the fire brigade. Mr. Tonnochy (same information) is appointed to act as superintendent of Victoria Gaol until further notice, and Mr. Russell as coroner.

We hear that the Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao Steamboat Company have intimated their intention of renewing for another six months, from the 16th inst., the monthly amount of $2,500 to Kwok-Acheong, not to oppose the company by running his steamers on the same routes as those upon which the company's steamers now run.

Choy Akap, charged with the theft of clothing, and remanded to gaol, waiting his Excellency the Governor's pleasure, with the view, at the request of a mandarin, to his deportation to Canton to answer charges of crime committed in Chinese territory, has saved the authorities further trouble by hanging himself in the gaol on Saturday afternoon (June 20).

H.M.S. Midge steamed round the island for trial of engines and boilers on June 23rd. Went out through the Ly-ee-moon Passage 6.30 A.M., returned by East Lamma Channel 10.30 A.M.; a trifling delay occurred in going out through buoy fouling starboard screw, which necessitated the ship letting go an anchor whilst clearing, but she got well away by seven. A fresh breeze sprung up outside, and the trial of engines and boilers under the superintendence of Inspector of Machinery of Dockyard was considered on the whole satisfactory. The Midge remains here till Thursday, and will probably sail about noon for Nagasaki.

Most unmistakably we had a shock or shocks of earthquake, yesterday morning, June 23rd. At twenty-three minutes past nine, while seated in our "sanctum sanctorum," a trepidation was felt, followed by a rumbling, vibrating noise, which caused us to bend low, thinking for some dire offence we were about to find the ceiling, if not roof, coming about our ears. "Boy, boy," and these indispensable luxuries appeared upon the scene. "What for that noise, go see." The boys were scared, went into adjoining rooms and returned, saying, "no can find." Simultaneously from the region below came—not devils—printers' devils—but some of our staff, equally alarmed, who affirmed that a large iron imposing slab was seen to shake and the floor above also, and who thought a dire mishap had occurred, and no prospect of the next day's issue. Upon consultation we all agreed it was an earthquake—most unusual—the last we believe being in 1864.

A letter from Amoy, dated the 22nd June says:—Two Japanese vessels of war have been in our port for a day, and put out to sea in compliance with the order of the local mandarins. The Chinese Admiral has been here on a visit to the Foreign Consuls, but was disappointed on finding them all in neutral ground. It is rumoured to-day that 20,000 Chinese soldiers, under the command of the Viceroy of Foochow, left that place for Formosa in twenty-one vessels of war, with the intention of driving the Japanese out of their territory.

The Chinese Mail has received from its correspondent at Foochow some important despatches in connection with the Formosan expedition; amongst others, the precis of a communication sent by the Executive Officers of the Chinese Privy Council to Shên Paou Chên, formerly Lieut. Governor of Kiangsi, now superintendent of the Foochow Arsenal, Li Hung Chang, Governor General of Chili, Man Yu, the General commanding in Fokien, Lee Chung Hi, Governor General of Kiangsoo and Kiangsi, and to Li Hioh Nien, Governor General of Fokien and Chekiang. The substance of the despatch is as follows:—

A memorial was received on the 14th May from the Tsungli Yamen, stating that some Japanese war vessels were anchoring off Amoy, and requesting that high officers might be appointed to make observation. The despatch continues:—"Now when the Japanese Ambassador was here last year to satisfy the treaties, nothing was said about the place of the Formosan aborigines. But now they have suddenly sent out an expedition to Fokien on the plea of borrowing a place to exercise their soldiers; in this, however, their intentions are bad. According to a despatch received from the English Minister it is clear that the Japanese intend to have something to do with the aborigines, and in this opinion we are confirmed by the report of the Superintendent of Trade of the North and South, who represents a similar state of things. As this affair will involve international questions, it is necessary that precautionary measures should be at once taken so as to prevent the breaking out of hostilities. Li Hioh Nien, in failing as yet to have made a report on a matter of this great importance, has caused us a deal of surprise.

"The locality inhabited by the aborigines forms part of the Chinese territory; how, then, can the Japanese be allowed to have an eye to it? The real state of things there now must be reported on, and proper means be devised with a view to being prepared for any emergency. Lee Hioh Nien's duties being comparatively important, he cannot be suddenly withdrawn from his provincial capital. It is therefore commanded that Shen Paou Chen should take command of some vessels of war, and some soldiers, ostensibly on a tour of inspection, and proceed to Formosa, visiting the whole district where the aboriginese are, to make observations. He must not appear hostile either in word or in deed, but must carefully act according to the exigencies of the case. As to the selection of soldiers, he is to confer with General Man and Admiral Lo. As to the aborigines, let any existing disabilities against them be removed whenever possible, and let them be kindly treated and brought under control, so that they may be utilised to our benefit in the protection of our territory, and in the prevention of an invasion from a foreign country. Shen is hereby commanded also to confer with General Man on all matters, according to the exigencies of circumstances, and to ask Imperial sanction before taking any steps.

"The action of the Japanese war vessels after arrival at Fokien is to be carefully and truthfully reported by Lee Hioh Nien, and Shên Paou Chên. Any general information must be made known from time to time to the Tsung-li Yamen by Lee Hioh Nien and Li Tsung Hi for its consideration. A copy of the original communication (by the Tsung-li Yamen) is herewithforwarded for your information. This is confidentially and separately sent by express courier at the rate of 600 li a day. Respect this. Send a reply on receipt"

PHILIPPINES.

MANILA.

A sale has been made at public auction of 1,651 bars (about 202 piculs) copper from the mines of Muncayan, the price realised being $17.44 per quintal. The purity of the metal is highly spoken of, and calls for a regular exploit of these mines, which would greatly benefit the shareholders and the country.

Amongst the passengers brought on to Hong Kong by the str. Leon was H.E. Sr. Don Jose Malcampo Marques de San Rafael, Rear-Admiral of the Navy, and recently appointed to the post of Captain-General of the Philippines. H.E. was accompanied by his wife and three children. The Captain-General was to make his entry into Manila on the 18th, and great preparations were being made to give him a cordial reception.

The Pampanga, brought over in tow by the Yuentszefee, has safely reached Manila; she is advertised for sale by Messrs. Russell and Sturgis.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The present mail brings dates to the 11th July. The London mail of 12th June arrived on 11th July. The following summary is from the Straits Times:—

His Excellency Sir Andrew Clarke, who left Singapore on the 19th May on a visit to the other Settlements, has decided to prolong his stay at Penang until the end of the present month. Legislative business, therefore, remains in abeyance, and the public have no means of satisfying their curiosity as to the nature of the revelations to be made, or the policy to be adopted on several important questions of deep local interest. Meantime one of these questions, the New Harbour Railway, has been revived before the public, and a number of letters on the subject, all anonymous, and nearly all advocating the construction of the railway by the Government, have appeared in our columns, and will be found in the body of this journal. It must not, however, be imagined from these letters that the balance of public feeling here is in favour of the Government making a railway; on the contrary, we imagine that a very determined opposition will be manifested against what seems to us a misappropriation of the colony's funds. We understand the correspondence alluded to in his Excellency the Governor's opening speech will probably be laid before Council at its next meeting, until when, we presume, it will not be made public, and we must content ourselves with the meagre information to be gleaned from other sources as to its purport.

An appeal made to the Supreme Court against the decision of the police magistrate in the case of a house owner who was fined $1,000 in consequence of one of his tenants having opened a gambling establishment, has resulted in the reversal by the Chief Justice of the decision of the lower Court, with a sweeping condemnation of the provisions of the Gaming Houses Ordinance against property owners, and the announcement that in the event of certain questions being raised before him, the Chief Justice will unhesitatingly treat this law as one passed ultra vires, being contrary to the law of England and the rights of the subject, and therefore a nullity. This decision will no doubt speedily bring about the repeal of the obnoxious provisions.

Merchants in Java complain loudly, and with reason, of the irregular taxations levied on imported manufactures by the Custom House authorities under the new tariff. The Netherlands Government have abolished the differential duties formerly levied, thus admitting the manufactures of all countries on payment of a uniform duty of six per cent. In working this tariff, however, the Netherlands Indian Government, instead of accepting the market value of the goods at the time of importation as the standard by which to levy the import duty, allow the Customs officials themselves to fix the valuation at a standard to suit their ideas, which are only revised every three months, taking no note of the fluctuations of the market in the meantime. The effect of this is that piece goods worth say $2.50 per piece are taxed upon an imaginary valuation of perhaps $3, thus raising their cost to the merchant three cents per piece beyond their legitimate figure, a rise sufficiently hampering to his sales at any time, but which in face of a falling market may entail upon him serious loss. It is to be hoped, in the interests of trade, that the Netherlands Indian authorities will speedily adopt a more equitable system, failing which, doubtless strong representations will be made in more influential quarters.

Latest advices from Atchin inform us that the Dutch garrison in the Kraton have been harassed by repeated attacks from the Atchinese, who gathered in great numbers in their neighbourhood, but that the Dutch troops had repulsed them, inflicting heavy losses. The garrison was, however, wearied out with hard fighting and incessant watchfulness, and reinforcements are urgently required if they are to maintain their position.

With reference to the missing portion of the crew of the Charles Auguste, wrecked in Torres Straits, we are glad to learn from the Java papers that they were picked up by a Swedish ship, and have arrived safely at Cheribon.

The arrivals of steamers via the Suez Canal have been the Ellen Gowan on the 29th June, Joseph Dodds on the 5th inst., Glamis Castle on the 6th inst., all from London, and Priam on the 10th from Liverpool. The departures homeward have been the Mongol on the 28th, Glaucus on the 30th ult., Galatea on the 3rd inst., Sirius on the 4th, and Crocus on the 9th, from Foochow; the Nankin on the 3rd and Japan on the 10th from Hankow,—all for London with teas; the Achilles on the 29th ult. and Deucalion on the 3rd inst. from Shanghai and Hong Kong for London, and the Yrurac Bat on the 4th from Manila for Cadiz and Liverpool.

We regret to hear that H.M.S. Charybdis got on a rock off the north end of Pankore Island last week. Some of her guns had to be taken out before she could be got off, and on examination it was found that her false keel was partially carried away.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

Shanghai.—There has been a fair business transacted during the past fortnight and prices in some instances show an improvement. There has been more demand for 8⅓ lbs. Grey Shirtings, and common chops may be quoted two candareens per piece higher; Eagle 8⅓ lbs. are only in moderate request at a slight decline; 7 lbs. are in no demand, while 9 10-12 lbs. cloth again show a marked advance on previous quotations. White Shirtings are quiet, and for some makes lower in value. T-Cloths continue to attract attention, with the exception of Mexican 6 lbs., which are difficult of sale. Drills are in better request at improving prices. Fancy Cottons: Velvets, Velveteens, and Blue and White Handkerchiefs have met with some inquiry at rather better rates. There has been an active demand for Long Ells and Spanish Stripes, and the former, especially, have now risen considerably in value. The position of Camlets has also improved. Other descriptions have been comparatively neglected.

Hong Kong and Canton.—Cotton Yarns are more or less depressed. Piece Goods continue at unsatisfactory prices, some little attention having been paid to T-Cloths and Drills without producing any change for the better in values.

Singapore.—The market remains very quiet, and business has been on a moderate scale only. Lately there has been less inquiry for 6 and 7 lbs. T-Cloth, and prices close weaker. Grey Madapollams have declined, sales of 2½ lbs. having been made at $16 to $15½. 8¼ lb. Grey Shirtings are offered freely at $2.25 to $2.22½, but dealers are buying sparingly. Grey Yarn of all counts keeps dull. Stocks generally are ample for the present dull state of the market; 40's Grey and Coloured Yarn, 7 lbs. and 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, light weight T-Cloths and White Shirtings show an increase upon last quarter.

TEA.

Hankow.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer, and Co.'s Report, dated 23rd June, says:—We have had a comparatively quiet market since the issue of our last; settlements being 11,039 chests, 17,261 half-chests, and 1,510 boxes; particulars of same being 718 half-chests at 2s. 1½d. per lb., 4,386 half chests and 734 boxes at 1s. 8½d. to 1s. 11d., 6,620 chests, 7,976 half-chests and 418 boxes at 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 8d., 4,419 chests, 4,181 half-chests and 358 boxes at 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 5d. The first crop tea is now pretty well all to hand, the few parcels remaining on offer being of undesirable quality, although held by Teamen for full prices. Late settlements have been made at almost the same high range of price comparatively as was established at the opening, and we consider them quite 1d. to 2d. above safe limits or over the prices at which similar Teas sold at home last year, when they were better in quality. The business of the week comprises sales of Ningchows at Tls. 20 to 29½, two small parcels realising 33 Tls. Oonfars have ranged from Tls. 20 to 28 for the better Teas, a few very common mixed parcels selling from Tls. 17 to 19. Cheong-sow-kais, Toong-shans and Soong yongs have been quickly bought up at Tls. 20 to 24. Ping-kongs, Wun-kais, &c., selling at Tls. 15 to 21½. Lee-lings have also found ready sale from 18 to 19½ and several sales of Shuntam-packed are reported at 15 to 15½ Tls. per picul.

Shanghai.—Business in Tea has been pretty brisk during the week at very firm rates. Previous to our last report there was but little disposition to buy to any extent. Supplies not arriving quickly, however, owing to a greater demand springing up in Hankow, buyers have come forward. Settlements, 43,082 chests, Reshipments 7,163 chests: Total 50,235 chests.

Foochow.—Messrs. Westall, Galtons, and Co.'s Weekly Letter says:—A steady daily business continues in this market, and on the whole no alteration can be quoted in rates. Arrivals and settlements for the week are—Congous: Arrivals, 41,450 chests; settlements, 45,317 chests. Souchongs: Arrivals, 1,460 chests; settlements, 2,417 chests. Oolongs: Arrivals, 6,660 half-chests; settlements, 835 chests. Scented Teas: Arrivals, 17,500 boxes; settlements, 14,666 boxes. Souchongs: Settlements for the time of year are small; prices are somewhat irregular, but may be considered fully up to former quotations. Oolongs: Further transactions have taken place for England, but rates show no decline. Flowery Pekoe: Some 800 chests have been taken for England and India; prices are full. Scented Teas find favour, and considerable quantities have changed hands, previous quotations being maintained. The export to Great Britain, the Continent of Europe, and the Cape of Good Hope is 12,129,336 lbs., against 2,159,750 lbs. To Australia, 1,932,660 lbs., against nil last year. Freights: To London, £4 per ton of 40 cubic feet. Exchange: On London, 6 months' sight credits, to-day, 4s. 3⅞d.; on Hong Kong, 15 days' sight, private, ⅜ to ⅝ per cent. discount.; on Shanghai, 10 days' sight, private, $73½.

Hong Kong and Canton.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular says:—Tea has not found much favour with purchasers, the quantity really settled being small. Owing to continued depressing advices from London our market has been quiet since date of our last report, and prices have declined for most descriptions. In Congous there has been nothing done except by private contract, under which we hear that several parcels of good common to medium have been settled at reduced rates. Scented Capers: There has not been much inclination shown to buy except at still lower rates, and a considerable portion of the settlements were made prior to date of our last circular, but not till now made public. The bulk of the settlements made during the past fortnight consists of the lower grades at from Tls. 16 to 18. Fine Teas are very scarce, and the stock of Scented Capers now on offer is of very undesirable quality. Scented Orange Pekoes: A few small parcels of choice long leaf have been settled at rather easier prices, although the finest grades are very scarce. The Teas on offer are mostly medium kinds of undesirable character, for which, quality considered, very full prices are demanded. The short leaf kinds have been dealt in at lower rates.

THE WOOSUNG BAR AND HONG KONG BLOCKADED.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

SIR,—I addressed you a short time ago on the subject of our wants in China, and the matter seems to have attracted attention, both at home and out here. The Daily News has republished your article, and now we have the definitive answer of the Chinese Government, refusing to dredge the Woosung Bar, on the ground that it formed one of the natural defences of Shanghai against an enemy. It has been understood here for some time that that was the ground put forward by the Chinese for their inaction. But to anyone acquainted with the local peculiarities of Shanghai this ground of objection seems puerile, and only got up for the occasion. The report of the Chinese inspector (so-called) is evidently written by inspiration from the Peking Government. The forts alluded to have long ceased to exist, and were only mud embankments with openings for guns, but the combination of those forts and Bar did not prevent our men-of-war cruising up the river and capturing the city of Shanghai in 1842; and even if the Bar did prevent men-of-war entering the river, men could be landed at Woosung and march to Shanghai, a distance of only twelve miles. Doubtless this idea of defence is a potent one to the Chinese mind, but I believe a much more potent one is the expense, as I am given to understand that it has been represented to the Chinese Government by their engineers that it would require two steam dredgers, costing £27,000 each, to do the work. I do not, therefore, wonder at their hesitating; but it seems to me that the mechanical talent in England could produce a steam dredger that would accomplish the work at a cost much below £54,000. I would certainly suggest it to their consideration. The most effective would be one similar to those used in the Suez Canal, which would run the mud by a tramway on to the bank of the river instead of putting it into boats and forming a second bar worse than the first.

The Woosung Bar is, however, thrown into the shade at present by the Formosa difficulty. The Chinese are in a regular ferment, and talk about fighting the Japanese and expelling them from Formosa; but, more sinico, before fighting have offered to pay the Japanese to go away. They, however, seem to have no intention of leaving the island, and a Japanese corvette entered this port two days ago, it is reported, with an envoy on board to the Chinese authorities. The Japanese refuse point blank to give any information as to where they came from or where they are going to, what they want or intend. At this stage of the affair it is impossible to predict what will be the issue, but it looks very like an intention on the part of the Japanese to establish themselves on the island. The threat of sending their gun-boats from Shanghai and Foochow is not likely to frighten the Japanese much, considering that the Chinese gun-boats are manned by fishermen, coolies, &c., and are usually either commanded by a pilot or comprador. Their fighting usually consists of running below or landing in their boats and bolting. They do not see the fun of being killed when they have wives and families to support, and have no doubt heard from Confucuis or some other sage "that he who fights and runs away may live to fight another day."

On passing through Hong Kong lately I was particularly struck with the low state of English prestige, and the degradation to which the nation has been brought by the Gladstone Government. What did I see? Simply this. The harbour of Hong Kong blockaded by Chinese gunboats, commanded by foreigners, and no Chinese boat allowed to leave or enter the harbour without being boarded and examined, and if the pass issued by Chinese Custom House officials stationed in Hong Kong cannot be produced, the Chinese boat is seized and sent to Canton to be condemned. Where, oh where, is the shade of Cromwell or Elizabeth? Would they have allowed a French gun-boat to anchor off Margate, and levy toll on all French vessels entering or leaving the port of London, which is exactly a parallel case? There is no Chinese port where those vessels are stationed, but they are leaving the port of Hong Kong, supposed to be British. It was British, but is so no longer. As these vessels are allowed to perform the duties of revenue cruisers on all Chinese vessels entering or leaving the port of Hong Kong, and levy export and import duties, it must be admitted that Hong Kong is a Chinese and not a British port. I deny altogether that it is a British port while this system exists. A short time ago one of these cruisers chased a junk into the harbour of Hong Kong, and fired upon her under the guns of the fort and men-of-war. The cruiser was seized by the police, or some of her men, and they were brought before the Supreme Court, but released by order of the Governor of Hong Kong, and handed over to the Chinese at Canton. This outrage throws into the shade the celebrated Arrow case; but Sir H. Parkes was of a different kidney, and could not see the advantage of allowing his country to be outraged by Chinese. Those gun-boats are all in Hong Kong waters, or British waters, not being half-a-mile from the shore of Hong Kong; are not within eighty or one hundred miles of any Chinese port, therefore have no right to be there at all. Any nation jealous of its independence would station a gun-boat alongside each of those cruisers, and order them to leave within twenty-four hours, or sink them if they attempted to board any vessels leaving the harbour of Hong Kong Kong! How the English Government or authorities can be blinded to the evil effects of this system is a mystery to—

Yours obediently,
SHANGHAI.

Shanghai, June 27, 1874.

Naval and Military.

The arrangements recently made for the recall of the royal marines who have been serving in Japan since November, 1870, are likely to be modified, as we hear it is not deemed advisable entirely to withdraw the force. Should it be decided to keep a battalion at Yokohama for a much longer period, steps will at once be taken to relieve that which is now on service.

We hear that the Chinese Government has expressed a desire for some English naval officer to undertake the organisation of the Chinese Navy, and that Captain Richard E. Tracey, R.N., is likely to be selected for the duty.

A new corvette has been successfully launched from the yard of the Thames Ironworks and Ship-building Company, Blackwall. She is named the Rover, and the ceremony of christening was performed by Miss Milne, daughter of Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, first sea lord of the Admiralty. The Rover is one of the same class as the Volage and Active, but with minor improvements which their trials have suggested. These sister vessels are 270 ft. long, 42 ft. wide, of 2,321 tonnage, and of 4,200 nominal horse-power; while the Rover is 280 ft. long, 43 ft. 6 in. wide, and 2,555 51-94 tonnage. She is built with a straight stem, with embrasures cut in her poop and forecastle to admit of fore and aft fire from her spar deck. Her hull is of iron of the strongest possible construction, with an outer planking of teak, and a novelty is to be tried by affixing zinc sheathing with nails of the same metal, instead of the copper, which is so liable to decomposition from the galvanic action set up when in contact with sea water in the proximity to iron. She is to be armed with sixteen 64-pounder shell guns on the main deck and two 90 cwt. rifled pivot guns on the spar deck, giving an all-round fire. It is expected that the sixteen knots speed of the Active and Volage will be slightly exceeded in the Rover.

A court-martial has been held at Halifax to inquire into the loss of the Niobe, which was wrecked on Miquelon Island. Commodore Boagle and Navigating Lieutenant Deane were the officers tried, and the court decided that no blame could be attached to them. The prisoners were therefore honourably acquitted. The court afterwards highly complimented the two officers on their praiseworthy efforts to save stores and gear after stranding, and said they left the court without a stain on their characters.

An experiment with submarine mines against the Oberon target ship, with double plated hull, to represent sections of the Hercules, has been made. The charge was 500lbs. of gun-cotton, submerged 48 feet, and fired at 100 feet from the ship's side. No harm was done to the hull, but the condenser of the engines was split, a damage which would interfere with the ship's capacity, if steaming at full power.

The Audacious, the new flag ship for China, having completed her repairs, was put out of dock at Chatham on the 8th inst. She is expected to be completed in her outfit in the course of a few weeks.

The Vigilant, 2, despatch vessel, which is to be sent to the China station, went out of Portsmouth harbour on the 11th inst. for the trial of her machinery.

The gunboat Teazer, Commander Henry A. Digby, has arrived at Spithead, from China. She will be paid out of commission.

AMSTERDAM, AUGUST 12.

We are still without a complete Cabinet. The King does not make any haste to return from his trip to Switzerland, and in the meanwhile the late and the future ministers have left the Hague to enjoy elsewhere the pleasures of the season. Thus politics have come to a complete standstill, although the papers are still speculating upon what the policy of the Cabinet in spe will be, and how long it will live. Most of them quite agree that its time will be very short, unless the Liberal party listens to the flatteries of the Conservatives and agrees to support the Ministers. I for one should be much surprised if this occurred. There are some who are still of opinion that the King will not approve of the list of the new Cabinet.

The steamer Sumatra has arrived from Batavia. No less than fifteen men belonging to the crew have been arrested; they are accused of mutinous conduct during the voyage.

A cremation society is to be organised at the Hague, at least so rumour says, but I doubt the correctness of the statement.

It is most positively asserted that the new screw steamers Sambas and Palembang, which started some time ago for Java, to reinforce our navy there, are anything but seaworthy.

In some places cases of sporadic cholera have occurred.

Mr. John Lothrop Motley has arrived at the Hague. He is now the guest of Her Majesty.

LISBON, JULY 31.

The elections took place on the 12th inst. without any disturbances. The Government holds a great majority, only fifteen members belonging to the Opposition, distinguished as historicos and reformistas, being elected. The total number of the members of the Lower House is one hundred and eight. Those called regeneradores, who are the firm supporters of the Government, number forty-five, and the rest of the majority have their chiefs, who are the Marquis of Avila, Balama, Jose Dias Ferreira, and Manoel Vaz. Under these circumstances, as soon as the Marquis of Avila declines to accept any measure of the Government and he influences the votes of his party for the Opposition, the Cabinet will be virtually unable to carry their measures. The Marquis of Avila is the President of the Upper House, and his reputation stands high. The Government accepted nearly almost all the names of the candidates presented by him, and it is not probable, except for some important reason, that the Marquis will oppose the Government. The journals of the Opposition begin to say that there are already some few deputies of the majority who protest against the cabinet, and they hope, at the same time, that the fifteen members of the Opposition will increase on the opening of the Cortes. This may be, but it is evident that the Lower House is composed of two parties, the one being Liberals who are more or less tied to the Monarchical principles, and the other declared republicans. The Miguelite party abandoned the struggle, for they were all convinced that defeat would add to their dishonour.

The last news from the north about the vineyards is bad. The husbandmen complain of the aidium and of the phyloxera. This is a pity, for hundreds of labourers get their living by the product of the vine grounds, and besides that, wine is an article of great consumption in the provinces amongst the peasants.

The steamer India, a Portuguese transport, went to Cardiff to be cleaned, where she arrived on the 23rd. She will return here on the 10th next, loaded with coal, and then will sail to Macao ten days later.

The troops on board consist of two hundred men with five officers; ond hundred and fifty of them being infantry and the rest artillery.

The new Governor of Macao, Mr. Lobo d'Avila, leaves in September by way of France.

The statement that Mr. Caral Ribeiro would replace Mr. Carro in the Colonial Ministry is incorrect.

THE WRECK OF THE "GORDON CASTLE."

Captain Greenwood has forwarded to the Board of Trade the following particulars of the wreck of the splendid screw-steamer Gordon Castle, of Glasgow, 1,284 tons, from Woosung on the 11th June. He says:—"We grounded for a short time in the mud coming down from Hankow to Woosung, but came off without damage or straining. After leaving Woosung all went well until we had passed through the Straits of Gibraltar, on the 25th July. On Sunday, the 26th July, at 8 P.M., weather hazy on the horizon, wind N., blowing a strong breeze, the said steamer proceeding at full speed under steam only, I commenced my watch on deck. There was a quarter-master at the wheel, and an A.B. on look-out. At 10. 50 P.M. Cape Roca Light bore E. (true), distant six miles. The master was then on the bridge, and directed a true N. course to be steered, which was N. 30 E. by standard, and N. 14 E. by steering compass. About half-past ten Cape Roca Light became obscured, and the course ordered by the master was steered up to midnight, when I was relieved by the second mate. A few minutes after this course was set, the master went below, and left instructions to be called at 1 A.M. on the 27th, or before that, if the Burling Light was first seen, or should the weather become thick. The weather seaward was perfectly clear, but there was a fog over the land. I went below at midnight, and heard nothing till the ship struck at 2. 15 A.M. of the 27th of July. I at once went on deck and saw a huge rock towering over the bow. I ran forward to see the condition of the ship, and found the bow smashed in, and called out not to go astern with the engines. The tide was then ebbing, and the ship lay still, but falling considerably over to the starboard. Three boats were lowered, and passengers and crew got into them, remaining alongside until daylight, when we all went back to the ship. We broke out about 100 packages of tea (which we landed on the rocks) from the forehold, to enable us to secure the lower hatches. The forehold and forepeak were full of water. As the tide flowed she became more upright, and at about 2.30 P.M. she floated. There was then some water in the main-hold, but I cannot say how much. The captain then called all the men on board, and stated that he intended to take the ship to Lisbon. The passengers were landed at the Burlings, and remained there, and the crew all returned to the ship. Steam was immediately got up, and we proceeded towards Lisbon, steaming full speed, and boats towing alongside. Water coming above forecastle deck, hands were employed in baling it out. Water at this time was fast gaining on the main hold, I should say at the rate of one-and-a-half foot per hour. At seven the steamer Stag bore down and stood by us. When nearing Cascaes Bay, as the ship was fast settling by the hand, the forepart of the forecastle deck being level with the water, the master determined to beach her there, and from 8.30 to 8.45 P.M. he ran her aground at Lisbon. Pilot was on board at the time. At 9. P.M. the master went to Lisbon for lighters and assistance. At 1. A.M. on the 28th the engineer reported to me that the ship was fast filling, and that the water was over the stoke-hole plates. At 1.15 A.M. all hands got into the boats and remained alongside. At 2. A.M. the ship was covered fore and aft. The master returned at 5. P.M. (28th). I remained in charge of the wreck until Friday, 30th July, when the master ordered me to Lisbon, from whence I came to Liverpool in the Puno (str.), arriving 8th of August."

THE FORMOSA EXPEDITION.

A correspondent of The Times at Yokohama, who signs himself "W. G. H.," writes to that journal, giving an account of the Formosa Expedition. He concludes by giving the following opinion upon the course pursued by the Japanese:—The Cabinet at Yedo is divided. Okuma, Minister of Finance, Okubo, Minister of the Interior, and Shimadzu Saburo, uncle of the ex-Prince of Satsuma, the instigator of the Richardson murder, and now Nadaijin, or second subject in the Empire, are for prosecuting the expedition, while most of the other Ministers are against it. It is said that a reinforcement of 5,000 troops is to be at once sent to Formosa, but the report requires confirmation. The legality of the course taken by the Cabinet at Yedo can hardly be sustained, while it will be difficult, if not impossible, for the Japanese to withdraw without humiliation from the position they have taken up. Should they refuse to do so, war between the two countries can hardly be avoided.

EXTRADITION TREATY WITH THE NETHERLANDS.—The London Gazette contains the text of a treaty for the mutual extradition of fugitive criminals entered into between this country and the Netherlands. The crimes for which extradition is to be granted are—1. Murder (including assassination, parricide, infanticide, and poisoning), or attempt to murder. 2. Manslaughter. 3. Counterfeiting or altering money, or uttering counterfeit or altered money. 4. Forgery, counterfeiting or altering of public or private documents, including forgery, counterfeiting or altering of paper money, bank notes, or other public securities. 5. Embezzlement or larceny, comprehending any larceny that by the Netherland penal law is not considered as "vol simple." 6. Obtaining money or goods by false pretences, including the crimes designated in the Netherland penal law as peculation, abstraction or misapplication by bailees or public accountants. 7. Crimes against bankruptcy law which by the Netherland penal law are considered as fraudulent bankruptcy. 8. Perjury. 9. Rape. 10. Arson. Extradition is also to take place for participation in any of the aforesaid crimes, provided such participation be punishable by the laws of both the contracting parties. The ratifications were exchanged at the Hague on the 21st July, and were signed on behalf of Her Majesty by Vice Admiral the Hon. Sir E. A. J. Harris, and by the Netherlands Ministers of Foreign Affairs and Justice on behalf of that country. The treaty will come into force on the 17th inst.

IN reference to the fact of the honour of Knighthood being conferred upon Mr. Mutu Coomara Swamy, of Ceylon, The Times remarks that he is a gentleman of distinguished position in his country, his relatives having long been connected by faithful service with the British rule in the East; he is also remarkable as having been the first person who, being neither a Christian nor a Jew, was admitted a barrister of one of our Inns of Court; his "call" bears date January, 1863, at Lincoln's Inn. He has laboured hard in the local Council of Ceylon, and more especially has contributed much towards the success of the experiment now at work in some of our colonies for gradually extending the rights of self-government to the native races. He has also done much towards making the literature of India known to the western world, having published several works relating to Indian and Buddhistic philosophy; and he has given to the public an English translation of an interesting Hindu drama, named Arichandra, which he dedicated to the Queen.

THE REPORTED MASSACRE IN COCHIN CHINA.

We commented some time ago upon a reported massacre of Christian converts and their pastors, which, according to the French Catholic organs, had broken out with great virulence in Cochin China. The accounts then given were accompanied with such a minuteness of detail, and so careful a statement of names, circumstances and places that we could not wholly refuse credit to the story, although we expressed the gravest misgivings on many important points, and, indeed, published the narrative, as the French would say, sous toute reserve. Strange to relate, since the date of our article, more than two months back, not a single English newspaper, so far as we are aware, has contained an allusion corroborative of the melancholy news, not a letter has been published, not a telegram forwarded from Hong Kong, Saigon, or Singapore, which tends to throw light upon the announcement made in the columns of our Roman Catholic contemporary; while in the official memorandum submitted on the 18th July last to the French Assembly to explain the circumstances which led to the new treaty with Tongquin, and the reasons in favour of its confirmation, we find the following statement:—"The state of "anarchy which has long prevailed in Tongquin has been "a cause of constant uneasiness to the Christian community, "and to the Missionaries settled in that country. We "have recently had the most sorrowful testimony of the "hatred with which both converts and pastors are pursued "by the population, and of the bad feeling of the local "authorities. Henceforth Spanish and French citizens "will enjoy the right to practise their religion in Annam, "secured by the most serious guarantees, and Annamese "converts will not be disqualified from attending any "public assembly or entering the public service." "We "have recently received the most sorrowful testimony" (témoignages), say the official promoters of the new treaty. Not a word is here dropped from the French Government which confirms the truth of the story. The authorities in Saigon are silent, the telegraph wires have refused to endorse the original sensational news; and the most that can be said in a document carefully drawn up at the Foreign-office in Paris in support of French interference in the affairs of Annam is "that we have recently received most sorrowful testimony." But when we turn to consult the Roman Catholic newspaper which originally put the narrative into circulation, we find that its editor no longer supplies his readers with detailed accounts of particular outrages. Those which were previously described in his columns with a careful statement of times, names, and places, seem to remain unconfirmed by supplementary correspondence. Nor is a word said about the steps which the French would take, and the negotiations they would open, to indemnify the sufferers for such wanton persecution. What we now have is different. It turns out only that the nobles, officials, and Government bachelors are breathing out hostility, and are urging their sovereign to authorise a persecution of native converts and a war with France. The last news is described as "alarming," and a "massacre" seemed "inevitable." We had understood from the former announcement that the "massacre had already taken place," 10,000 native Christians had, so we were assured, "been burnt, drowned, or beheaded," in the space of a few days, and so forth; but now, two months later, we read in our contemporary's columns a translation of a petition which the Government students have addressed to the Emperor asking his sanction to attack the native Christians, and to drive the French out of his dominions. It would seem then from this that the ruling classes in Cochin China are really embittered, partly against the French missionaries and their flocks, and partly against the terms which France has recently imposed upon the Court at Tongquin, and if their Government would but authorise them, they would gladly break out into hostilities. This is a state of things which every one must deplore, and which must make the missionaries uneasy; but it is very different from the account formerly given, which told how Christian families were being hunted down in the jungles, and whole villages being made over to pillage and conflagration. Had any such occurrences actually taken place the French Government would surely have described them in terms somewhat stronger and more precise than those which we quoted above. In the local hostility and excitement during the present negotiations with France we can readily believe, and it is even quite possible that one or two native converts may have been illused. But it is much to be regretted when any of the organs of a great religious body gives prominence to highly coloured exaggerations which kindle animosity between man and man, besides embittering the strong nation against the weaker, instead of encouraging that peace, goodwill, and reconciliation essential to the development of trade, even if we put it on no higher grounds.

ARCHDEACON GRAY'S COLLECTION.

Some weeks since we drew attention to the fact that the collection of Chinese articles exhibited at Vienna by the Venerable Archdeacon Gray had been transferred to the Crystal Palace at Sydenham, and was to be displayed there for the advantage of the public. We are now glad to learn that the collection has been opened out, and that it is most effectively displayed in one of the courts adjoining the well-known Pompeian house and garden. The articles composing the collection are arranged in a series of groups, each in its distinct cabinet. The arrangement is artistic and satisfactory, and reflects great credit upon Dr. David S. Price, one of the directors of the company, who arranged the collection. The display is very effective, and without wishing to detract in the slightest degree from the merit of the Chinese Commission at Vienna last year, we have no hesitation in saying that the collection shows to better advantage at the Palace than at Vienna. The collection is now open to the public, and we doubt not that lovers of oriental art, old residents in China, and friends of the Archdeacon, will find in this Chinese Court at the Crystal Palace a new centre of attraction. On the 7th inst. the directors issued invitations for a private view of the collection, and afterwards entertained a party of visitors at luncheon. After luncheon the health of Archdeacon Gray was proposed in graceful terms by Dr. D. S. Price, and the hope expressed by the speaker that he might soon return to England and inspect his own treasures as they now appear at the Palace was cordially echoed by the company. Mr. Thomas Thomas returned thanks on behalf of Mr. Gray, and was charged to convey the thanks of the directors to Mr. Gray for his interesting contribution. The health of Mr. Bowra, of the Chinese Vienna Commission, through whose instrumentality the loan of the collection had been obtained, was also proposed by Dr. Price, and after a cordial acknowledgment of the courtesy and hospitality of the Crystal Palace directors the party separated.

In our issue of the 4th inst. we gave a letter from The Times' correspondent at Nagasaki upon the subject of the Japanese Expedition to Formosa. On the 7th inst. there appeared in The Times a letter upon the same subject from Mr. Henry Gribble, of Nagasaki, which, to a great extent, is a duplicate of the first communication.

An Order in Council in the Gazette declares the port of Shanghai a foreign port of registry, and lays down the customary regulations respecting the registry of British ships there.

The honour of knighthood has been conferred upon Mr. Mutu Coomara Swamy, a member of the Ceylon Legislative Council.

HOLT'S LINE OF STEAMERS.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

Sir,—The following account of the disablement of the O.S.S. Antenor on her last voyage from China will doubtless interest some of your readers. This vessel, while on her homeward route, had the misfortune to break her crank shaft. It occurred on the morning of the 18th March last, at about 160 miles from Galle ; the heavy thudding of the screw and the sudden stoppage of the vessel awoke us all at 5 A.M. The steamers of this line have seldom experienced accidents of so serious a nature ; in this crippled state the otherwise bonny Antenor was little better than a log on the water, and navigation under such circumstances was very difficult and tedious. We drifted rather than sailed in an easterly direction for three days, and sighted Ceylon on the 21st. At 8 A.M. a boat was manned and sent on to Colombo, which was about sixty miles distant. Our craft still drifted on, and reached her anchorage outside the harbour on the same night. The boat returned the following day, having telegraphed the breakdown to the owners, but it was not until the 23rd that the vessel was safely anchored in the roadstead of Colombo. The greatest credit is due to Captain Crompton for the untiring energy and ability which he displayed during these five weary days, and we feel sure that in expressing thanks for all his kindness, as well as that of his officers, we are only echoing the feelings of our fellow-passengers. It is much to be regretted, however, that the agents of this company failed to carry out the wishes of Mr. Holt in caring for the comfort and despatch of the delayed passengers ; some, with much difficulty, obtained passages by the French mail steamer of the 26th March, the others were compelled to await the arrival of the Patroclus, belonging to the same company, a telegram having reached the captain to the effect that she would call for them. She, however, left them in the lurch, and when she had passed Galle a telegram was received from Penang stating that she had gone on (we would ask you to bear in mind that after leaving Penang she could have no communication with her agents, unless by telegraph from Galle). Several of our number were great invalids, requiring aquick return to Europe ; to such, therefore, the detention was a serious matter, as they were forced to remain in all five weeks at Colombo, and that during the hottest season. The Hector, another of the same company's vessels, although she was already overcrowded, then came to our relief, and though it was particularly specified that she had only room for the Antenor passengers, eight additional passengers (six adults and two children) were shipped at Galle. We had thus fifty passengers in all. The means of accommodating these thirty-three adults and seventeen children was sixteen cabins of about 6ft. square, i.e., about say twelve square feet for each person, or 6ft. by 2ft. You may therefore judge how terribly crammed we all were; and by the arrangements made husbands had to enter upon the privacy of a lady's cabin, in order to attend upon their wives, and vice versa. No blame can be attached to the doctor on board; he did all in his power to relieve and stay sickness, but his materials and aid were deficient ; indeed, his own presence on board was due to an emergency in which the vessel was placed. The food, too, was both deficient in quality and quantity. We ran short of provisions before reaching Suez, and owing to the short supply taken on board at Port Said, we were obliged to petition Captain Bewlay to put into Malta for further supplies ; but we fell short again three days after leaving that port. We need only make one other observation, and that is regarding the state of the cabins. They were washed out only once a week. For our parts this line of steamers will not trouble us again, but for the comfort of future passengers let the company take steps to prevent a recurrence of such gross mismanagement. We are, &c.,

CHINESE TREATIES AND NAVIGATION.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

Sir,—It is somewhat humiliating to see old Peking arguments reproduced in the columns of the Pall Mall Gazette, but the letter from Sir Rutherford Alcock, which appeared in that journal on the 6th inst., reads like a musty Peking despatch disentombed from official records. One would have thought that, on the principle of mens sana in corpore sano, the free and fresh air of Europe would have removed the mental Peking dust from Sir Rutherford's eyes ; but this does not appear to be the case ; and, judging from the letter to which I refer, the old obstructiveness still remains. Sir Rutherford quotes from Admiral Shadwell's despatch in this wise : "The depth of water on the bar itself does not appear to have permanently altered from what it was formerly." Nothing can be further from the truth. In former days a vessel like the P. and O. s.s. Aden could cross the bar fully laden at almost any state of the tide, whereas, during the last few years, there were, I believe, several instances of her having to wait at Woosung for high water. It would be easy for the P. and O. Steam. Navigation Company and the Messageries Maritimes to multiply instances of similar detention. But Sir Rutherford (Peking-like) ignores the chief argument in favour of foreign demands. Every sailing ship and every steamer which arrives (even in ballast) at the port of Shanghai contributes to the Imperial revenue by paying tonnage dues. If she arrives (as is generally the case) with a full cargo, she still further augments the Imperial revenue. To what extent this is the case let the Customs returns testify. It is nonsense now to talk of making Woosung the port of Shanghai. What would Glasgow say if the Clyde Trust relinquished its duties and allowed Greenock to become the great port of the Clyde?

Aug. 11, 1874. Yours obediently, G.

The habit of adopting two measures, or two weights, in judging the acts of Governments has many inconveniences apart from the morality of the practice. There is—or should be—one law of nations for both hemispheres; and principles of reason and justice are not subject to variation according to the points of the compass. Before denouncing an Eastern Power as altogether in the wrong, it would be well, therefore, to be sure that the same action would not be held lawful and justifiable in one of the comity of Western nations. The Government and ruling classes of China are not ignorant of what the merchants and local newspapers are incessantly saying of an irritating and depreciatory character. Unfortunately for both parties, I think, the most offensive and least defensible of such utterances which appear in print are regularly translated for the information of the local authorities and the Foreign Office in Peking. They might very well afford, perhaps, to regard with indifference any charges not founded in truth, but there is abundant evidence that this is not the result. Easterns are as apt to take offence when unjustly treated, and to feel indignant and irritated under a sense of wrong as are the people of the West. This kind of provocation to ill-will is much too lightly given by foreigners in China, and it seems the more essential therefore that the correspondence about the bar at Woosung, to which the Pall Mall Gazette only cursorily alludes, should not be overlooked as an example quite in point. It might be thought that the enlightened regard for their own interests, which our merchants urge upon the Chinese as an unanswerable argument for increased facilities of trade and navigation, should suggest to them the value of mutual good-will, as the best means of securing their object. But no thought of this kind appears to prevail, and although China is at present weak, we are strong, and the day may not be so distant as our merchants seem to believe, when these conditions may materially change. The same policy which within the last twenty years has led to the creation of extensive dockyards and arsenals, and the building of a fleet of fifteen ships, among which are large iron steamers of over 2,000 tons—all on the best European models, and with the latest improvements in guns and machinery—will, to all appearance, carry them much further. The drilling and arming of their troops with breech-loaders and arms of precision has kept pace with these advances in maritime equipments. Such a country is not to be despised, and cannot safely be regarded as too weak ever to offer any effective resistance to Western States, or too contemptible a Power to claim treatment in accordance with the law of nations. The time is probably coming when the Chinese Government may feel sufficiently strong to assert their independence, and resist dictation or interference. They have done so thrice before, and will undoubtedly do so again if unwisely provoked. Only the next time they meet a Western Power in arms, it will be to fight it with other weapons than the bow, spear, or matchlock, and at less disadvantage than heretofore. With iron-clad steamers, Krupp and Armstrong guns, and some knowledge under good instruction of military science and European drill, they may make coercion a very costly affair both by sea and land. This is no reason why we should not claim the due execution of existing treaties. But it is an argument, and a very strong one as the world is governed, why there should be nothing in the policy of Western Powers, and the treatment of the Chinese, of which they may rightly and justly complain.

In respect to the bar at Woosung and the application of tonnage dues, you have already so fully dealt with the question of treaty right and obligation, that no further contention can well arise on that head. That there is an equitable claim on any Government situated as China is with respect to a foreign trade, from which it derives a large revenue is sufficiently clear. It is bound to do whatever may be in its power, within reasonable and practicable limits, to facilitate navigation and access to its ports. Whether the removal of the bar comes within such limits is the real question. The merchants contend that it does, the operation offering no particular engineering difficulty nor extravagant expenditure. It appears, however, that this is not an opinion shared by Sir Charles Shadwell, the admiral on the station, and two experienced officers under his command, from whom he required a report on the subject. The Admiral, in his reply to Mr. Wade, the British Minister at Peking, states that he found "universal agreement in opinion at Shanghai that something should be done, but much diversity of idea as to what practical measures should be resorted to, while many persons thought that no permanent good would be effected, as the river would be liable to silt up again." And he encloses two reports, one from Captain Arthur and the other from Navigating Lieutenant Tracy, of the Iron Duke, his flagship, adding, "You will observe that the reports differ in their recommendations, characteristic in this respect of the uncertain opinions prevalent at Shanghai." One proposal was to deepen the existing bar by dredging, the other to block up the eastern channel and dredge the western—the latter on a rough estimate being about thirty times as expensive as the former! Finally, the admiral—an officer, be it remarked, distinguished for his ability and scientific attainments—winds up by saying, "the depth of water on the bar itself does not appear to have permanently altered from what it was formerly" (though the contrary had been confidently affirmed by some of the complainants, as may be seen in the correspondence), "and the difficulty of navigation now complained of is entirely owing to the increased size of the vessels at present employed in the trade to China." There is a warning also given elsewhere, that even in the dredging so urgently called for by the merchants, care must be taken lest the deepening of one part should lead to the shoaling of some other. With these conflicting opinions as to the practicability of any plan, and doubts as to the effects upon other parts of the river, it is hardly matter of wonder or reproach that the Chinese, like any other Government, should feel perplexed, and be slow to move. If, as Mr. Wade observes, in one of his despatches, the Chinese Government, "in cases of this kind are not more expeditious than any other Government," should we, supposing the case were our own, pronounce a sweeping condemnation? The comment of the London and China Telegraph on this passage, that the British Minister is "evidently seeking to provoke comparisons between China and some imaginary delinquent and apathetic Government in the West," seems to me a very foolish one, and represents only too well the style of argument in common use. Why should China not be judged by comparison with the action of other Governments in like circumstances in the West? In default of positive enactments or engagements, what better or fairer test could be devised? The real ground of objection on the part of the Government is probably not so much one of cost or difficulty as of policy and security from attack. There is a Government dockyard and arsenal up the river, and few Governments are disposed to open these to an enemy to please foreign merchants. There is plainly sufficient reason for deliberation and caution on the part of the Chinese, and this ought to be a more than sufficient motive for moderation in the judgments which the mercantile communities pass on the Government, within whose terrritories they must carry on their trade. Possibly, after all, the best remedy for the silting up of the sand at the bar will be found in the contemplated project of buying up the land for a road down to Woosung, and laying down rails with a view to make that the shipping port for loading and unloading vessels, not Shanghai. If successful, two important objects would be gained by the same operation. The obstruction and delay now complained of would be obviated, and the Chinese Government, in view of the cessation of all further trouble or expense about the bar, might be induced to give their consent to the introduction of a short railroad in China for purely local purposes in connection with the trade of the port. The provincial authorities might take it upon themselves to offer no obstruction, a mode of proceeding quite within the range of their powers, and one which has long seemed to be the most likely to promise success to any initiatory step in this direction.

There is another argument in favour of such a course, in preference to costly and doubtful efforts to deepen and keep the entrance of the river free, apart from the doubts besetting all such attempts to combat natural tendencies in great watercourses; namely, that the anchorage for foreign ships opposite the settlement is perceptibly shoaling. I do not know how far the consideration that this untoward condition is mainly owing to steps taken by the foreign merchants themselves will weigh with them; but there is no doubt it ought to do so. The uncontrollable acts of the foreign holders of land on the river front—uncontrollable absolutely by the Chinese authorities, and practically so by their own—in making for their own convenience lines of bund, and extending out into the stream landing places, without the slightest regard to the possible effects on other parts of the harbour, have produced this increasing evil. Much of this was probably done in ignorance of what would be the effects; but it was not the less their act, from the responsibility of which there is no escape. There is abundant evidence of the fact; but I must not trespass further on your space. I can only trust that the importance of the trade at Shanghai, and our relations with China generally, so inseparably connected with the action taken by our agents and merchants in that country, will prove a sufficient apology for the length to which this letter has extended.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Rutherford Alcock.

Literature.

The Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts has just issued its fourth report, accompanied by a most voluminous appendix. In the course of their investigations amongst the collections of manuscripts and papers, belonging to various institutions and private families in different parts of the kingdom, the inspectors appointed under this Commission have met with some curious documents connected with China and Japan, of which it is much to be regretted that they have not thought fit to give us more detailed particulars. Amongst the papers of Earl de la Warr (Baron Buckhurst) at Knole Park, Kent, they found two letters, dated Jan. 1st, 1618, and March 10, 1620, written by Richard Cock, at Japan, to Thomas Wilson, Esq., one of his Majesty's secretaries. These letters are said to be of five large pages each, and full of information about the country. Amongst the manuscripts of Lieut.-Col. Carew, at Crowcombe Court, Somerset, there is preserved a letter from Queen Elizabeth to the Emperor of China (presumably Wan-le of the Ming Dynasty), written in 1596, shortly after the East India Company was first incorporated. In the library of Trinity College, Dublin, were found some Chinese tracts, folio, a Chinese MS., 8vo, and 10 vols. of Chinese books, 8vo.

We have received a copy of the Ceylon Directory Calendar for 1874. The volume, besides containing almost every possible item of intelligence regarding the island, is devoted to information with reference to the growth of tea, cinchona, cocoa, and timber. The commercial portion of the volume is as complete as ever, and we congratulate the compiler, Mr. Ferguson, on the variety of the subjects treated of in his work, as well as on the care and judgment which have been used in its compilation.

Monetary and Commercial.

It is understood that the arrangements for the issue of the new Turkish loan, in connection with the scheme of reorganising the finances which has just been adopted, are now far advanced, and that a large issue will shortly take place. Lately, it will be remembered, the plan which found favour with the Turkish Government was the issue of a 3 per cent. loan for upwards of £70,000,000, at the price of about 26, to cover all the engagements of the Turkish floating debt, and provide a reserve for the contingencies of the next two or three years, objects which would have been fully met by the effective proceeds of the loan, estimated at about £19,000,000. This plan, however, was unanimously condemned by public opinion here as adding a new denomination to the too numerous varieties of the Turkish debt, and, in substitution for it, the much wiser plan of a further issue of 5 per cents. to effect the same object has been resolved upon.

An issue is announced of £200,000 Six per Cent. Debentures of the Central Argentine Railway Company (Limited), in amounts of £1,000, £500, and £100 each debenture, which will be redeemable in 1885, and bear interest from 1st January next.

The prospectus has been issued of the General Expenditure Assurance Company (Limited), which has been established with a capital of £100,000, in 16,000 ordinary and 4,000 "B" shares of £5 each, chiefly for assuring the return of all moneys disbursed in general expenditure.

Applications are invited for 9,500 shares of £5 each of the City and County Bank (Limited), for the purpose of completing the first issue of 20,000 shares, 10,500 having, it is stated, been already subscribed. The bank was established in April, 1872, and it has declared regular dividends, the last being at the rate of 7 per cent.

At the general meeting of shareholders of the Crédit Foncier of England (Limited), the report was, after some discussion, adopted, and a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum was declared. The chairman explained the circumstances which led to a compromise of the claim against the Belgian Public Works Company, and stated that the sum accepted, f. 5,625,000 in cash, could by judicious employment be raised to f. 7,000,000 in less than two years.

The directors of the Moyar Coffee Company (Limited) have declared a dividend of 8½ per cent., free of income tax, on the capital of the company.

The suspension is announced of Mr. Henry Grendon Tippet, of Manchester, trading as Tippet and Co., and also of Bombay, trading as Grendon Tippet and Co., merchant and commission agent. His total liabilities amount to about £200,000, but the greater portion of this is upon bills receivable and to secured creditors, and it is expected that not more than about £8,000 will rank against the estate. The cause of the failure is said to be the fall in the value of cotton. The assets have not yet been ascertained.

Subjoined is an account of the quantities of the principal articles of imported merchandise (subject to Customs' duties) remaining in the bonded warehouses of the United Kingdom on the 31st of July, 1874, as compared with the quantities in warehouse on the 31st of July, 1872 and 1873 :—

Bar Silver has been sold at 57⅞d. per oz. standard ; showing a further fall of ¼d. per oz. Mexican Dollars have also experienced a decline iu value, and have been sold at 56 3-16d. per oz., showing a fall of 7-16d. per oz.

The bullion per P. and O. steamer Mongolia, which left Southampton August 13, was, in gold, to Galle, £422 ; to Singapore, £5,000 ; in silver, to Shanghai, £3,200; total in gold, £5,422 ; in silver, £3,200.

THE BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade Returns for July are very unfavourable, indicating that the partial improvement shown in June must have been due to accidental causes, and not to a permanent revival in business. The declared value of the imports last month was £32,730,628, against £35,053,634 in July, 1873 ; and of the exports, £21,142,062, against £22,957,404. The imports for the seven months were, 1872, £205,336,915 ; 1873, £216,076,458 ; and 1874, £219,913,441. The principal decline has been in cotton, coffee, corn, sugar, hides, and wool. The exports for July amounted to £21,142,062, against £22,957,404 in the corresponding month of 1873, and £23,005,330 in 1872, showing a diminution of nearly 8 per cent., consequent upon lower prices rather than upon lessened production. Compared with the corresponding month in 1872, the decline is a little over that proportion. In textile fabrics cotton manufactures exhibit a diminution in value of 6¾ per cent., linen manufactures of 3½ per cent., and woollen and worsted manufactures of 9 per cent., while silk manufactures have increased 18¾ per cent., and jute manufactures 29 per cent. Among the articles which show an augmentation in their value totals are—refined sugar, 270 per cent. ; sheep's wool, 37 per cent. ; and woollen and worsted yarn, 12½ per cent. The chief decline has been in—Alkali, 21½ per cent. ; cotton yarn, 10½ per cent. ; earthenware, 27 per cent. ; haberdashery, 11½ per cent. ; hardware, 11 per cent. ; and silk yarn, 49½ per cent. For the seven months the figures stand at—in 1872, £142,609,134 ; 1873, £148,743,961 ; and 1874, £138,973,276 —thus showing a reduction of 6½ per cent. from the corresponding period of 1873, and of 2½ per cent. from that of 1872.

The following is an extract from these Returns of the figures which refer to our Export trade with China and the Far East :—

TEA.

During the past week there has been a fair amount of business done, the Nestor and Mongol having brought fresh supplies of Shanghai, Canton, and Foochow Teas, which have been placed on the market, and afforded a fair selection of different grades. Prices on the whole show little if any variation from last week, but the demand generally is not active. In public sale about 11,500 packages have been offered, the whole of which have been sold without reserve.

Congous: Red-leaf kinds: Old season's remain much as before, a few parcels of common to medium having been sold at public auction. In new Kaisows, common have been sold from 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 2d. per lb., fair from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d., good from 1s. 5d. to 1s. 9d., fine from 1s. 10d. to 2s. 5d. per lb., showing little alteration. Pak Lins have sold from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 2d. per lb., but without any activity in the demand, the chief buyers being the exporters. Black-leaf kinds: Old season's have been realised, at public sale, from 11½d. to 1s. 3d. per lb., being about former rates. In new, business has been done to a moderate extent at about previous rates, say from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10d. for good to fine, 1s. 11d. to 2s. 4d. for finest kinds. New-make Congous: The few sales made have been at rather higher prices for fair descriptions. Souchongs: A few parcels have come to hand, and been sold at full prices. Oolongs have sold in half-chests from 1s. 8d. to 2s., and in boxes at 1s. 10d. to 2s. 2d. for good to fine, being about former rates. Scented Teas: Canton Capers have been sold from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d. for fair to good and fine, on the whole at about previous prices. Orange Pekoes have been dull of sale, without further change in prices. Foochow Capers command a ready sale at full prices. Orange Pekoes also have been in good demand, without alteration on last week's rates. Green Teas: The demand continues limited, and at public sale prices ruling are very low for common to medium grades.

	1874. lbs.	1873. lbs.
Duty paid	2,264,000	1,930,000
Coastwise	751,000	736,000
Exports	1,499,000	647,000
	4,514,000	3,313,000

SILK.

There is no change to report in the market; business is still most limited, and prices unchanged. The first of the new China Silk has arrived (only a small quantity), and part of it has been sold, but the prices paid show no alteration. Deliveries from 1st to 12th inst. are 1,037 bales China, 149 bales Canton, 236 bales Japan, and 74 bales Bengal; total, 1,496 bales.

Messrs. Arles, Dufour, and Co.'s Circular, dated Lyons, 7th August, 1874, says:—We confirm our advices of the 4th July. The activity reported at that date has gradually made room since to a quieter tone. This time of the year is usually taken up by holidays, and considering the large purchases in June, a little stagnation now is easily accounted for. For European silk in particular the unusually large proportion of bad cocoons, which must be reeled first, has prevented so far arrivals of new silk from taking place; for Chinas the stock left in old silk is much reduced, and of undesirable quality; these two circumstances have also greatly contributed to restrict transactions. Prices of classical silk in all descriptions have remained firm so far, but on common grades, which are more plentiful, small concessions have been obtained. It is to be hoped that orders in silk goods, coupled with arrivals of new silk, will soon bring more life to our market.

COFFEE.—A quieter tone has characterised the market, and the public sales have gone off heavily, at a decline of 1s. to 1s. 6d. per cwt. in prices. Current quotations are:—Plantation Ceylon, triage, 88s. to 98s.; small to low middling, 109s. to 117s. 6d.; middling to bold, 118s. to 124s. 6d.; peaberry, 128s. to 132s.; Native Ceylon, small, 82s.; good bold, 96s.; peaberry, 101s. per cwt.

COCOANUT OIL.—There is a moderate demand for Ceylon, £34 15s. to £35 5s. being the present ruling value. In auction, 149 hogsheads, 182 pipes, 89 puncheons, were all bought in at 34s. 6d. to 35s.

GAMBIER.—The market is very firm, owing to extremely small supplies, and 15 tons block have been sold on the spot at 27s. per cwt., being a further advance; 150 tons sold afloat, part June sailing, at 25s., and part at 25s. 3d. ex ship.

HEMP.—Of 2,800 bales Manila offered in public sale, 250 bales were sold at £40 10s. to £49 15s. for white Quilot.

PEPPER.—Black: Of 1,700 bags offered, 300 bags only sold at ⅛d. per lb. decline; good, 6⅜d. MANCHESTER GOODS.

A steady tone has been maintained in this market, strengthened by the firmer feeling and steady demand for Cotton, and though the enquiry has been generally but moderate, buyers have found that they could make no progress under last week's full rates. All offers at any reduction have been firmly refused.

NEW YORK MARKET REPORT.—JULY 25.

COFFEE.—There is an improved demand for Brazil Coffee, and the market is fairly active. There is also a steady demand for mild descriptions. We quote as follows :—Java (Government bags) 23½c. to 26½c., Java (mats) 27c. to 28c., Singapore 20c. to 21c., Ceylon Native 19c. to 22c.

CORDAGE.—Prices are as follows: Manila Cordage, sizes above 12-thread, 16c.; ditto 6-thread and 9-thread, ¼ in. and 5-16 in. diam., 17c.; ditto 12-thread, ⅜ in. diam., 16½c.; ditto Hay Rope 16½c.; ditto Cordage, Bolt Rope Yarns, 18c.; ditto 6-thread and 9-thread, 19c.; Tarred Manila, 15½c.; Fine Tarred Manila Lath Yarn, 17c.

HEMP.—There have been sales of 2,200 bales of Manila on private terms, understood to be at about 8½c. gold for current.

INDIGO.—There is a small jobbing demand, and we notice sales of 16 cases Manila at 70c. to 80c., and 6 ditto Bengal at $1.72½ gold.

RICE.—Foreign remains inactive; Carolina is firm.

SUGAR.—There is an active demand both for raw and refined Sugar, and business is better than of late.

SPICES.—Mace and Cloves are higher, and Pepper is very firm. We quote as follows :—Mace, $1.14 to $1.25; Nutmegs, $1.15; China Cassia, 23½c. to 24c.; Batavia Cassia, 20c. to 25c.

TIN.—Straits Tin is quoted 23¾c., and Banca 26½c. (gold).

TEA.—Some new Formosa Oolong has arrived, and sales have been made of perhaps 1,500 pkgs.; prices, however, are lower than at the opening of last year. Some new Congou is also to hand, but we hear of no sales of note; the quality of that arrived is very fine, and the impression is that the supply in the future will, as a rule, be of better quality than that of previous years. For new Japan the market is slow; there is, however, a better distributing trade, the country jobbers taking hold rather more cheerfully, as prices have a more settled appearance than earlier in the season, though as yet they are in buyers' favour. Fine grades of Green are strong, and held firmly, while business, in consequence, is only moderate. New Pingsuey are expected in about ten days or two weeks. The sales besides the above are 1,735 half-chests Japan, and 500 ditto Green. By auction, 800 pkgs. Green sold at 22c. to 68c., and 300 ditto Japan 41½c. to 57c., cash.

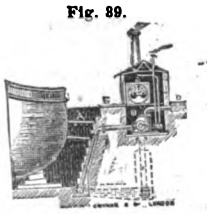
GWYNNE and Co., Hydraulic and Mechanical Engineers,

ESSEX STREET WORKS, STRAND, LONDON, W.C.

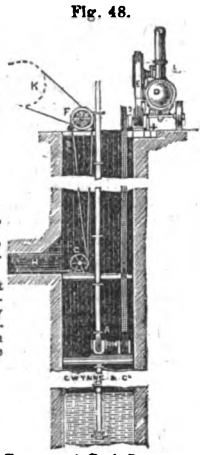
Fig. 89.



GWYNNE & Co.'s PATENT PUMPING MACHINERY, AS APPLIED TO EMPTYING DOCKS.

The whole arrangement very compact and self-contained. References to many applications combining unparalleled efficiency with moderate first cost will be given.

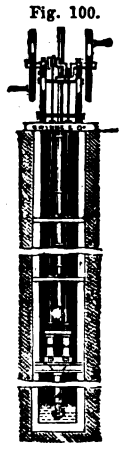
Fig. 48.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT CENTRIFUGAL PUMP.

Fixed in a deep well, mine, or coal-pit, and driven by a portable or fixed engine fixed on the surface of the ground. Can be had of all sizes, and capable of raising any quantity of Water.

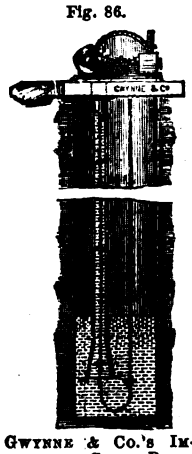
Fig. 100.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED DOUBLE BARREL DEEP-WELL PUMP,

For Hand-power, adapted for ordinary wells of any depth, of most carefulconstruction, and on the most approved system.

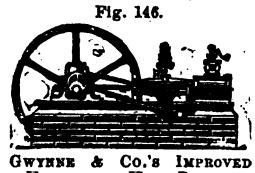
Fig. 86.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED CHAIN PUMP, WORKED DIRECT BY STEAM ENGINE.

These Pumps work without valves or packing, and raise a considerable quantity of water. They will lift sand, mud, or grit without choking, and require only very inexpensive repairs.

Fig. 146.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED HORIZONTAL HIGH-PRESSURE STEAM ENGINE.

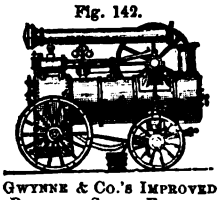
With or without Expansion Gear, for economical working.
From 4 to 100-horse power.

Fig. 154.

GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED CORNISH BOILERS WITH DOUBLE FLUES.

These boilers are simple and compact. They are proved by hydraulic power to double the working pressure, are got up with the greatest care, and none but first-class materials are used in their construction. Estimates given for any size or shape of boiler.

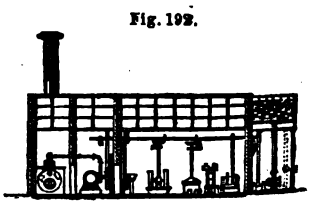
Fig. 142.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED PORTABLE STEAM ENGINE.

Light, simple in construction, durable, and economical, and very superior to "Agricultural" Engines.
From 2½ to 30-horse power.

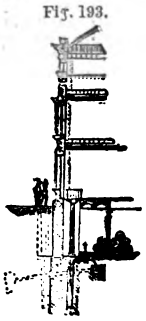
Fig. 192.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED MACHINERY FOR PRESSING OIL FROM SEED, OLIVES, FAT, &c., &c.

The above shows an arrangement for a seed oil mill, and comprises, besides the requisite motive power, a crushing mill, pair of runners, heating apparatus, hydraulic press, and pumps. A Centrifugal Pump is added to lift water or any purpose required.

Fig. 193.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED HYDRAULIC LIFTS.

Worked by the supply from a tank at the top of the building, or from main pipe of any water company's supply. Well adapted for lowering wine, or other produce, into or up from cellars, or may be modified for lowering bankers' and jewellers' safes into the strong rooms. The waste water runs into the sewer.

Prices on application.

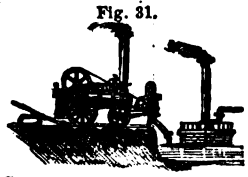
Fig. 121.

GWYNNE & Co.'s BORING TOOLS.

Of greatly improved construction. The figure represents those most frequently used, but the form and number vary much with the nature of the soil, and size of the bore hole.

G. & Co. can confidently recommend these as the best in the market.

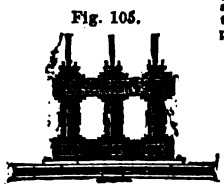
Fig. 31.



GWYNNE & Co.'s PATENT PORTABLE PUMPING ENGINE AND FLOATING IRRIGATOR.

In which the Pumps are furnished with hose for distributing the water over the adjoining plantations. Made in all sizes.

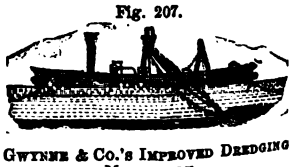
Fig. 105.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED TREBLE BARREL LIFT AND FORCE PUMP.

These are made with gun metal barrels, copper piston rods, and brass valves. The workmanship and materials throughout are of the very best class, and comparison with those of other makers is challenged. Gwynne & Co. make single and double-barrelled pumps upon the same principles.

Fig. 207.



GWYNNE & Co.'s IMPROVED DREDGING MACHINERY.

The boat can be constructed so as to draw only 18 inches of water, if required. The machinery is extremely simple, yet thoroughly effective, the workmanship and materials are of the first class, and the amount of work it will do, compared with the cost, most favourable.

TWENTY PRIZE MEDALS AWARDED TO THIS MACHINERY IN ALL THE CHIEF CITIES OF THE WORLD.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

AND PILLS.—Diseases of the skin, ringworm, scurvy, jaundice, scrofula or king's evil, sore heads, and the most inveterate outward diseases to which the human frame is subject, cannot be treated with a more safe and certain remedy than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution and so purify the blood that those diseases are at once eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. They are equally efficacious in the cure of tumours, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism, contracted and stiff joints. These medicines operate mildly and surely. The cures effected by them are not temporary or apparent only, but complete and permanent.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The Pacific Mail Company's steamer Colorado arrived at San Francisco on the 8th Aug., with dates from Yokohama to the 20th July. The following has been telegraphed to the New York papers:—

The great subject of interest still continues to be the Japanese expedition to Formosa. The Japanese have quite succeeded in the primary object of the expedition, and might retire with good grace. Indeed, they have nothing else to do there, unless it be true that they think of colonising, and that, to all foreigners and to many among themselves, appears mere folly.

The Mikado has made no public appearance during the month.

The Emperor pays out of his privy purse the expenses of a foreign doctor to attend the troops in Formosa.

The Deliberative Assembly commences its sitting in September.

There is a report that the Japanese have left the Island of Saghalien and gone to Yesso.

It has been publicly mentioned for some days, and not contradicted, that the would-be assassins of Iwakura, lately Japanese Ambassador to Foreign Powers, have been decapitated.

The Japanese Government has appealed to the Circuit Court of California against an adverse decision given by a United States Consul, in the last suit against the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, for $10,250 damages, for breaches of contract.

Shipments of tea from here continue to be on a larger scale than in former seasons. In consequence of the excessive competition among buyers, prices have run too high to leave a margin of probable profit to buyers.

The Government is evidently opposed to the circulation of foreigners in the interior unless they will agree to be subject to Japanese law.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

Dates by this mail extend to the 4th July. The outward French mail of 22nd May was expected on the morning of the 5th July. We take the following items from the North China Herald:—

The Chinese are reported to be pushing on the making of ammunition at the Shanghai Arsenal, with the view of putting their gunboats in a state for active service. Though some of the vessels have been afloat a considerable time, their equipment has never been completed, but now that emergency arises the tardy Mandarins are having the spur applied to them. Lead-cased shot for rifled ordnance, common shot, fuses, cartridges, &c., are being turned out, and occasionally shipments are made "for Tientsin." The making of shell has not, we believe, been so far accomplished, and the torpedoes are said to be not altogether a success.

A memorial, addressed to the Recreation Fund Trustees, against the rumoured intention to appeal the recent case, is in circulation, and has already received a large number of signatures. It is stated that the Fund Trustees have already applied for leave to appeal, and are prepared personally to bear the costs.

Meetings of the Mih-ho-loong Hook and Ladder and Rifle Companies have been held at the Truck-house, for the purpose of electing a first assistant foreman of the former and a lieutenant in the latter Company. The vacancies had been caused by the resignation of Mr. Groom. Captain Rice occupied the chair, and expressed the regret of the members at the prospect of losing the active and efficient services of Mr. Groom. At the unanimous desire of both companies, Mr. Groom, after explaining the reasons which had induced him to resign, consented to withdraw his resignation, and resume the two offices. The announcement was received with much applause and formal, motions were proposed, seconded, and carried unanimously, that the withdrawal should be received. Four new members of the Hook and Ladder Company were elected, viz., Messrs. S. Campbell, Mackenzie Bradley, Grose and Andrew; and Mr. W. Pryer was placed on the Committee in the room of Mr. Low, resigned.

The Temperance Society's opening meeting in the new Hall went off successfully. The programme included several good songs, a recitation, a telling address by Rev. Mr. Thomas, and a Shakesperian reading, from the Merchant of Venice, which was admirably given. The President, Mr. Blethen, made a few remarks at the close in a congratulatory and hopeful strain, and intimated that it was intended to hold fortnightly meetings during the summer. The meeting marks an important epoch in the history of an excellent, and, we are glad to be able to say, flourishing institution.

The new regulations for jinricksha traffic have come into force. Stands have been fixed, and notice boards are to be put up in order that the coolies may have before them the rules by which they are to be guided. The police have recently been endeavouring to bring the men to a sense of what is required of them, by restricting as much as possible the practice of perambulation in search of hire. Generally the offenders have been cautioned and allowed to go, but on Monday a first example was made by taking one to the Mixed Court, where the Magistrate ordered that he should be locked up for the day. The result is a great improvement in the behaviour of this class of public servants; when they do try "crawling," instead of persecuting pedestrians with the incessant iteration of "master, sit down," they venture only to bring their vehicle close to the intended victim, and to halt a moment, in the hope that he may be induced to step into it unsolicited. It will be no slight boon, in the crowded state of our streets, to have them kept under strict regulation.

The list of Silk shipped by the Venetia gives, for London, 2,151 bales; Marseilles, 232; Lyons, 147; Milan, 50; Basle, 10; Bombay, 73; total, 2,663 bales. In addition, there were from Shanghai 67, and from Japan 66 bales waste silk for London.

There was a parade of 120 men of all ranks and companies of the S.V.C. on Monday night, including one gun of the Artillery and a few Rangers. The night was very hot, and the men of No. 2 looked enviously at the white jackets worn by Nos. 1 and 3, instead of the customary woollen tunic. Ammunition having been served out—rather unequally, for some got too much and some none at all—the column was marched out by the Maloo and Sinzah roads. An unseen enemy was engaged at the Gas-works, and the fight was continued by alternate skirmishing of companies until the Sinza village was passed. The march was then continued along Carter-road, and was hastened by the lowering aspect of the sky. An occasional halt was made for volley firing, and the Bund reached about eleven, when the men gladly dispersed, in search of dry clothing and cool drinks.

It was announced that the occurrence of the Volunteer parade would necessitate the omission of Wednesday's band performance, the usual practice night being taken up by it. The public were agreeably surprised on Wednesday, however, by having an exprses put into their hands intimating that, "by special desire," the weekly concert would come off as usual. A change of programme was provided, and the gardens were thronged. The night was charming; a cool breeze came from the river, the moon shone out on the scene, and to add to the panoramic effect on the water, a public-spirited yacht-owner had his craft garlanded with Chinese lanterns from stem to mast-head and mast-head to stern. The performance altogether was a great pleasure, and we are sure the public fully recognise their obligations to the members of the W. I. S. for the exertions they made to accomplish it. We are sorry to hear that the absorption in the orchestra for Chiarini's Circus, of the subsidised portion of the society's band, embracing most of the forte instruments, is likely to interrupt the weekly performances.

The translations from the Peking Gazette include a case which is very interesting as a sample of Chinese criminal jurisprudence. A man who murders his mother, though unmistakably lunatic, is, in conformity with the statutory punishment for the offence, sentenced to be sliced to death, while various small punishments are inflicted on neighbours who were cognisant of the man's condition and failed to report it to the authorities.

A meeting of Treaty Consuls was held on the 30th of June last, at which the representatives of Austro-Hungary, Denmark, Great Britian, Italy, Portugal, Sweden, Norway, and the United States were present. Intimations were received from the representatives of France, Japan and Russia of their inability to attend the meeting. After various correspondence had been read, it was agreed that Mr. Medhurst, on behalf of the Consular Body, should address the Taoutai in regard to his reports to the Governor-General upon the Woosung Bar, and the possibility of dredging it.

The suggestion contained in Mr. Seward's letter to the Council of June 25th, in regard to the tax on the Yangtse-poo Road, was approved, pending the response of the Council. Mr. Seward reported that the Taoutai has expressed himself favourable to the proposal of the Consular Body for the delineation of a Bund line on both sides of the river, and requested the Magistrate of the Mixed Court, and the Commissioner of Customs, to consult in regard to it. At Mr. Glover's suggestion, Mr. Medhurst and Mr. Seward had met Mr. Glover, Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Viguier for consultation. The latter has undertaken to prepare, as a first measure, a chart of the river, tracing upon it lines already determined, and those which he is prepared to recommend. This chart will be submitted to the Consular Body in the course of about two months. The matter of the requisition upon the Taoutai for a part of the cost of the Szechuen Road bridge was left for consideration, after the further views of the Council shall have been communicated.

FOOCHOW.

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.)

The successful putting up of a telegraph connecting the foreign settlement at Foochow with Pagoda anchorage is an accomplished fact. From the foreign settlement it is to be carried into the Governor General's yamun in the city. Each of the telegraph post has an official notice painted on it warning the people not to interfere with them in any way, for if they do they will be severely punished. This line of telegraph cannot possibly pay the company; it is put up simply as an experiment, with the hope that they may induce the Viceroy to allow them to make an overland telegraph from the settlement to Amoy. Time will show what can be done. If there are complications with Japan no doubt it will be allowed, but not without. It is wonderful how Feng Shuy and such other obstacles to improvements vanish when the authorities are determined to carry a thing through.

Were it not that the Viceroy wishes to get speedy news of any Japanese vessels that may be cruising about, and wishing to place himself in instantaneous communication with the arsenal down at the anchorage, I fear the whole body of Foreign Consuls would have had to appeal a long time before they could have induced the authorities to allow them to erect a telegraph along the river to the Pagoda.

Thus far the Japanese excitement has done good, and will, I am convinced, do much more good to China before the affair is ended. China begins to perceive that she cannot look calmly on and see a near neighbour, whom she has hitherto looked upon almost in the light of a tributary State, going ahead and adopting the arts and sciences of Western nations and placing her in the background.

Whether the invasion of Formosa by the Japanese will end in war or not, there is this much certain, that China will find that if she wants to keep apace with Japan she must also cultivate the arts and sciences of the West, and I am inclined to think one of the first steps will be to have telegraphs stretching from one part of the Empire to the other. Railways may follow if China can only be brought to see the use of them, which, with an increasing fleet, she must do, for her ships will require coal, abundance of which there is in China, only waiting for a tramway or a railway to take it to a place of shipment.

It is generally thought that in the event of a war with Japan that the whole wooden fleet of China will be useless, and will be utterly unable to cope with the two Japanese ironclads. It is rumoured that the Chinese have telegraphed to Europe for the purchase of ironclads, which they think, if they can once get to China, they will be a fair match for the Japanese. China is, however, doing her utmost to prevent an open rupture; she is totally unprepared for war. She is painting up old forts, and placing old rusty guns in position. Woe betide the unfortunate men who fire them. I hear at the Arsenal they are getting drawings of torpedoes made—whether for use in this war I do not know.

HONG KONG.

Dates extend to the 11th July. No later mail had arrived out.

We take the following from the Daily Press :—

Mr. Taro Ando has been appointed Vice-Consul for Japan at Hong Kong.

Our Macao correspondent informs us that Dr. Magalhaes' resignation from the military service has been accepted at Lisbon, and that he will now be no longer under the yoke of military discipline, from which he has suffered so much. Dr. Magalhaes has written a letter to the Independente, in which he states that he will discontinue the Oriente, but will devote his time to writing a volume, which will elucidate many points connected with the history of Macao in his time—that is from 1869 to 1874—and will give a sketch of the lives of the various Governors of Macao and Timor.

The Bulletin says that San Francisco promises to be the great tea depot of the United States. Recent critical examination of teas in store here for two or three years were found to be nearly as fresh and good as when first imported. Other tests have recently been made here by New York tea sharps with like results. Tea-tasters from Japan have also been here recently looking into this matter, and they are astonished to find their old teas keeping so well here ; they even say that in this dry climate teas will keep here three years in better condition than even four months in Japan or China. This is a very important matter, and goes to settle the question of making San Francisco the great depot and tea distributing point for the whole United States.

Her Majesty's ship Challenger, Captain G. S. Nares, was to leave New Zealand for China about the end of June.

Two Chinese in Gilman's bazaar over a squabble clashed choppers at each other, and were so seriously injured that the police had to send them to the hospital, and the symptoms of one before noon became so alarming that Dr. Wharry deemed it advisable to send for a magistrate to take the dying man's depositions. Mr. May, with a Court interpreter, accordingly repaired to the hospital for that purpose.

The Surveyor-General, in his endeavour to bring the roads and footpaths of the colony into their proper state and use, has obtained the removal of the numerous pork stalls, bird cages, money changers, and other like obstructions on the footpaths, which impeded his progress and that of the public. The long-standing obstructions in Cochrane-street came under Mr. May's notice yesterday, having been brought up by P. C. No. 8. The masters of the places named were told they would be given till Monday to clear away the obstructions, and if not done by that time the stalls would be seized and the owners punished.

A new weekly paper, entitled the Celestial Empire, has been issued at Shanghai at the Evening Gazette office. It is very well got up and arranged, and the first number contains good articles, a carefully written chronicle of the week, and commercial report.

The Inspector-General of Customs has issued, in conjunction with the usual annual returns of trade at the treaty ports, an abstract of trade with each foreign country since the year 1866. As illustrative of the progress which has been made, it may be noted that the direct trade with Great Britain, which amounted to fifty millions of taels in 1866, has increased to sixty-five millions of taels in 1873.

THE FORMOSA EXPEDITION.

TAKAO, JUNE 20.

The Japanese occupation of Linkian is now causing very great agitation amongst the Chinese in Formosa, and matters look as if the two nations were very soon to come into collision over it. We have the gunboat Dwarf from the south, bringing very little news of the invasion. The extreme heat, and the fact that the Japanese have routed the most dangerous savages in those parts, have led to a cessation of hostilities for the present. The Japanese have partly removed to the opposite side of the island from Linkian, leaving still a camp with about 3,000 men at that place. Several Chinese villages have asked their protection, and many of the savage tribes are friendly. Progress in following up the Boutang savages is somewhat slow, on account of the mountainous nature of the country.

From time to time there have been arrivals of steamers and junks at Taiwanfoo with detachments of soldiers, arms, and ammunition, until I am informed there are now 20,000 Chinese troops in the island to suppress rebellion or defend it against invaders. The 3,000 or 4,000 troops sent to Changhoe to quell the disturbances there, have not returned to Taiwanfoo with the Chintai, but await the ripening of the rice crop in that district, with a view to securing it for their own benefit. This fact is interesting, in so far as it shows how Chinese troops are paid and fed, or rather left to pay and feed themselves—contrary to all discipline and proper control. About one-half of the Fokienese troops are armed with rifles and one-half with matchlocks, the Formosa men having only bows and arrows and spears ; but it is one thing to put rifles and sword bayonets in the hands of that the Chinese, and quite another thing to expect they will keep them well and understand their use. I observed that those who have them always keep the bayonets fixed, sometimes with scabbard and sometimes without it, and lug the combined arm about just as they would one of their long spears, with a bit of paper stuck in the barrel, and the lock rusted up. They are not oppressed with platoon exercise nor company drill, and blaze about with blank cartridge in the most promiscuous manner outside their barrack gate, just like a lot of boys with toy cannon. One man may have a percussion rifle, while his next neighbour labours away for an indefinite period of time trying to fire off an old matchlock with a fuse made of hempen rope, the disadvantages of the latter not being in any way discouraging to the simple-minded "brave."

Amongst the most recent arrivals at Taiwan-foo, there are three gunboats and one frigate or corvette, and these vessels may have some useful modern armament on board for the defence of Formosa. I did hear that the Anlan had a battery of Krupp guns from Canton. I have observed, however, a great quantity of rubbish being landed, in the shape of gingals—new, and evidently just out of the maker's hand—spear-heads, and hand grenades.

As yet the action of the Chinese had taken no particular direction, and it is possible they may only intend to stand on the defensive, but there has been lately a great stir at Taiwanfoo in anticipation of the arrival of a very high Mandarin who, backed up by twenty ships of war (four have already arrived and one or two war junks) is to "order" the Japanese away, and in the event of their refusing to expel them by force of arms. Rumour also adds that all foreigners will be set upon and killed at the same time. This Mandarin turns out to be Shen Pao Chen, formerly of the Foochow Arsenal, and he is accompanied by M. Giquel and M. Sejonzack. The party arrived on the 18th at Taiwanfoo, and I understand are soon to proceed to Linkian.

(To the Editor of the "North-China Daily News.")

SIR,—During a somewhat protracted residence here I have been a reader of your and other foreign journals published in China, and also of the papers published in the Chinese language. In all these I have discovered evidence of misapprehension, which may perhaps form a source of mischief, as regards the relations subsisting between my country and China. I beg therefore you will allow me to make a few remarks on the Formosan question in your issue of to-morrow morning.

The Formosan savages have repeatedly inflicted injuries on my countrymen which have lately been alluded to in your paper. For example, they slaughtered fifty-four Japanese belonging to the district of Yoyeyama, and in 1871 four shipwrecked men belonging to the district of Bitchu were robbed and maltreated and their junk rifled of everything. Claims for their wrongs have never been investigated by the Chinese Government, although years have elapsed since the occurrence complained of, which proves that the savages were far beyond Chinese influence, and over whom their authority did not extend.

I would add, moreover, that Prince Kung and other authorities of the Tsung-li Yamen discussed this matter last year at Peking with Mr. Soyeshima, and made not the slightest objections to the punishment of the savages by the Japanese Government, leaving them entirely at the disposal of Japan.

Our Government regarded this answer to their remonstrance as decisive, and accordingly decided on the Formosan expedition, which, we hold, is justified on two grounds—first, the disclaimer of responsibility on the part of the Chinese Government for the conduct of the savages ; and, second, their neglect of inflicting punishment. I have no doubt, therefore, that International law admits that, when a Government demands the punishment of those who have offended its people, and punishment is not inflicted, an expedition may be rightfully fitted out to obtain redress on the spot where the offence was committed.

Besides, the Japanese in this case having first obtained the assent of the Chinese Government to their taking the matter in hand themselves, no further communication was necessary.

Mr. Yanagiwara, the Japanese ambassador to China, is now at Shanghai, and I believe that he is negotiating on the matter with Mr. Pau (a special commissioner from his Majesty the Emperor of China, together with the Taoutai), to place the question on a friendly footing, which seems quite feasible, seeing that Prince Kung and the other Tsung-li Yamen authorities will not deny their former acquiescence.—

Very truly yours, MAKOTO.

SARAWAK.

The Sarawak Gazette of 1st July has the following :—

Our rice harvest is now over, and is doubtless the most abundant we have had for years. We have received reports of the most satisfactory nature from all parts of the country; the least favourable being from Simanggang, where the crops were exceptionally good in the upper parts of Sakarran and Batang Lupar, but poor down river, on account of the ravages committed by rats.

The fine season so favourable to rice partly accounts for this abundance, but we are of opinion that the real reason lies deeper by referring to the trade returns we find scarcity of rice commenced with the working of gutta, the high price paid for that article caused rice culture to be neglected and farming a secondary consideration, as the wealth so easily obtained gave those engaged in collecting it the means of purchasing not only rice but luxuries.

In 1872 over three thousand tons of rice were imported from Singapore, in 1873 three thousand seven hundred tons. This year it has not reached nine hundred tons, and shows two hundred piculs imported in the month of June, against five thousand eight hundred piculs last year.

The gutta export is now much smaller, owing to its scarcity and the difficulties of collecting, farming has therefore received more attention, and a large increase in the production of rice, the result. Rice is getting cheaper every day ; and being exported to the Brunei side. The people are working steadily at their farms and collecting rattans ; and, in spite of the falling off on the export of gutta and import of rice, we consider it a sign of prosperity far healthier than that attained in 1871 and 1872 by the rush after gutta, inasmuch as it benefits the whole of the population instead of enriching the few.

PENANG.

No. 1.

PROCLAMATION AS TO PERAK.

By his Excellency Colonel Sir Andrew Clarke, R.E., C.B., K.C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Straits Settlements.

Whereas an Engagement was entered into at Pulo Pankor on the 20th day of January 1874, at the instance of the Chiefs of Perak, and executed in the presence of his Excellency the Governor of the Straits Settlements, for the pacification of the country, the re-establishment of the Royal Family and Chiefs in their respective ranks and authority, for the security of the people in life and property, the advancement of trade, and the development of the resources of the country; which engagement was entered into by the said Chiefs of their own free will, and with the intent and desire that the same should be carried into effect under the protection, and with the aid of Her Majesty's Government; and Whereas the said Engagement has been approved.

Now be it Known to all Men, that, in terms of the said Engagement, Sultan Abdulla Mahamed Shah, son of the late Sultan Jaaffar Al MaAllum Shah, is recognised by Her Majesty's Government as Sultan of Perak and its Dependencies, and all Her Majesty's subjects and persons being in the Territories of Perak are required to take notice thereof, and to govern themselves accordingly; and Whereas, certain evil disposed persons are said to be engaged in conspiracies to disturb the peace of the said country of Perak, and to incite to rebellion against the lawful authority of the said Sultan Abdulla, and to the waging of unlawful war in Perak, such persons are hereby warned and required to desist from such practices, under the pains and penalties in that case made and provided.—By his Excellency's Command,

A. E. H. Anson, Lieut.-Governor of Penang.

Lieut.-Governor's Office, Penang, 13th July, 1874.

No. 2.

By his Excellency Colonel Sir Andrew Clarke, R.E., C.B., K.C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Straits Settlements.

Whereas by an Engagement entered into at Pulo Pangkor on the 20th day of January, 1874, at the instance of and by the Chiefs of Perak, it was among other things agreed that the Baudahara Ismail, then acting as Regent Sultan of Perak, should on the recognition of Sultan Abdullah Mahomed Shah (son of the late Sultan Jaaffar Al Ma Alum Shah) be allowed to retain the title of ex-Sultan, with a pension, and that a small territory should be assigned to him; and whereas the terms of the said Engagement have been approved.

Now be it known to all men, that, in terms of the said Engagement, the said Ismail is recognised as ex-Sultan of Perak, and the sum of $1,000 is assigned to be paid to him monthly out of the revenues of Perak, and all the private property, in mines, lands, houses, cattle, &c., held by the said ex-Sultan Ismail, is preserved to him for his own use and purposes, and a portion of territory shall hereafter be marked out, by Commissioners to be appointed for that purpose, to be governed by the said ex Sultan Ismail, and hereafter no Taxes or Customs or other Duties shall be levied by the said ex-Sultan Ismail on persons other than those living on his own property, or in the territory to be so assigned to him.—By his Excellency's Command,

A. E. H. Anson, Lieut.-Governor of Penang.

Lieut.-Governor's Office, Penang, 13th July, 1874.

No. 3.

By his Excellency Colonel Sir Andrew Clarke, R.E., C.B., K.C.M.G., Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Straits Settlements.

Whereas by an Engagement entered into at Pulo Pankor on the 20th day of January, 1874, at the instance of and by the Chiefs of Perak, it was among other things agreed that a certain portion of territory, that is to say the watershed of the Kreean river, on the southern side of the river, should be declared to be British territory, as a rectification of the southern boundary of Province Wellesley, to the mutual advantage of both countries, the boundaries of which territory will hereafter be marked out as provided by the said Engagement; and whereas the terms of the said Engagement have been approved.

Now be it known to all men that the watershed on the South side of the Kreean River, the inner boundaries of which will hereafter be marked out, is hereby declared to be British Territory, and that no authority is to be exercised and no taxes are to be levied in the said Territory, and anywhere in Perak to the South of the Kreean river, except by the Government of the Straits Settlement and by H. M.'s Resident or Assistant Resident in Perak, acting on behalf of the Sultan of Perak; and, with a view to the levy of the lawful revenue of the said places and securing the lives and property of persons trading in the said River Kreean, notice is hereby given that, on application at the Police Station at Nebong Tubal, by any person desiring to bring produce or goods up or down the said River Kreean, passes will be issued, and protection given, by the Officers in charge of the said Station, and all persons are warned against interfering with persons and boats in the said river, or attempting to take taxes in money or kind, under any pretext whatever. And further be it known that the rights of all persons now occupying and being in possession of lands in the said territory will be respected, and their lawful holdings guaranteed and secured to them, and for this purpose all such persons are invited to lodge their claims at the office of the Lieutenant-Governor at Penang, and all persons desiring to acquire unoccupied lands for the purpose of occupation, cultivation, or mining, can apply at the same office.—By his Excellency's Commander, A. E. H. Anson,

Lieut.-Governor of Penang.

Commercial Report.

IMPORTS.

Shanghai.—The business of the past week has been large. Business in Grey Shirtings was rather more brisk. White Shirtings are not moved without difficulty. There is a steady inquiry for T-Cloths. Drills of the ordinary kind have been wanted by the Northern traders. Jeans and Fancy Cottons are dull. Woollens have remained steady.

Manila.—During the past fortnight a considerable amount of business has been transacted at late quotations, although in some few cases prices have shown a somewhat downward tendency. For some classes of Coloured Goods, suitable for the rainy season now commencing, large sales have been made at a slight advance upon previous rates, but Prints continue difficult to move at remunerative prices.

EXPORTS.

TEA.

Hankow.—Messrs. Drysdale, Ringer and Co.'s Report dated 30th June, says:—Since our last there has been very little doing, settlements being 7,370 chests and 7,052 half-chests, particulars of same are as follows:—4,886 chests and 5,498 half-chests at 1s. 4¾d. to 1s. 7¼d.; 2,984 chests and 1,242 half-chests at 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 4½d.; and 312 half-chests at 1s. 1¼d. There were 3,320 boxes shipped to Shanghai on native account. The only feature of interest during the week has been the arrival of the second crop Teas. They are chiefly from the Younglow-toong district and a few sales have been made from Tls. 20 to 22, one or two mixed parcels realising up to 23. This is about the Tael price paid last year, but with the favourable rates of exch. and freight they lay down a little under last year's prices. As regards quality, the few better parcels are about on a par with those of last year, but the bulk of the Tea to hand, so far, is of very inferior character. Buying has been confined to three or four houses and when the best Teas have been picked out we shall probably see much lower rates; or what is more likely, the Tea will be hurried forward to Shanghai. The first crop leaf may now be considered all to hand and we estimate that it shows a falling off of quite two millions compared with that of last year. Whether the deficiency will be made up in the later packings remains to be seen.

Shanghai.—Our Black Tea market has been very firm during the week, and a fair business has been done, though supplies have come forward very sparingly. The better grades of Ningchow have been more in demand than any other class, but most late settlements of these kinds shew fully Tls. 2 worse than was obtainable a fortnight ago. Second crop Teas have as yet only been shewn here to a small extent, and business in these has not commenced; but latest Hankow advices report that teamen were commencing to ship to this port. The quality so far proves to be anything but fine. Settlements during the week—13,136 chests at Tls. 19 for Shontam, up to Tls. 42 for fine Ningchow in boxes. Stock, 13,000 chests. Green: The market for Pingsueys continued strong up to the date of departure of the Pacific mail, but prices seem easier during the past two days, though still above those of last year at same date. Arrivals have been on a fairly large scale, and of good averge quality. Settlements for the week—9,663 half-chests Pingsuey, at Tls. 36½ to 53—according to assortment. Stock—Pingsuey, 22,900 half-chests; Shanghai-packed, 1,100 half-chests; total, 24,000 half-chests.

Manila.—Small sales have been made of Coffee. Sugar is weaker, but Hemp has advanced, the current price being $6.75 to $7 per picul.

Saigon.—Quotations for Rice are maintained with but very little alterations. Exports to Europe, Calcutta, and Java, have entirely ceased.

THE JAPANESE EXPEDITION TO FORMOSA.

HONG KONG, AUG. 18.—Negotiations are still proceeding between the Chinese and Japanese Governments upon the Formosa question. China is stated to have given the Japanese ninety days to withdraw from Formosa, and is making immense preparations for war in the event of Japan refusing this ultimatum. The newspapers are confident of a peaceful solution, but among the Chinese there is a prevalent opinion that war will ensue.

TYPHOON IN JAPAN.

SHANGHAI, AUG. 22.

A severe typhoon prevailed at Nagasaki on the night of the 20th inst., causing much damage ashore and afloat and considerable loss of life among the native population.

SHANGHAI MORALITY.

(To the Editor of the London and China Telegraph.)

Sir,—I must congratulate you on being the first journalist who has denounced the open profligacy that is carried on in Shanghai, to the ruin of many promising young men. The Settlement is overrun with European women of various nationalities, who are allowed to ply for hire and drive in carriages with livery servants on the Bubbling Well-road, or Rotten-row of Shanghai, without interference by the police. It is well known that young men who are foolish enough to visit the dens of these women have heavy bills sent in to them next day, under threats of exposure if not paid. This has already led to the ruin of several members of our community, and it is, in my humble opinion, high time that something was done to check this species of swindling. The female swindler is notoriously difficult to deal with. The Municipal Council ought to instruct the police to banish those individuals from the public streets in the daytime. It has been done in London, and it is now possible to walk down Regent-street with your wife or daughter without being jostled by abandoned women in a state of semi-nudity. The shopkeepers of Regent-street found it interfered with their business, so it was put down; I therefore fail to see why it cannot be kept under in Shanghai. An auction was lately held in Shanghai at one of these houses, furnished in the most sumptuous style, the proceeds of the sale amounting to two thousand pounds. The question arises, therefore, from whom did this money come? One of the fraternity lately retired with a fortune of £15,000 (Tls. 50,000.) The local press have not used their influence in exposing this evil, but may, perhaps, do so. It has been denounced from the pulpit, but still it flourishes like an "upas tree," killing all who approach too near its deadly influence.—I am Sir, your obedient servant,

Shanghai, July 4, 1874. Pater Familias.

JAPANESE RAID ON FORMOSA.

The Standard has the following upon this subject:—From the great value of the trade we carry on both with China and Japan a war between these two empires could hardly fail to affect our interests in the East. But there is another point of view from which the quarrel that has thus suddenly sprung up is still more deserving of attention. It is quite evident that the empire of Japan is at this moment one vast powder-magazine. Within the past dozen years changes have been effected there greater even than those which the first French Revolution accomplished in Europe. Japan has been made to traverse five centuries at a bound—that is to say, a society of the fifteenth century has been transformed all at once into one of the nineteenth. As was inevitable, the revolution has dissolved the bonds that cemented classes together, and, as the conduct of the Samurai on the present occasion proves, discontent, if not disaffection, is rife in the land. Evidently passions may at any moment burst their bounds, and plunge the empire into anarchy. But it is, perhaps, more probable that the Government may allow the military class to have their way and engage in foreign war. At present it would seem as if the first quarrel would be picked with China. A few years ago, while the Taepings were in strength, while Yunan was in the hands of Mohammedan rebels, and other Mussulman hordes were encroaching on the north, such a quarrel would have been a serious matter for China. But her Government has now reasserted its authority everywhere except in Turkestan. It has introduced European discipline in the army, provided itself with armour-plated steamers, and equipped its troops with European arms of precision. Considering the enormous population it disposes of, China is evidently no longer a foe to be despised, and in seeking a quarrel with her Japan would seem to be courting disaster. But the quarrel, should it proceed to extremities, will probably compel China to postpone her meditated attack upon the ruler of Eastern Turkestan, that Ataligh Ghazee whom Mr. Forsyth has just been visiting. Turkestan, as the reader doubtless is aware, was formerly a Chinese province. It has thrown off the yoke. But China is not ccustomed to acknowledge the success of insurrections, and as she has now put down all other rebels, she is understood to be preparing for an attack upon the Toorkish Amer. The subjugation of this State by the Chinese would certainly not be conducive to Anglo-Indian interests.

RUSSIA AND CHINA.

The New York Herald has the following:—Sooner or later there must come a new collision in Central Asia. The steady advance of the Russian frontier in the direction of Kashgar is sure to rouse the resistance of the Chinese Government. But the Celestial Empire is already paralysed at the extremities; it is not impossible that an attack from without would result in a tumbling to pieces of that vast, but decaying, empire. The fact that China has viewed without effectual opposition the practical dismemberment of numerous outlying provinces is sufficient indication of the fatal disease that already has its seat in the heart of the Government at Peking. In what shape shall come the final struggle we cannot tell. But it now seems inevitable that the political complications in Eastern Turkestan and other parts of Central Asia will soon be as threatening to the peace of Europe as the Eastern question has ever been. It is quite possible that China will be the Sick Man, while Turkey is recovering its sound health. The Peking Government has promised to recover Nan-lu, as they still call Kashgar, as soon as the Mohammedan revolt in the Western Provinces, begun eighteen years ago, shall have been quelled. China keeps up the form of bearing on the official roll the names of the Ambans of the dismembered provinces; but this conciliation to its ancient national pride has no weight. The shears of fate are slowly clipping off the frayed edges of the Celestial Empire. This generation may see its final collapse.

Import of Java Sugar into the Clyde.—The trade between the Clyde and the island of Java (says the Liverpool Journal of Commerce) is increasing so extensively that Java now holds position as one of the largest raw sugar exporting islands to the Clyde. Up till the end of last month Java stood next to Cuba in the amount of sugar sent to the Clyde, and even exceeded Trinidad, and, considering the great distance the sugars have to be carried, the Java is about as cheap as the Cuba sugars. The unusually rapid expansion of the manufacture of this raw sugar, and its increasing import to the Clyde, have been remarkable. Only four years ago the total arrivals of sugar cargoes from Java were two vessels of 1,466 tons. In 1871 the number increased to five ships of 3,030 tons, while in 1872 the number reached twelve vessels of 10,563 tons. Last year the import from Java, owing to a scarcity, fell to five vessels of 4,047 tons, but in the seven months of this year there have arrived in the Clyde no fewer than twenty-seven vessels of 15,103 tons, being nearly a half of the amount imported from the various Cuban ports, 2,000 tons over the import from Trinidad, and three times the import from the Brazils or Porto Rico, We have drawn up the following statistics of the imports of sugars at the Clyde for the seven months past:—

	Vessels.	Tons.		Vessels.	Tons.
Cuba	76 ...	32,196	Mauritius ...	16 ...	7,731
Brazils	21 ...	5,244	Grenada	2 ...	530

Wesleyan Missions in China.—From the annual report just published, it appears that the Wesleyans have in China thirty missionary societies and 9,000 members. Yet there are nine provinces out of the eighteen which have a population of 180,000,000, without any Protestant missionary among them. In the Wesleyan China mission there are six principal stations or circuits, five chapels, eight other preaching places, twelve missionaries, twelve catechists, seventeen day-school teachers, 233 members, 164 on trial, 504 scholars, and 608 attendants on public worship. The Canadian Wesleyan Missionary Society maintains two missions and two missionaries to Yokohama. The Australian Conference also has a mission to the Chinese.

The China Trans-Pacific Steamship Company's steamer Vancouver, Captain T. Shaw, arrived at Yokohama, from Hong Kong, on the 16th inst., and sailed again for San Francisco on the 18th inst. The company's steamer Vasco de Gama, Captain J. F. Rice, arrived at Yokohama, from San Francisco, on the 13th inst., and left again on the 15th inst. for Hong Kong.

GERMANY.

Hamburg, August 18.

The draft of the new Bank Law, which is the production of the Privy Councillor, Dr. Otto Michaelis, a high functionary in the Chancellor's office, and reputed to be a great authority in matters of finance, has now been a fortnight before the public, and subjected to the ordeal of discussion in the press and the financial circles on 'Change. Public opinion is decidedly unfavourable to it, and it will have to be greatly modified before it can be accepted by the Parliament and become the law of the land. The object to be achieved is gradually to put such a pressure on the banks of issue as to induce them to forego many of their privileges without compensation. For this purpose they are not only to pay a tax of one per cent. on the total amount of their notes in circulation, but a further duty of five per cent. per annum on the nominal sum of notes they issue beyond the gold coin and bullion in their coffers. At the same time, the field of their circulation is proposed to be limited to the territory of the State whose Government has granted them their concession. These are, no doubt, hard conditions, and it is thought will be a death blow to the greater number of those banks of issue in the duodecimo Sovereign States, such as Gera, Buckeburg, Brunswick, Saxe-Meiningen, and Weimar. The proceeds of these taxes are to be paid to the Central Imperial Treasury, to be applied to general purposes, and are estimated to amount to 3,000,000 reichs marks per annum. It is not proposed by the present Bill to establish a central privileged institution like the Bank of England, and even the operations of the Bank of Prussia are to be restricted to the issue of an uncovered sum of forty-five million marks. Those banks that agree to the proposed conditions are to receive a guarantee of twelve years' further existence (till 1887), and their notes will be taken for full at their nominal amount in payment of taxes, postage stamps, and other sources of revenue at all the public offices in the Empire. At the expiration of the twelve years it is the present intention to amalgamate all the banks of issue then in existence into a central bank with one sole issue of notes, in the profits of which they will participate in proportion to the amount of their own capital, and under such other conditions as may then be suggested as desirable. The scheme was drawn up for submission in the first place to the Bundesrath, in order to receive the opinions and suggestions of the Governments, and it was not intended to publish it till these views were ascertained; and it was only by the indiscretion of a high official that the text of the draft and accompanying annexes got into the newspapers at so early a period. But the public ought to feel very much indebted for affording them an opportunity of having the draft of the Bill so soon within their reach, as it is a measure of great national importance, and requires some study to grasp the details and become master of the subject, whilst it will do no harm to let the Governments see what impression it makes on the public.

In the meantime great excitement and alarm exists among the shareholders and managers of the banks of issue, who much fear they will be swept away and lose their privileges. They therefore convened a meeting, which was held last week at Berlin, and after discussing the subject in all its bearings for eight hours, finished by appointing a committee—consisting of the Dessan Country Bank, the Bank of Frankfort, the Bank of South Germany (at Munich)—who are to meet at Frankfort next week and draw up a memorial containing proposals to be submitted to the Government after obtaining the approval of the other banks, the managers of which are to be convened to a general meeting at Berlin in the course of September.

To make the matter more complicated, it is ascertained that there are no less than thirty-three banks of issue in Germany, with various privileges as to amount of notes and duration of existence from their territorial Governments, granted long before the unification of the country and its consolidation as an Empire. They may be divided into four classes. The first consists of those whose concessions may be revoked at any time. The second class contains those whose privileges are revokable any time after giving two years' notice. In the third category are the banks whose concessions have to run for a fixed period, and expire at different dates. The fourth class contains those whose privileges are of unlimited duration. Hamburg is conspicuous by not being included in this list, as the Bank of Hamburg is based on the safer footing of metallic currency and bullion, and the private banks never for a moment thought of applying for a concession for issuing paper money, but content themselves with the profits arising from loans on security and at interest, discounting bills, and the other legitimate branches of banking business.

In my last letter I mentioned that the directors of the Hypotheken Bank of Hamburg recommended a dividend of 20½ thalers per share. At the ordinary annual general meeting held here last week Herr Th. Reincke, of Altona in the chair, the report of the directors having been previously printed and distributed, was taken as read; the dividend for the working year ending June 30 was confirmed. Messrs. Th. Reincke and Dr. Hubner, who go out by rotation, were re-elected as members of the Council of Administration, the election of Senator Ed. Johns as one of the directors was confirmed, and Alexander Schnars, Louis Levy, and B. Hahlo (the manager of the Vereins Bank) were re-elected as auditors for 1874.

The Anglo-Deutsche Bank has also published its balance-sheet for the first six months of the present year, but there is not only no dividend, but rather a dead loss of no less than 5,152,941 reichs marks, and as the original paid up share capital was fifteen million marks, it follows that just one-third of it is gone.

The Berlin Spenersche Zeitung contains the following:—"Mr. Adams, First Secretary of the British Embassy in this capital, and who performs the functions of Chargé d'Affaires during the absence of Lord Odo Russell, has just finished the second part of his History of Japan, and hopes to see it published in the course of October next. This gentleman, who resided several years in Japan, where he held the appointment of Secretary of Legation to the Embassy at Yedo, has the reputation of having a thorough knowledge of Japanese history, and the first volume of his work, which reaches down to 1864, has been received by the public with due recognition of its merits. The second part treats of the history of Japan from 1865 down to 1871."

A young Japanese student of the University of Berlin, by name Susum Sato, has just passed his examination, and taken his degree as Doctor of Medicine. He is said to be a son of the Court Physician of the Mikado, is twenty-six years of age, and has had some practical experience of his profession, having served through a campaign in his native country as assistant army surgeon. He selected dysentery in children as the subject of his dissertation, which he wrote in very good German, after which he made a speech in Latin, as usual, in which he asked the Dean of the Faculty—Professor Dr. Bardeleleben—permission to be admitted to the degree of Doctor of Medicine, to which the Dean replied, "Longum iter fecisti, factus es nostralis, primus ad gradum promotus; sed antea opus est ut tuo modo obstringeris temet ipsum jure jurando doctroalis." He then tendered to him the usual oath, omitting the words about the sanctum evangelium. The young Doctor, who passed his examination magna cumlaude, is now about to proceed to Vienna, and after visiting Italy, France and England will return to his native country.

By Imperial Patent of August 10 Herr D. T. Bauermann is appointed German Consul at Macassar, and Herr Wilhelm Ganslandt in the same capacity at Aden.

Arrivals from the Far East.—Messrs. H. Barckausen, German Consul at Rangoon; H. C. Bager, and J. Dieckmann, from Rangoon; W. Abraham, from Bombay; Max, from Peking; M. B. Feilmann, from Calcutta; A. H. Hahmann, from Japan; and C. Ahlers, from Bombay.

COMMERCIAL.

Some small parcels of the new crop of tea have come to hand, and of these 210/4 chests finest Souchong and 400/8 ditto superfine Moning Congou were sold at good prices. In other sorts no sales by importers. The deliveries of rice are satisfactory; some fresh cargoes have come to hand, but were previously sold for delivery on arrival. Cassia Lignea in better request, and commands a steady sale at 60 to 61 marks. Pepper rather neglected; Singapore quoted at 70 to 71 marks and Penang at 66 to 67. One hundred chests of Star Annis arrived here viâ England and sold immediately, as also 137 serons flava China root,—the latter for the interior.

HOLLAND.

Amsterdam, August 19.

The King will return on the 26th from his trip to Switzerland, and perhaps the issue of the Ministerial crisis will then be known. It seems that his Majesty made many objections on the list being presented to him by Mr. Heemskerk. After a troublesome correspondence, the Premier in spe went to Montreux to obtain an audience. Rumours say that the King does not at all incline to appoint Mr. Van der Does de Willebois as his Minister for the Foreign Department, and that he will maintain Mr. Gericke; at the same time he would not wish to trust the portfolio of the Colonial Department to Mr. W. van Goltstein, who is thought to be not thoroughly au fait in colonial matters to stand at the head of this important department. I need not add that general dissatisfaction prevails that the crisis lasts so long. Several papers, especially the local ones, became very angry that they had to wait so long for a solution, but the public shrugged their shoulders; they had not to pay one penny more or less for taxes, with or without a Ministry. It seems quite certain that the second Cabinet of Mr. Heemskerk will not be a da capo of 1866. On the contrary, I think, we may expect a Ministry that will work, and will give us a Reform Bill, perhaps more liberal than the Liberal Cabinets have laid before the members. The papers are in the meantime earnestly occupied in preparing a coalition between the moderate Liberals and the Conservatives, who will form a centrum, whilst the Radicals and Clericals will form the wings. I should be much surprised, however, if these plans were realised.

Complaints are made in our press about the fact that the Dutch residents in Germany must either leave that country or become Germans. It is more than probable that our Government will take reprisals by obliging the Germans, who reside in mass in our country, to become Dutchmen, or to leave Holland.

It creates some uneasiness and disappointment that so many invalids ask for their dismissal from the Asylum Bronbeek, not less than seventy-one having left that institution. They were cared for in a most liberal manner, and had at their disposal all that could be expected, but they prefer to live on their small pension where they wish. Our India soldiers, it seems, are too much cosmopolitan to content themselves with a comfortable home of this kind. Of the number that left the house fifteen engaged themselves for service at Atchin, and thirty-six accepted a social position. Amongst the visitors who visited the asylum yesterday was General Verspyck. Some rumours say that if a third expedition to Atchin be carried out this able officer will be appointed commander-in-chief.

You will remember that some time ago there was much ado about the new East India brigade. The Government had some difficulty in finding a town where it would be established, and when this was found nothing else was heard of the brigade. It looks as if the Government are of opinion that this institution is no more necessary.

I hear that endeavours are being made here to find the necessary capital to establish an East and West India Trading Company on a very large scale, to import and export for own account. It is said that already some millions are subscribed for. The plan, however, does not meet with the sympathy of the first hand traders.

Miss Kruseman (Mina), alias Stella Oristorio di Frama, the Dutch championess of women's rights and an authoress of some reputation, will next winter make her debut on the Dutch stage.

The steamer Tromp, which some months ago went ashore, has since been entirely reconstructed in England, from whence she will start to Java.

The Italian steamer Maddaloni, lately arrived from Batavia, has been sold for £50,000.

At Zaandam, in the province of North Holland, an exhibition is opened of antiquities.

At the Bourse it is still dull.

COMMERCIAL.

The markets for Colonial Produce were somewhat firmer, and the general opinion is that a revival in business will take place within some weeks. Important auctions and sales by private tenders are near at hand.

Coffee.—In waiting for the Trading Company's auction only a limited business took place, but prices remained firm. The sale, which will take place to-day, includes 100,021 bales. The valuation for good ordinary is 58c. to 58½c. The Government crop in Java was valued at 919,677 piculs, and the private crop about 100,000 piculs.

Tea.—The market is very firm, and prices are well maintained. There are, however, no first hands affairs to report. Business was limited to direct wants for consumption.

Raw Sugar.—The refiners and exporters only demand the superior qualities, so that it is still very difficult to find buyers for inferior sorts. Only about 1,000 mats changed hands at unaltered prices. The Trading Company advertised a September auction, which will take place on the 27th, when 89,700 mats Java will be offered.

Rice is dull; 500 bales Java were sold at f. 7⅞; whilst 1,142 bags Revius and 1,779 bags Indramayoe were sold at secret prices. Important cargoes arrived from Rangoon.

Spices met with much demand, and prices are consequently very firm. Some lots Nutmegs and Mace were sold at advanced prices. Cloves without transactions. Pepper unaltered. The quotation is for Nutmegs: No. 1, 205c. to 210c.; No. 2, 195c. to 200c.; 3, 170c. to 172c.; No. 4, 125c. to 130c. Mace: D, 235c. to 270c.; E, 225c. to 230c. Black Pepper: 37c. to 37½c. White: 70c. to 75c. Cloves: No. 1, 106c. to 107c.; No. 2, 105c. to 106c.; No. 3, 103c. to 104c.

Java Tobacco.—In waiting for the important parcels which will within some days be offered by private tenders there is but a very limited demand.

Cotton met with a good demand in consequence of the improvement of the prices in the principal import harbours.

Advices by telegram announce that the report of the Directors of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank announces that owing to losses incurred no dividend would be paid for the half-year ending June, and $225,000 had been written off the reserve fund, leaving $775,000.

A large quantity of Armstrong guns and gunpowder is being prepared for shipment to China, per Mongol.

THE NEW TREATY WITH ANNAM.

The new treaty with Annam has lately been approved by the French Assembly, and will shortly come into operation; it may be worth while, therefore, here briefly to notice its contents, calling attention to one or two provisions in it which appear to us defective, and summing up the net gains to commerce which may be anticipated from the concessions which have been obtained. Since 1862, the date when the last treaty was concluded between France and Tongquin, the French, it may be remembered, have added three more Annamese provinces to their own territories, and to obtain from the Court of Annam a recognition of their rights over these newly-acquired possessions was the chief object the French had in view in negotiating a fresh agreement. The war in 1870 seems to have delayed matters for several years, and the result of the French explorations into Northern Indo-China and Yunnan have in the meanwhile brought to light the feasibility of opening up a channel for trade down the river Song-koi. The bases of the commercial intercourse which it will in future be lawful to carry on through the Annamese dominions are settled in the present treaty, but a supplementary convention is shortly to follow which will contain detailed provisions for the more exact adjustment of mercantile relations. It appears that Annam has of late years been exposed to two dangers, which cripple all its resources. The first has arisen from the presence of bands of Chinese rebels, who pass and repass through one of the richest provinces so often as defeat obliges them to seek shelter on foreign ground, and who are not seldom pursued across the border by regular troops from China. The second difficulty is occasioned by pirates, whose fleets beset the coasts, and practically destroy all commerce. Under these circumstances France agrees to aid Annam by a present of five gunboats, fully armed, and to be employed in clearing out the pirate junks; she also supplies some artillery and rifles, and undertakes to lend her active assistance to the Court at Hué in the reorganisation of its army, in the re-establishment of order, and in the creation of a customs service. In return for these benefits the Annamese are to recognise the full rights of France to her dominions in lower Cochin-China, binding themselves to conclude no future political alliances with any other states. At the same time full permission is conceded to the Emperor to enter into any commercial treaty he may think fit, provided that he notifies the French of his intentions, and makes no agreement which is opposed to the engagements of the present convention. France has a just claim to the gratitude of all foreign powers because she has not reserved to herself alone the benefits obtained by this negotiation. What she has done is to have the new ports thrown open to navigation without distinction of nationality, and the waters of the Song-koi from Yunnan to the sea declared a common highway for every flag alike. Whatever is conceded by the treaty is conceded to all foreigners. No favours are to be enjoyed by France which may not be shared in by men of another race.

After the ratification of this treaty three ports will accordingly be thrown open to commerce. These will be Thin-nai, in the province of Binh-Dinh (to be opened twelve months hence), Ninh-Hai, in Hai-Dzuong province, and Hanoi, apparently the most populous city in the country. The navigation of the Song-koi is to be guaranteed from the sea right up to Yunnan. Other ports or streams will hereafter be opened to commerce if the number and importance of the relations established shall prove such a step to be advantageous. This last clause is a most valuable reservation. In each of these new Treaty Ports France is to appoint a Consul, with a body guard never exceeding 100 men, to secure his own safety, respect for his authority, and the orderly conduct of the foreigners under his charge. Some restrictions are, however, to be imposed on the privileges conceded to European traders; probably it has been found necessary, in consequence of the disturbed state of the interior, and the insecurity of human life among an unsettled, lawless, and hostile population, to hedge the intercourse between natives and foreigners with such precautionary limitations as will prevent quarrels and disputes from arising in places which the French officials would find it a hard matter effectually to control. Thus the right to navigate the Song-koi and to carry on a trade between Yunnan and the coast is conditional on abstaining from all attempts to do business with the people who dwell on the borders of that stream. No foreigner will be permitted to travel through the interior unless provided with a passport in due form. And any breach of the rule which forbids such a traveller to trade will be punished with the confiscation of his wares. Disputes between foreigners are to be amicably settled through the agency of the French Resident, but if a friendly compromise seems unattainable the Resident, with the aid of an Annamese official, is to decide the suit according to the justice of the case. Crimes and offences committed by Frenchmen, or other Europeans, on Annamese territory are to be investigated and judged by the competent tribunals at Saigon. We are not wholly satisfied with this stipulation. Natives at all times are very disinclined to travel far from their homes, and it is hard to expect an Annamese to journey all the way to the extreme south of Cochin-China to make his complaint and furnish the evidence required to ensure conviction. Only very grave cases indeed ought to be relegated to Saigon for investigation. Is an Annamese peasant, unacquainted with the language or the ways of foreigners, to be dragged with his witnesses several hundred miles in order to lay his complaint against some drunken sailor who perhaps has given him a knock on the head? In fact, the local French Resident ought to be empowered to adjudicate and punish all minor offences on the spot, perhaps we should even say let him deal with every crime, however heinous, for the more heinous the crime the more important it is that it should be punished, and that those who reside where the wrong was committed should know that the wrong-doer had been brought to justice. This point may well be illustrated by the position we ourselves occupy in Siam. There we have undertaken by treaty to punish all British subjects who may have been guilty of a breach of the law, yet we further direct the Consul to send all grave cases to be tried at Singapore. But as we cannot compel the Siamese plaintiff and his witnesses to attend at Singapore, too, convictions are rendered impossible, and our treaty obligations are thus left unfulfilled. Another unwise provision in the Treaty which we have now been discussing is to be found in the twenty-second Article, which begins by declaring that the Treaty is made "in perpetuity." No such agreement as this should be "made in perpetuity." The country has only just been thrown open, and a revision or modification of this agreement may very probably be found desirable at some future date, but a treaty made in perpetuity can never be revised. What ought more properly to have been stipulated is that the Treaty should continue in force for ten years, and after that term be subjected to a revision. The Roman Catholic religion is henceforth to be fully tolerated in Cochin-China. The guarantees which the Articles in the Treaty give that the missionaries and their flocks shall no longer be bullied or insulted are of the amplest possible kind. Their effects will not perhaps be visible at once, but as the priests are now to be allowed to teach, preach, and worship without let or hindrance of any kind, their influence upon the population through the schools which they conduct may, in a few years, work a complete social and moral revolution among the rising generation in Cochin-China. On the whole, not many things have been done of late by the European Powers in the East—certainly nothing by our own Government—which have given us such unmixed satisfaction as this new Treaty between France and Cochin-China.

THE STRAITS COURTS JURISDICTION ACT.

THIS is an Act to confer on the Courts of the Straits Settlements power to deal with offences, committed outside the Colonial boundaries, against the persons or property of those who dwell in territories which adjoin the colony, either by British subjects, or by "others" who may be resident in the colony at the time they committed the offence, or at least have resided there some six months previous to the occurrences complained of. "Others" is the term used in the preamble, but the principal clause of the Statute employs terms which fortunately are more precise. It says:—"Crimes . . . committed outside . . . the Straits "Settlements at any place in the Malayan Peninsula, "southward of the 9th degree of latitude (south that is of "Kra), or in any island within twenty miles from the "coast thereof," by a British subject, or by the subject of any of the Native States south of 9 deg. lat. N., who at the time he committed the crime, or within six months before its commission, was resident in the colony, may be tried and punished in one of the Criminal Courts of the Straits, just as if the crime had been committed within the colony. This power is modified by the provisions of the second and last clause, which authorises the apprehension of any such offender within the colony, and therefore inferentially not outside it.

The extent to which the British Legislature has been willing to augment the powers of the Straits authorities over crimes committed outside the narrow borders of their own colonies may be correctly gathered from the foregoing sketch; but it was the original intention of the ATTORNEY-GENERAL for the Straits, who framed the measure, to take very much greater powers. Under the Bill as first introduced, not merely British subjects, or those belonging by birth to certain neighbouring native States, were brought under the jurisdiction of the Courts; the proposal was that the Straits magistrates should have power to try subjects of Her MAJESTY and any other person neither a subject of Her MAJESTY nor of any civilised power. But as "civilised power" is a broad term, too vague for lawyers to define, and entirely dependent for its correct interpretation on the standard of comparison adopted, it was found indispensable to modify a phrase which might tend some day to disturb our friendly relations with China, Japan, or Siam; and which might cause a practical miscarriage of justice if out of two offenders the one who was an "uncivilised" native were to be punished, while his associate a "civilised" European got off scot free. There was no way out of this difficulty except by a change which has totally altered the scope and bearing of the Act.

No very high standard of intelligence is needed to comprehend the objects of the promoters of this measure. Both among the islands and on the mainland a state of lawlessness and insecurity prevails. There are really no Governments which can be called efficient except in sarcasm, and hence a great deal of crime and violence is committed by rascals who yet live in perfect security, and without disguise, under the reluctantly-conceded and undeserved protection of the British flag. It is the same old case which has been so often illustrated in Birmah. The wrong-doers live on British soil, and cross the border when they have a little robbery in view. The evil is glaring enough, but how are we to remedy it? Logically, by taking territorial possession of the districts where no effective rule exists, and where, as a consequence of our own local supremacy, the once respected native potentates have sunk into contempt among the remnant of their subjects. Illogically, by some such imperfect legislative machinery as the Act before us now provides. We shrink from annexation. And there are indeed reasons of the gravest character to restrain us from any such course; but Lord STANLEY was undoubtedly right when he said that by the present measure we have introduced a new and doubtful principle into the code of International—or rather Inter-Asiatical—law, and arrogated to our sovereign legal authority outside her own dominions, not based, as in extra-territoriality concessions, on voluntarily granted treaty rights. This is a new feature in our legislative policy, and hereafter perhaps experience may lead us to regret its inauguration. But until time has made us better acquainted with the practical working of such a plan, it would be premature to pass a very pronounced opinion about an expedient which is altogether untried. Among settled and civilised nations an extradition treaty has always been the resource which met the difficulties of the case, but extradition treaties are for obvious reasons in this instance inapplicable. We should be lothe, therefore, to pass censure upon the genuine efforts made to solve the difficulties of the question merely because those efforts are theoretically faulty and have never yet been tested.

But it is much more easy to point out real defects when we examine the details of the statute. Thus the alteration we alluded to above, though unavoidable, has spoilt the measure in one of its most important objects. If there are any ruffians who more than others use their cunning to defraud the native peasantry, or band together to commit violence and depredation, we must look for them among the lawless lower classes of the Chinese. Yet a Chinaman cannot now be touched by the Act, because he is neither a British subject nor the subject of any Southern Malayan State. Disputes will arise again as to what constitutes a "resident," and as to how such residence is technically to be proved. There will be acquittals, too, in consequence of the incompleteness of the evidence. Suppose a fisherman living on one of the islands charges a Singapore Chinaman with robbery; the plaintiff has no knowledge of our law, he comes without proper witnesses, the defendant gets off, and the poor sufferer returns, out of pocket, to tell his friends that after all it is not true that they can get redress by applying to Singapore. This is really a very important point, and one which seems not to have been raised in the discussion of the Bill. What is the use of taking jurisdiction to try crimes committed in places where the QUEEN'S writs and summonses do not run? The defendant cries out that the charge is not true. The fabrication of his enemies, and he even goes so far as to name certain witnesses who, could he but get them summoned, would establish his entire innocence. If we sent up nearly to Kra for the evidence, could we enforce attendance? We trow not. Who is to pay for the expense of bringing those witnesses down? and what jury would convict a man whose counsel would not fail to press that he was being condemned without means to clear himself? The answer is one that will not be evaded. Take the accused to the scene of his offence, and let him be tried by the Courts there. In other words, extradition.

One word more and we have done. By this statute we give very insufficient redress to British subjects whose persons or property may be injured in the territories referred to, because we punish only offenders of specified nationalities, and not even those unless they reside in the Straits Settlements and are caught there; yet we find ourselves able to do this little for our own people and at the same time go out of our way to protect those whom it is not our business to protect, the inhabitants, that is, of neighbouring States, who can follow offenders into their own local Courts if they choose, and whom there is really no earthly reason for taking unasking and annexing under our special patronage and shelter. Not to speak of the opportunity which we thus give for vexatious, malicious, and vindictive charges, to which natives are but too prone, and which in the case of a wrong alleged to be done outside British ground it is difficult to disprove, an accusation of this sort might put the victim to great loss and annoyance, even though it broke down in the end, and then the alien can return to his own territory, where no damages against him are obtainable in his own Courts. We have no wish to be hard upon a piece of legislation framed with the best possible intentions, but really it reminds us of a race-horse that has broken down. The animal is as handsome all over as any man could wish, but when we come to feel his forelegs, test his breathing, and run one's hand over his hocks, we find him too groggy on the pins, too short in the wind, and too strained in his muscles to be worth backing.

JAPAN AND CHINA ON FORMOSA.

THE intelligence which we recently published, to the effect that the Chinese had come to an agreement with the Japanese for their withdrawal from Formosa on condition that all expenses incurred in connection with the Expedition were paid by the Chinese Government, would appear, as far as we can judge, to be substantially correct; and we doubt not that the Japanese are very glad to escape from their peculiarly awkward position on such terms. Some tribes of aborigines had previously given in their submission, and, we are informed, had "accepted the flag" of Japan. Supposing that the intelligence we refer to should prove to be, in the main, correct, the Japanese are to be congratulated on this solution of what promised to be a particularly disagreeable difficulty, and from which it was not very obvious how they could possibly retreat without serious humiliation and loss of national prestige. We give the Japanese all credit for the result they have attained—a result which gives them the superiority, and places them on a footing of equality with Western nations, for, unless we have been specially bent on territorial aggrandisement, this has been the end of all our wars. In the case of Formosa the Japanese would not have gained much by retaining possession of a few square miles of hilly ground, subject to the inevitable risk of being constantly harassed from the neighbouring mainland of China; while now to evacuate the island on the stipulation that the Chinese bear all the expenses incurred by the despatch of the expeditionary force, must be looked upon as a satisfactory conclusion to what was at one time a doubtful enterprise, the more so as the Japanese have effected the great objects which they had in view, viz., the punishment of the inhuman and inhospitable savages on the sea-board of Formosa, and the indulgence of the warlike ardour of their own soldiers, which they were unable otherwise to repress. Judged by the canons of international law, the Japanese, as we have before pointed out, did wrong at the outset in invading a portion of the Chinese Empire without a formal declaration of war, but having done so and having practically got the upper hand, through the cowardice and dilatoriness of the Chinese Government, it is to their credit that they have been willing to withdraw their forces on such moderate terms as those which we have indicated. It is to be hoped that the Chinese, on their part, will profit by the lesson which they have received, and that since they have publicly and explicitly laid claim to the sovereignty of the whole island of Formosa, they will not be forgetful of the grave obligations which, by this assertion of their rights, they have voluntarily undertaken in the face of the world at large; otherwise the day will assuredly come when they will have to confront a condition of things from which it will be in vain for them to hope to escape at so small a pecuniary sacrifice as on the present occasion.

We had hardly penned the foregoing remarks when the Hong Kong telegram of August 18th, to be found in another column, came to hand. Although the intelligence contained in this telegram somewhat alters the complexion of affairs, we think we may fairly assume that what is therein styled an ultimatum, is simply a formal embodiment of the terms we have before indicated, and that the matter will end there.

Monetary and Commercial.

About 1,000 chests of damaged Tea, ex Gordon Castle (str.), have been sold at Lisbon at about 2d. per pound, buyers paying Custom House charges and warehouse expenses.

Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on the 19th inst. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta £453,200; Bombay, £45,800; and Madras, £1,000. Tenders on all presidencies at 1s. 10d. will receive about 10½ per cent.; above in full. These figures show rather an increased demand for means of remittance to the East. On the last occasion when the bills were sold tenders at 1s. 9¾d. received 10 per cent.

The report of the Submarine Telegraph Company, which was submitted to the meeting on the 18th inst., states that the receipts for the half-year amount to £53,643, and recommends the payment of a dividend at the rate of 15½ per cent. per annum, leaving £224 to be carried forward. It is mentioned that the general stagnation of trade, especially on the Continent, has doubtless affected the company's revenue for the last six months, but notwithstanding this disadvantageous circumstance, and the division of certain profits with the Post-office, the total receipts will compare favourably with those of any corresponding half-year, with the exception of 1873, when they were unusually large.

At an adjourned meeting of the shareholders of the Thetis Marine Insurance Company (Limited), held on the 19th inst., it was resolved, after a full statement of the affairs of the company had been explained and discussed, that the business be continued, and that the directors be authorised to issue debentures not exceeding £50,000, for half of which applications have been received.

The directors of the Merchant Banking Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend of £1 per share, being at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, the same as at the corresponding date of last year.

The Anglo-Indian Spinning and Manufacturing Company has been introduced, with a capital of £300,000, in 29,985 ordinary shares of £10 each, and 150 fully paid up Founders' shares of £1 each. The company is formed for the purpose of erecting and working in India cotton mills for spinning and weaving, and it is intended to erect the first mill in Bombay.

The Eastern Extension Australasia and China Telegraph Company's cable between Singapore and Batavia was interrupted near Batavia; the repairing ship Agnes effected the repairs, and the cable is now working.

Since the 14th inst. no new feature has been developed in the Manchester Market; a quiet and inanimate tone has prevailed, without, however, causing producers to exhibit any signs of depression, prices being fairly steady, and the transactions have principally passed at the rates current last week.

Bar Silver has been in good enquiry during the last few days, chiefly for Russia, and, in the absence of supplies, the price has advanced to 58d. per oz. standard. There have been no transactions of importance in Mexican Dollars, but owing to the rise in Bar Silver any dollars on sale would probably realise a somewhat better rate.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

Prolonged dulness has been the chief feature in the Produce Markets, and several articles of importance have undergone a considerable reduction in value, among which may be enumerated Coffee, Pepper, Cloves, and Cassia. For Sugar, however, an active demand has prevailed, and extensive sales have been effected at an advance of 6d. per cwt. The better qualities of new season's Teas have been in good demand, but all other kinds are lower.

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says:—The arrival of steamers during the past week with large cargoes has kept our market fully supplied with new samples, and although the trade have bought to a fair extent and exporters rather more freely than usual of late, a large proportion of the tea remains unsold, whilst in nearly every case there has been some concession in prices, though not more than could have been expected in the face of such large quantities offering. In all about 20,160 packages have been printed for sale without reserve, a considerable quantity, consisting of new Teas from recent arrivals, which found buyers at the decline above quoted. The deliveries for the week as compared with last year are as follows:—

Duty paid	2,160,000 ...	1,908,000
Coastwise	723,000 ...	634,000
Exports	835,000 ...	1,010,000
	3,718,000 ...	3,552,000

Congous.—Red-leaf kinds: Siftings and broken-leaf, of new import, have been sold from 8d. per lb. to 1s. 1d. per lb., the latter with exceptionally good quality. Fair to good Kaisows from 1s. 2d. to 1s. 6d. have been difficult of sale at a decline of 1d. per lb.; fine also from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 11d. show easier rates, with only a limited enquiry; finest from 2s. to 2s. 5d. are firmly held, being in moderate supply. Pak Lin kinds have been saleable for the good kinds under 1s. 11d. per lb. and really fine sorts. Black-leaf kinds: Common to fair, of new import, have sold from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 3d. per lb., being ½d. to 1d. per lb. lower: fair to good medium from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. per lb. also show ½d. per lb. decline; fine from 1s. 7d. to 1s. 10d. meet with only a moderate demand at rather lower prices; finest from 1s. 11d. to 2s. 3d. have been firm, whilst superior chops continue saleable for export at extreme prices. New-make Congous: Common to fair have sold from 1s. to 1s. 2d. per lb.; good from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 5d. per lb., being about previous rates. Souchongs: Only a few sales have been made without material change in prices. Oolongs have been difficult of sale at a reduction of fully 2d. per lb.—Scented Teas: Canton Capers have been sold to a fair extent at rather better prices. Orange Pekoes show no material alteration in price, the demand being quiet. Foochow Capers continue to command full prices. Orange Pekoes also have been in fair request, last week's prices being fairly maintained.—Green Teas: There has been rather more offered for sale, and consequently rather more business doing. The finer kinds from recent arrivals have sold fairly well, but the common to medium kinds have been dull of sale at comparatively low rates. At public sale, old season's Teas are only saleable at low prices.

SILK.

Public sales, chiefly "without reserve," are announced for the 26th to 28th instant, and a full quantity will be offered, with a fair probability of business resulting from the assembling together of buyers. Meantime the market is without change, and transactions are of the most limited nature pending the approaching sales. Deliveries, 1st to 19th inclusive:—China, 1,684 bales; Canton, 236 bales; Japan, 374 bales; total, 2,294 bales.

COFFEE.

A larger supply of Plantation Ceylon has been offered by auction, and the demand having gradually fallen off a dull tone has prevailed, and prices have declined nearly 5s. per cwt., at which there has been more demand, and firmer rates have been paid; middling coloury closes at 115s. 6d. to 118s., Native Ceylon has been offered freely, and of 4,686 bags in auction about 3,100 bags sold, prices after slight fluctuations closing 2s. 6d. lower, at 90s. 6d. to 91s. for good ordinary. The closing quotations are as follow:—Plantation triage 91s. to 100s., ordinary 105s. 6d., small 107s. to 112s. 6d., low middling grey 113s. to 115s., middling 115s. 6d. to 118s., good middling to fine middling bold 118s. 6d. to 122s., pea-berry 127s. to 131s. 6d., Native small 80s. to 85s., good ordinary to fine ordinary 90s. 6d. to 92s. 6d., good to fine bold 96s. to 99s., pea-berry 98s. 6d. to 105s.

The Dutch Trading Company's August public sale of 100,021 bags Java, held on the 19th inst. at Rotterdam, began better than was expected and prices were barely 1c. below the valuations, but prices gradually gave way as the sale proceeded, and at the close they were 2c. below valuations. Good ordinary Java sold in the beginning at 57c. to 57½c., but closed at 56c. to 56½c., against 59c. to 59½c., at the July sale. The result of the sale is considered favourable, but it has given little support to this market.

SUGAR.

The indications of an improvement in this market have been fully borne out, the demand having been upon a greatly extended scale, giving an active tone to the market, and an upward movement to prices. Additional firmness has been derived from the satisfactory statistical position, the deliveries being not only much in excess of the landings, but larger than those of the previous year; and the surplus stock, which had been previously reduced from 90,000 tons in April to 26,000 tons a fortnight ago, has now almost disappeared.

Manila and other brown Eastern kinds have been in better demand, and prices are 3d. higher for low, and 6d. for good; low China has been sold in large quantities at 15s. 6d.; for arrival unclayed Zebu has been sold at 16s. 6d., and 17s. is obtainable for Ilo Ilo. Date Penang has continued in demand, and slightly higher prices have been paid. The sales include 100 tons for arrival at 16s. 3d., and on the spot 3,500 bags soft brown at 19s. 3d. to 19s. 6d., and 2,930 baskets 1,400 bags date sort at 16s. to 16s. 6d. per cwt.

Cutch.—The market has been quiet at steady rates. In auction, of 1,000 boxes fine Pegue of fresh import 700 boxes sold at 22s. 9d. to 23s. (the latter for BB Flag). Privately 200 boxes fine Pegue (in papers) have been sold at 24s.
